SILVER BAY.

For those who are deciding whether to go to Silver Bay this summer or not, the following retrospect of last summer's convention may be of interest.

Only two of us started out from Wellesley on the Friday morning train for Albany, for most of the Silver Bay pilgrims were already there. Other late comers gradually collected as the morning wore on, so that by the time we had passed through the beautiful Berkshires and drew into Albany at noon, there was a goodly number of us. We had just time for sandwiches and coffee before we were off again on our way to Lake George. Somehow we all managed to get acquainted without much difficulty. For one of the Smith girls was sure that she had met one of our number last year, and the Holyoke girls thought it very probable that one of them might happen to know one of us, and if they were mistaken, why it was only anticipating matters a bit, so what was the difference? Long before Lake George came in view, we had all found mutual friends or mutual ideas, or at least a mutual purpose in coming to Silver Bay, and were all good friends, for all college girls have much in common.

The last few miles of the way we hugged around the windows, each trying to get a first view of the lake. The country grew more and more hilly; great rocks and thick pine groves grew more frequent, and then the train swept around a final curve and there was Lake George.

The twenty-five mile ride up the lake was pure joy. The sun was well toward the west when we boarded the big lake steamer, and we watched it sink lower and lower over the hills as we cut through the green water, leaving mile after mile behind us. Past hotels, fine cottages and rustic camps we went. At times the narrow lake closed in so that there seemed to be no outlet, but always a hidden channel opened up. The sunlight on the mountains grew gold, the shadows of the tall pines and birches lengthened, and then we passed behind an island and there was only the glow in the sky left and the waters were no longer blue and green, but dark gray. At dusk, around the last point we swept and the first stars shone out as we turned into Silver Bay.

They were all at the pier to meet us, hundreds of them, all smiling and welcoming and cheering and singing. Familiar faces appeared, our suit cases were seized, and we hurried up to the hotel to supper.

"We are to have Overlook with Smith!"

everyone was joyously calling, and when we saw it we were joyful too. It was a very long, very low log building high on the hillside, looking right over the hotel roof to the big, quiet mountains across the lake. The first meeting came that night, and, though every one who was tired stayed at home, the big hall was crowded and the cottage showed few lights. How every one rang! And few sounded so that great voice of the convention.

We all strolled back arm in arm to Overlook, and just before we went to bed we sat in a circle on the lawn and talked and talked and talked. Perhaps it was the calm of the cool, sweet air and the moonlight across the lake; perhaps it was the sheer strength of the mountains all around us, or perhaps it was just the atmosphere of Silver Bay that did it, but somehow everything seemed simple and straightforward that night. It seemed natural to be telling our problems over together, and a new and lasting comradeship came into being as we talked. We left Silver Bay after ten of those bedtime talks out under the stars, with a feeling that we had grown stronger and our problems weaker. And it is a feeling that does not go, but comes again all through the year at the memory of that was the atmosphere which we carried away with us, the calm, the quiet strength and clear-seeing which tries and fails and tries again.

I wish I could tell in detail about the meetings. The last word of advice given to us before we left was, "Try to go to all the meetings." But what could one leave out? There were fewer meetings than usual last summer. They came only in the morning and evening. In the afternoons we read and talked and studied, had interviews with the leader and played. In short we did just what we liked, and the meetings were above all things practical. The normal school mission study classes came first. In these we took a sample country and learned different methods of teaching mission study classes, incidentally gathering information about the country. Then came the alumni and student meetings. We learned the different schemes of different colleges for accomplishing the work of the different Christian Association Committees, taking one or two committees a day. There were meetings too interesting to think of omitting. Then we had a choice of various Bible study classes. The amount of ground covered in ten days' time in each course was wonderful, but particularly so in the Bible classes. We ended the course (Concluded on Page 2.)

with a comprehensive view of the whole subject given in so enthusiastic a way that we could not resist the determination to do daily Bible study by ourselves. The last meeting of the morning was a missionary meeting. These dealt with home as well as foreign missions. We heard about the George Junior Republic and the various movements in behalf of our working girls and of many other interesting organizations of our own land.

