Recent Publications by Members of the Faculty.

During the past summer several members of our faculty have been represented in various magazines and journals and in the belief that the College in general would be glad to be more fully acquainted with these publications the following list has been prepared.

In the September Century, Miss Katharine Lee Bates, of the class of '89, published "What is the Spirit?" a brief lyric with a certain poignant suggestiveness in its fine lines that seldom appears in magazine poetry. A sonnet by Miss Bates, in memory of Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick, appeared in the Boston Evening Transcript shortly after Mrs. Gulick's death, in September.

"The Lover of Trees in Italy," by Miss Jewett, was published in Scribner's Magazine for June. This article, beautifully illustrated with photographs taken by Miss Jewett during her last visit to Italy, is an eminently poetic appreciation of Italian landscapes and one which gives the reader a very vivid picture.

Miss Sherwood's "The Princess and the Mirobe" appeared in the fiction number of Scribner's Magazine issued in August. This is the second in a short series of Princess stories. In the August number of the Atlantic Monthly, Miss She-wood's novelette, "Daphne." The story, with its intensely real Italian setting, is told in a style of rare and impressive beauty that has already attracted wide attention. "Daphne" will be published in book form by Houghton & Mifflin during October.

Verses by Miss Peabody, who has been for two years instructor in English literature, appeared in the August and in the October Harper, and in the October Scribner. A new volume of poems by Miss Peabody, "The Singing Leaves," is just announced by Houghton & Mifflin.

The educational number of the Chromatist contained an illustrated article by Miss Shaekford, discussing "The Eastern Colleges for Women."

Miss Florence Jackson contributed to the Journal of the American Chemical Society "The Delicacy of Tests Employed for the Detection of Metals," a study embodying the results of certain experiments performed in our chemistry laboratory.

"The Industrial History of the United States," by Miss Conant, is promised by the Macmillan Company, as is also Miss Lockwood's "Lexicon to the Poetical Works of John Milton." Wellesley may claim some share in Professor George Herbert Palmer's new volume, "The Nature of Goodness," published by Houghton & Mifflin, since he lectured on this subject at Wellesley last year. Miss Scudder, who has returned to Wellesley after an absence of two years, is the author of "A Listener in Babel," soon to be published by Houghton & Mifflin.

In the near future Miss Bowen's translation of "Beovulf" is to appear in the "Canterbury Classics."

Mr. Durant's Christianity was essentially cheerful. He believed that a life of trust in harmony with God and man was entirely consistent with a love for the beauty which God created and which it is natural for man to enjoy. It was his desire to make Wellesley College as beautiful as possible, both without and within, while it was his dearest wish that all the influences of the place might be favorable to the growth of the inner and higher beauties of mind and soul.

While Mr. Durant was laying out the college grounds, beautifying and preparing them for his beneficent purpose, his thoughts must have often gone forward, hopefully and prayerfully, to these years, and to the years still in the future, full of great possibility and promise for Wellesley women; and surely the fortunate girls who come here to spend a year or two years or four years "neath the oaks" which he planted will ever year remember with reverence the name that is dear to all who love Wellesley with the truest understanding of what Wellesley means.

There are many things about Wellesley which go to increase that great debt which we all owe to the founder of our college; and it is impossible to realize that Mr. Durant was his own landscape gardener without feeling at the same time a new thrill of appreciation and gratitude for these oaks and elms and walnuts and beeches that have so largely helped to make Wellesley the College Beautiful. It was on the third of October that Mr. Durant died; and it is especially fitting that at this bright season of the year we commemorate the life of noble service and consecration of one who especially loved bright and beautiful things.

COLLEGE NOTES.

Professor Willcox, who is away on her Sabbatical Year, spent the latter part of June and the month of July with a party of Zoologists in Bermuda. The main object of the trip was to decide upon the advisability of locating a marine observatory there, similar to that at Naples. The Zoologists were enthusiastic in their approval of the place as a location for such an observatory. Dr. Willcox is at present engaged in some original work on limpets.

A part of the map of the College has been gutted out this year. The map is based on the last United States Survey, and gives the location of all the village houses as well as a complete plan of the entire campus. The map is small and sells for five cents. These maps can be obtained at the College Book Store.