After lunch we went off on long exploring expeditions in row-boats. We went swimming, we played tennis and climbed the mountains. In the evening we sang college songs on the pier in the twilight until the evening meetings began.

We all know the inspiration of listening to Mr. Mott and Mr. Speer, for we have often listened to them here at college. We shall always remember, too, how happy we were in having Miss Hazard with us at Silver Bay over Sunday. The real joys of Silver Bay, the lasting inspiration that we found there, the deeper knowledge of ourselves and our fellows, and above all the peace and strength of simple, happy living, can never get to be old stories to us, but must always remain fresh and true and lasting, while we remember Silver Bay.

READING FOR OLD SOLDIERS.

I quote the following passages from a letter written on the 1st of March, of this year, by the Hon. W. P. Brownlow, Manager of soldier Homes at Johnson City. Washington County, Tennessee:

"Congress has, at various times, appropriated an aggregate of $7,000,000 for the construction of a National Soldiers Home at Johnson City. The work has been under construction for three years and is now complete. The management began the admission of members about a year ago and to-day there are 1,400 members. To-day there are 1,400 members. It is estimated that when full, will contain a population of 4,500 disabled volunteer soldiers of the United States, who by reason of disease and age are unable to earn a living by manual labor.

"Congress does not provide either books or money for these homes, nine of which now exist in the United States; but the Libraries have been filled by books donated by patriotic citizens throughout the country. Mr. Andrew Carnegie gave the sum of $50,000 to construct a library building at this Home. The library building is now complete and without books, and has ample room for 10,000 volumes.

"Colonel Brownlow asks for the donation of a few books, saying that he can use all kinds. "As the membership of the Home consists of men who are graduates of the best colleges of the country as well as those who can scarcely read. It is evident, however, that paper-bound books would not be appropriate, nor any of those shabby covers and flimsy contents. histories, biographies, poems, novels, collections of short stories, books of science, popular or unpopular, essays, books of spiritual significance,—all that would be acceptable.

"Arrangements have been made for sending on our package free of express charge. Any book left before the Easter vacation at the Long, Williams & Olcott Hall, Col. Brownlow will forward books just within the door stands eager to receive them,—will be carefully packed and forwarded.

"Remembering how literally the College responded to a similar appeal made, two years ago, for a colony of consumptives, it is safe to express thanks in advance, but, by the grace of the College News editors, I hope to renew the thanks in a report of progress later on.

Katharine Lee Bates.

A NOTABLE ALUMNA.

Miss Anna Poole Webb of the class of 1882 has achieved more than fails to the lot of most Wellesley graduates. Miss Webb was an enthusiastic student of history and becoming, during her senior year, deeply interested in Spain, she determined to learn the language and to make a first-hand study of the romantic land beyond the Pyrenees as soon as opportunity should offer. After several years of teaching there came in 1890 the chance to go to Spain. Miss Webb found a congenial home and the means for prosecuting her study of Spanish literature and history in the International College, theial College, located in the old Monastery and the interest in the school and its students there gathered, deepened until she determined to make this her life work. With the exception of two winters spent with her parents in this country, Miss Webb has spent the last eighteen years teaching History and Latin and growing wise as to the needs and capacities of Spanish girls. Her exceptional experience and devotion rendered her manifestly the best person to take charge of the school after Mrs. Gulick’s death. A year ago Miss Webb was appointed principal of the mission school conducted by the Woman’s Board. During these difficult first years at Madrid, she has directed the work with unerring zeal, winning new friends and adherents for this endeavor to bring opportunity for a liberal education within reach of Spanish girls.

AN OPPORTUNITY TO DO SETTLEMENT WORK.