Miss Mary Applewhite Bacon, whose stories of Georgia life have attracted so much attention, is visiting her cousin, Miss Katherine Lee Bates. Miss Bacon will spend the winter in the north giving a series of readings and lectures on the child labor conditions in Georgia.

The Village students are enthusiastic over Mr. Perkins since he has had the sidewalk put down by the chapel road.

All of us who heard Mr. MacDougall’s lecture, on Thursday afternoon, enjoyed a great treat. His topic was “The Principle of Unity in Music,” and his manner was that this unity is developed by Rythm, Melody, Harmony, or a combination of these. Mr. MacDougall illustrated this theme fully by playing first parts of familiar pieces and lastly by a magnificent rendering of “The New World Symphony,” by Dvorak.

Miss Mary B. Keen, formerly of 1901, was married on September 18th to Mr. Marshall of Delaware, Ohio. Mr. Marshall has the chair of Economics at Wesleyan University.

Miss Grace Hainds, formerly of 1904, spent Sunday at the College.

Miss Hazel French, formerly of the class of 1895, has announced her engagement to Mr. Charles Robertson.

Miss Hutsinpillar has changed her office hours. They are now on Tuesday from 10.30 to 12.30 and on Friday from 12.30 to 11.45.

Miss Hutsinpillar has given up her office hours on Thursday and Saturday.

The Alliance Francaise held a reception for its new members in the Norumbega parlors, Friday afternoon, October the ninth.

The Colorado Club entertained its members at a bowling party at the Boys’ Club, Friday evening, October the ninth.

On Wednesday afternoon, October the fourteenth, Miss Waite held a small reception for Miss Lord and Miss Taylor at Wood Cottage.

Three hundred and five Freshmen have elected as follows: German 116, French 139, Latin 73, Zoology 44, Botany 36, English Literature 32, English 31, Greek 29, Chemistry 35, Physics 19, History 15, Art 15.

The recent election for the officer of the College Settlement Association resulted as follows: President, E. Sophie Brown; Vice Presidents, Miss Burch, Eleanor F. Monroe; 1904, Mary Gillespie, 1905, Ray Tyler, 1906, Esther Abercrumby, 1907, Secretary and Treasurer, Faith B. Sturtevant; Librarian, Annie V. Luff.

The question in regard to the need of a general secretary in the Christian Association is now being agitated. The Association is so well organized, and the girls, who have charge of the different departments, carry on their work so well, that some of the members think that a general secretary is not necessary. But it is not for doing the work, which we can do ourselves, that we want such an officer in the Association. Though she would be of inestimable value in advising and helping the girls in all branches of their work, her greatest service would be in connection with the students who live in the Village. On account of the crowded condition of the College dormitories, her home would of necessity be in the Village among the new students. Here she could do that work which is almost impossible for the Christian Association to do without her.

We can form Bible and Mission classes. We can ask the girls to join the Association and cordially invite them to Thursday evening services, but we know that it is very difficult for them to come. It is most difficult if even the most interested are present many times during the year, and since they cannot come to the Christian Association, we need a general secretary to take the Christian Association to them, to teach them the different branches of the work which is being carried on, and to show them in what way they can be of service. We need her to broaden the field of every branch of our work, so that it can be carried on in all who are now interested, but most of all, we need her to interest those who are now more or less indifferent.

Ann Stoddard, 1905.

The elevator question again? Yes, for so long as there is only one elevator in College Hall, so long as there are class rooms on the fourth and fifth floors, will the question of elevator precedence and etiquette be constantly under discussion.

The Freshmen—Doubtless there is not one of you who has not been told that the Faculty and Seniors and upper class girls have the right of way in the elevator. And yet, despite frequent and repeated tellings, some of you forget, and dash in, ahead not only of Seniors, but even of members of the Faculty. The one plausible excuse that may be offered is, perhaps, that one can not always be sure whether the individual in question is a real Senior or no, and all of you are not, as yet, sufficiently acquainted with the Faculty. But isn't it always the best plan to err on the side of prudence—to stand back for a girl who may prove to be only a Sophomore, on the chance that she may be a Senior without the insignia of her rank?