The head worker in the East Side House, New York City, has written to our College Christian Association for help in securing a resident helper for the coming year and is ready to report the work of the West Side Christian Association, and its work promises so much opportunity that more workers are needed. The head resident desires a young woman who is thoroughly interested in the work of the settlement,—one who will be willing to give four hours a day at least, to clubs and settlement classes and one who can pay her own board amounting to about five or six dollars a week. This is an exceptional opportunity for service and one that will prove to the student in need of Christian experience and Christian problems. Further information may be had from the President of the Christian Association.

There will be a mass meeting of students Wednesday afternoon, at 4:15, March 22, in College Hall Chapel. Some of the Faculty will speak and offer sympathy for the cause of the Society of the Friends of Russian Freedom.

FREE PRESS.

I.

There are many opportunities given us to prove our devotion to Wellesley; one may find constant chances to “answer to her every call.” And to those of us who have been to Silver Bay there comes a new understanding of the possibilities in our Wellesley delegation for representing our College in the midst of friendly Collegiate competition.

Surely, if one were to look at Mr. Hoke and Bryan Mawr sending each year to the Silver Bay conference their most attractive, best intellectually equipped, strongest student leaders, Wellesley longs too that she may not take a place of lower representation. Shall our College stand before that large gathering of three hundred preparatory school students, judged by an unrepresentative delegation? Shall we allow our place of prominence among Eastern Colleges to be undervalued by a gathering representing eighty-seven different schools and colleges?

Surely when only fifty students can be sent from Wellesley this year shall not the girls who are urged to go, feel that this is both an opportunity and an obligation given them by Wellesley herself?

"Last week the class of — gave a play called ‘Freddie’s Life’ at the Barn. The excellency of the cast was only to be rivaled by the faithful work of the committee, etc.

"How often we read it. Whenever, in the halls, at the Barn, we discuss the play freely and frankly, its faults and its merits and do not hesitate to award praise or blame, but in the columns of the News, all work, good, bad, or indifferent, receives the same kind of enthusiasm, indiscriminate praise. The play may be saved from failure by the brilliant work of one girl but we learn that "the performance of Saturday evening was especially noteworthy for its even cast. The hero may move with the ease and grace of a wooden image, but "his interpretation of the part of Launcelot was charming.

From Freshman year we are trained in criticism of everything, from "Sweetness and Light" to "King Lear" but, so far, no one in College seems able or willing to write a fair and intelligent criticism of a Barnswallow play.

Miss Henry and the Tennessee Mountaineers.

Wednesday afternoon, at the Tau Eta Epsilon House, Miss Margaret E. Henry, of Maryville College, Tennessee, spoke of the Settlement work that is being done among the Southern Mountaineers, and told something of the history of "Walker’s Valley" in the Smoke Mountains. These people have lived since their emigration from the colonies; which, they felt, were getting too worldly, and they Nazarene in the hope of the successful cultivation and the world outside, no laws for the prevention of crime, no books or schools, and not the most ordinary conception of the amenities of life.

These conditions seem the most discouraging possible for the Settlement worker, but there is a corresponding encouragement in the fact that the mountaineers are descendants of the best Scotch-Irish stock of the colonies, and the children are not only eager to learn, but have keen and receptive minds, with the sturdy independence and pride of the mountain-born. It is significant that it was through their own efforts that the first school was started among these mountaineers of Walker’s Valley.

Miss Henry spoke with the simple convincing force and unfailing appeal of those who have given up their lives in devotion to a good cause, and as her talk was the real story of real people, presented in all its pathos, with a most delightful kindly humor to relieve the situation, everyone who heard felt that it had been a lasting inspiration.

LOST.

A brown leather address book has been missing from 3 Norfolk Terrace since the fire on February 27. This book contains many useful addresses and small papers of value only to the owner.

Any information which may lead to tracing this property will be very much appreciated by the owner.

Adelle Ogden,

3 Norfolk Terrace, Wellesley, Mass.
For more than a week Wellesley curiosity has been aroused by the announcement of a French bazaar to be given at the Barn under the supervision of L’Alliance Francaise. Monday afternoon, from three to six, found a miniature French colony there, prepared to amuse you as well as provide for your wants.

The Barn was more than usually attractive. Instead of a midway lined with booths, there was an obliteration of small shops, surrounded by broad avenues, and filled with the most persistent, attractive, Frenchy vendors of wares who had little mercy for the dilettante who played around and tried to talk French, and still less for the ignorant who spoke only English and German.

The first and most enticing booth was filled with flowers and flower girls who, while they held a pink carnation against you for a little while, began to flirt with you in French. Elle est tres belle mademoiselle, tres belle, et la couleur s’accorde avec vos jolies. Mais, je n’ai pas de monnaie, vous pourrez, demain. Et cette fleur elle est charmante, charmante.

And so it went around the square, where you wandered on, assisted if necessary, by Cook’s facetious French guides. Mademoiselle, mademoiselle had an outside agent to persuade you to enter, and if you enter you did. You might count on a most respectable fortune cleverly told. Next to the fortune teller’s was the roulette table, and the players were honest as they could desire. You were sure to get something if only a little German stern. Then there was a counter covered with feminine creations and necessities, collars, cuffs, handkerchiefs, bags and needle cases, all very pretty.

The booth where you threw at little darky dolls for chocolate cigars was popular with Cook’s guides, and fairly so with Cook’s tourists. The candy counter adjoining was covered with the most tempting array of fudge, chocolate peppermints, and nut candies.

The Barn stage made a charming cafe, where you sat with a friend at a small round table, and were served by a dainty French maid while you looked down at the gay crowd below. Occasionally, a company of dancing girls in short pink skirts and little green bodices, fluttered out, attracting much attention. Just across the street corner was a heavily curtained room, containing an interesting collection of Mrs. Jarmey’s French wax works.

Everywhere was the sound of gay French chatter, and the whole scene was one of French gaiety.

LETTER FROM DR. HUME.

An article a few weeks ago in this paper told of the need of a sterilizing apparatus for Dr. Ruth Hume’s hospital in Ahmednagar. It is a great pleasure to be able to announce now that this need has been met by the gift of a Wellesley alumna, a member of Dr. Bissell’s class, and her family.

May I call your attention now to this extract from one of Dr. Hume’s letters describing another need and ask if there is any suggestion as to how the sum of $5,000 might begin to be raised to provide this new house of which she speaks?

EXTRACTS FROM RECENT LETTERS FROM DR. RUTH P. HUME REGARDING THE NEED OF A RESIDENCE IN CONNECTION WITH THE NEW HOSPITAL IN AHMEDNAGAR, INDIA.

Last night I was up until 3 A.M. The night before also I had to get up and go over to the Hospital. Oh, for a house near the Hospital. It would save us a vast amount of time and strength.

Yesterday a Parsee lady came and has a private room. I have heard that word is being sent to all the Parsees in this section, even as far as Bombay, to come here when they are sick.

It does seem as if we must have a house right near the Hospital. It wastes our time and strength to have to go over there so far. Often I have thought of the middle of the day or night that some one is not well. Then I simply have to use my best judgment whether to send directions or whether to go out myself. Miss Campbell (the chief nurse) says she has reached the point of not expecting to come here to the house without hearing of some pressing need to go back to the Hospital.

It is amazing to see how eager women are to come to the Hospital. They fall at my feet and beg to be taken in. Dr. Bissell did a splendid work here and I am reaping the benefit of it.

ART NOTES.

It is desirable that everyone should take advantage of the opportunity to see the collection of Monet pictures now open at Copley Hall. Monet, perhaps more than any other living man, has transcended the art of our day, and though his work may not at first, have long since been accepted as one who sees beauty, and expresses it in a logical and scientific fashion. He is not to be reproached for what he does not do, but admired for the accomplishment of what to him is the best worth doing.