And now this to the Seniors —A group of girls is waiting for the elevator; just after chapel, let us suppose. The Freshmen, anxious to master the elevator etiquette of Wellesley, stand back respectfully, and allow the Faculty and Seniors to go in before them. And they themselves are shut out entirely. However, there are four flights of stairs between them and the zoology laboratories, and their vitality must be saved for athletics, and so—they wait. But alas for all their hopes! When the prize is within reach of at least one, perhaps two, steps, a group of Seniors come from the post office, and by the mere virtue of their caps and gowns, gains an entrance, and again they are shut out. But, frankly, does this condition of affairs seem wholly just and right? That girls who haven't been waiting, but who happen along just then, should ride up, just because they're Seniors, while girls who have been waiting must be excluded, just because they're Freshmen? Would it not be fairer, to all concerned, to have an "overflow meeting," a second edition for each trip fifth-floor-ward, and let those go in first who just missed going before?

This solution of the elevator problem has, so far as I know, never been proposed. Is it not worth at least a trial, and will you not give it your support, to prove its success—or failure?

G. C. H.

III.

The first day that we went to chapel as Juniors, there was a strange new feeling in our upper class bosoms as we took our places in the body of the chapel and realized that one more step would take us into the cap and gown seats. That first day we felt the importance and grandeur of entering by the middle door and of sauntering up the middle aisle to our places and who could have persuaded us to give up the joy of that march from chapel with its interesting question of who would be our partner? That was the first time in which it has become an old phase and visions of crammed mail-boxes and enticing nine o'clocks, draw us into a hurried departure by the side aisles, only to wait in the vestibule for the column of girls to pass by. This method of procedure is hardly fair to the Sophomores and Freshmen for to them belong the side aisles and a precipitate flight into their lawful territory is certainly an intrusion.

We are not the privilege of walking out of the middle door in all our glory as Juniors? We all love 1905, then let us add to her fame by standing strong and long (if need be) instead of sneaking off in a medley of Sophomores, Freshmen and Specials.

THE BARNSWALLIES’ PLAY.

As rain was the order of the weather program for Saturday, rain proceeded to fall in the afternoon and continued to fall through the evening, regardless of the fact that Saturday night was the occasion of the first regular Barn Swallow entertainment and everybody wished to come, and that moreover it was to be a college play and everyone wanted to see it. Doubtless the rain did keep away many people who wished to be present, but it certainly did not keep away those who intended to come and all the available space in the rear of the Barn was utilized for the mudblew, the rain, and the adventurists. By last count, seven of the floor in the front of the Barn and all the chairs were filled by an enthusiastic audience and “standing-room only” was the fate of the late-comers. Before the play and between the acts, the various college and class songs were sung and cheers given for the important persons of the occasion, the Freshmen thus becoming instructed in the way that they should go. As was very fitting for the first Barn Swallow entertainment it was a thoroughly Wellesley occasion throughout, a Wellesley audience and a Wellesley girl’s play, and Miss Hart in her welcome to the Barn Swallows announced that as far as possible during the year, programs would be college in spirit and the play given, the work of the girls.

The play for Saturday evening, entitled “Copy” was written by Miss Helen Manatt of the class of 1905. This is the second original play which has been presented at “the Barn”. We all remember Miss More’s play last spring. The two plays, utterly unlike in setting and treatment, simply show the diversity of talent which may be found in the College. “Copy” proved to be a decidedly bright and entertaining little play, cleverly worked up in many points, and if we may judge of success by applause, the play was certainly a success. The various parts were well taken by the different girls and all the characters deserve commendation. Particular praise should be given to Miss Daniels, who did exceedingly well as George Sanderson, the author, and Miss McCormick, who acted a rather difficult part well. Of the minor characters, Miss Fox was excellent as Mrs. Norcross and Miss Steene, as Tom Norcross, was a general favorite. The different scenes were well played, the “literary-tea” with the literary enthusiasts and “birds” being especially attractive.

The cast for the play was as follows:

George Sanderson, an aesthetic author ……… Helen Daniels
Lorna Sanderson, his wife, ex-audience … Florence McCormick
Mrs. Norcross, mother to Lorna, a bustling New Englander … Edith Fox
Father Norcross, father to Lorna, a harmless old gentleman … Dr. Tom Norcross, brother to Lorna ……… Jessie Stone
Mrs. Tom Norcross, Tom’s wife, a model housekeeper ……… Olive Chapman
Mrs. Jones ……… Elizabeth Maretz
Literary Woman ……… Louise Adams

CONFESSIONS OF A SOPHOMORE.