He is essentially modern; giving us modern thought in a language that is the most natural mode of expression. He has broken many traditions, but has established a new one to be in its turn discarded or modified when the time and the man comes. Perhaps the greatest lesson we can learn from him is that art is not imitative, but seeks to express a thought or a feeling in terms of nature.

CHARLES H. WOODBURY,
Department of Art, Wellesley College.

BLASHFIELD EXHIBITION, ART BUILDING.

The Art Department has been fortunate in securing the drawings and studies, many of them in color, by Mr. Edwin H. Blashfield, which were recently on exhibition at the St. Botolph Club in Boston. Mr. Blashfield ranks among the two or three leading artists in America in interior decoration. His sense of decorative values and his power of adapting painting to its surroundings is unsurpassed. One of his best known decorations is the great work on the interior of the dome of the Congressional Library at Washington and another is the decoration of the State House of Minnesota.

Mr. Blashfield is known as a critic as well as an artist. His book on “Italian Cities,” written in collaboration with Mrs. Blashfield, is a valuable contribution to the qualitative side of art appreciation.

The exhibition is held in the Art Gallery of the Art Building, and will remain open until the end of the term.

The paintings of which these drawings are the original studies are to be seen only when in position. Mr. Blashfield rarely exhibits paintings outside of the buildings for which they are designed. In fact the finishing work is largely done when the pictures are in place.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

A business meeting of the Christian Association was held in College Hall Chapel, Thursday evening, March 16th. Three new names were proposed, and the recommendations accepted by the Association. Miss Kendrick gave a report for the Missionary Committee on the money that has been raised this year. The pledges have amounted to $1,439.54 of which $788.82 has already been paid. This represents 720 givers or 70 per cent. of the College with an average of $2 per member. $730 has been paid for our College Missionary, Dr. Hume, and the remainder has been expended in various ways, as, for instance, helping Miss Johnson in her work for girls in Egypt or supporting an orphan in India. Miss Cool made a partial report for the committee to suggest candidates for next year’s secretary. No name was definitely proposed. A request was read by the President from the East Side New York Settlement House, asking for a possible worker for the coming year, all applications to be made through Miss Emerson. The meeting adjourned.

(In addition to items about Alumnae, this column will occasionally contain notes about members of the Faculty, past and present, and former students.)

Miss Scudder’s hymn will be found in the Churchman instead of in the Outlook as stated last week. The poems recently referred to this column and some shorter poems by Professor Katharine Lee Bates, 1880, will be published in the April and May numbers of the Magazine.

It has been understood that Alumnae often confine their reading to the Alumnae column, and that these poems are of especial interest to them and have been called to the attention of the Alumnae editor, they will be inserted there, although they are of general interest.

The following addresses have been received:

Mrs. Alice Schouler Miller, 1896, 184 Commonwealth avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Henrietta Hardy, 1890, 29 Bartlett avenue, Arlington, Mass.

Miss Bertha L. Hayes, 1886-1890, 81 West street, Northampton, Massachusetts.

Miss Mary Carolyn Smith, 1901, 187 Monroe street, Roxbury, Massachusetts.

Miss Edith Stearns, 1904, 755 Piedmont avenue, Atlanta, Georgia.

The Alumnae luncheon of the Chicago Wellesley Club was held Saturday, March 11th, in the rooms of the Chicago Woman’s Club, in honor of President Hazard and Miss Olive Davis, 1886. About fifty Alumnae and former students were present and an informal reception to the guests of honor preceded the serving of the luncheon. The president of the Club, Mrs. Florence Runnels Bryant, 1883, introduced President Hazard, who spoke most interestingly of the present conditions at Wellesley and of plans for the future. In closing, the Phi Beta Kappa poem, written for the installation of the chapter at Wellesley, was read by Miss Hazard. The occasion served to promote the loyalty of the Wellesley girls present and was a most delightful renewal of college ties.