It came to pass long years ago, in the forgotten days when we, too, consulted maps, (vide Book store, five cents).

I was rushing down the main corridor in College Hall, the objective point being the elevator. I had just a minute and a half to get to L. R. 4, and as the elevator was at hand, I was making for it at a rapid pace, when I espied a kindly looking gentleman also approaching in haste. "Ah," said I to myself, "one of the gentleman professors I have heard rumors of." And then the wild thought seized me "Is it proper to let him enter first?"

Full well had I been instructed in etiquette scholarly. Full well I knew the awful reverence due to Senior and Faculty. But here was a clash of two schools of etiquette, which baffled verdant solution. In mad haste I weighed the pros and cons. Meanwhile we were both rapidly nearing the elevator. "Well," said I to myself, "its best to err on the right side;" and as this conclusion and the door had been reached simultaneously, I smiled sweetly, "bowed slightly, and stood aside to let the gentleman pass. But he, too, stood bowing and smiling on his side the door, and seeing my mistake, I started to enter. But oh, horrible dictum! He caught my meaning at the self-same moment and also made to enter. A collision ensued, a rebound on the part of both, and a repetition of the smiles and bow, much to the amusement of the patient (?) waiting maid. Again we yielded simultaneously to the other's courtesy and again the collision, the rebound, the smile, the bow. The situation became unbearable. I rushed blindly for the stairs and arrived in Bible four minutes late.

The next day I discovered that my gentleman professor was Mr. Ellis.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE RECIPES.

SENIOR RECEPTION DRINK.—In a large faculty parlor place a dozen Seniors. Stir in gradually a few more Seniors and after carefully preparing, sprinkle in a few Freshmen. Mix thoroughly and pour on a few cups of cocoa and coffee. Flavor to taste with one joke and a pinch of standard remarks. If done with care this makes a very successful drink.

NOTICE.

R. W. P., in the Free Press for October 14th bemoans the lack of suitable study accommodations in College Hall for the class of 1897. We have one room in Music Hall, number 24, on the sec¬ond floor, set apart for study, and all students, whether in the Music Department or not, are cordially invited to use it. This is not a large contribution to the general welfare, but it is gladly offered.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

It is with great pleasure that the College looks forward to the course of readings offered by the Elocution Department. These readings will be given by the very best platform artists that the country can produce. The course will open Monday evening, October 15, the twenty-sixth, with Miss Beatrice Herford. Miss Herford, sister of Oliver Herford, the well-known artist, is essentially a humorist. Her readings consist of original monologues, in which she is so clever that though only one character speaks presupposed conversations between other characters are plainly intelligible to the audience. "Miss Herford pins up imaginary veils, pulls on imaginary hats, takes off imaginary coats, and with the aid of a single chair is an inquisitive child in the street car, or 'An American Shop Girl,' alternately waiting on her customer and chattering to her mates." Miss Herford's monologues all have to do with the everyday scenes of life and are full of everyday humor. She has met with great success both in this country and in Europe.

In the readings of Mrs. E. Charlton Black the College will have a contrast to the humorous monologues of Miss Herford. Mrs. Black does not seek to amuse. Her aim is to make great literature known and loved. This she does by the most sympathetic and appreciative interpretation of the works of the great masters. Her selections are from the great works of our tongue. "The Idylls of the King," "Surtor Resarum," "Andrea del Sarto," etc. The success of Mrs. Charlton Black in Canada, in the United States and in Europe is incalculable. She has made the world feel that platform reading is an art and that there are great days in store for the elocutionist. Mrs. Black is a Scotchwoman by birth and is especially charming in readings from the Scotch dialect. Her program at Wellesley will contain one or two Scotch selections.

Of Mr. Leander Powers, whose name appears as the third artist on the circular issued by the Elocution Department, there is little need to say anything. We all know him and we have all laughed and marvelled at his inimitable presentation of "The Tragedy of the Shrew" and "Monacleur Beaureanc." We cannot but be glad that he is coming again.

Undoubtedly a rare opportunity is offered us in this course of readings. Tickets will be on sale at the College Book Store, on and after Saturday, October the seventeenth. Tickets for the course are one dollar; single tickets forty cents. The number of tickets is limited.