The last two books of the series for United Study of the Missionary Societies are to be written by Wellesley graduates, Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, 1884, and Mrs. Anna Robertson Brown Lindsay, 1885. The title of Mrs. Montgomery’s book is “The Island World;” that of Mrs. Lindsay’s, “Foreign Missions and Social Progress.”

Mrs. Alice Ames Winter, 1886, has just published a novel, “The Prize to the Hardy,” dealing with life in Minneapolis and the Northwest. The illustrations are by her brother-in-law, Mr. Raymond Crosby, whose work in Life and other magazines has made him already well-known.

Miss Harriet Towne, 1889-1891, is teaching history at Burlington, Vermont. Her address is 100 North Willard street.

Miss Frances L. Libby, 1891, is taking a vacation this winter, but returns to her position at Bridgton, Maine, in the spring to complete the year there.

Miss Marcia Bigelow, 1893, is to be in Springfield the last of May. It will be remembered that Miss Bigelow left her position in the Springfield High School at the end of last year to accept the principalship of a school among the mountain people at Hope, Vermont. Miss Pettit, who is in charge of the Settlement House there, writes of the wonderful work Miss Bigelow has done already for the school.

Miss Grace Godfrey, 1896, has charge of the baving, menus, house-servants, etc., of the Lake Placid Club in the Adirondacks, which accommodates three hundred guests in summer.

Miss Helen Greenwood, 1896, is teaching in the Biology Department of the Worcester English High School. Last year in addition to teaching, she did a year’s graduate work at Wellesley and received the Wellesley Scholarship from the Botanical Department at the Marine Biological Laboratory at Wood’s Hole. Miss Mary Hefferan, 1896, is Research Assistant in the Department of Bacteriology in the University of Chicago. Her latest publication is “Bionomics of Anopheles” by E. O. Jordan and Mary Hefferan in the Journal of Infectious Diseases, January, 1905.

Miss Evangeline Kendall, 1896, is with the Presbyterian Board of Publication as managing editor of “Forvard” and writing a little for publication.

Miss Pauline McDowell, 1896, is studying Chemistry at Columbia University.

Miss Mary Montgomery, 1896, is working with the Encyclopedia Britannica Company in the History’s History of the World, and is also writing articles on Arabic subjects for the Jewish Encyclopedia.

Miss Isabelle Moore, 1896, is in Daytona, Florida, tutoring a boy and girl who are preparing for College.

Mrs. Cordelia Nevers Marriott, 1896, was in Holland with Captain Marriott and her small daughter this summer. Miss Edith Butler, 1896, visited Mrs. Marriott when she was in England.

Miss Abbie Paige, 1896, is Treasurer of the Boston College Club.

Mrs. Marie Ryder Sylvester, 1895, is the second reader of the Christian Science Church of Worcester. She has two children, a boy eight years old, and a girl three.

Dr. Carlotta Swett, 1896, is giving some lectures in Brookline this winter. She is practicing in Bangor, Maine.

Miss Mary Townsend, 1895, has been engaged in work at the newly organized Y. W. C. A. in Trenton, New Jersey, this year.

Dr. Mabel Wells, 1896, is taking patients to North Carolina for the "rest cure."

Miss Edith Whitlock, 1896, is Superintendent of Dr. King's private hospital in Portland, Maine.

Miss Lydia Wilkins, 1896, is teaching English at the "Plaza" in Ponce, Porto Rico.

Miss Clara Willis, 1896, is teaching Kindergarten at Newton Centre.

Miss Annie Witherle, 1896, is teaching in the High School at Rumford, Maine.

Miss Nellie L. Fowler, 1898, is teaching college preparatory English and English History at Miss Mittelberger's School for Girls in Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Grace M. Chanin, 1898, is head of the English Department in a school in Monroe, Michigan, and also has had charge of the boys' session room. Her address is 360 Washington street.

Miss Lucy B. Proctor, 1903, is teaching in the High School at Revere, Massachusetts. Her subjects are German, Algebra, Trigonometry, Astronomy and Geology.

Miss Ebbie D. Newton, 1903, has been doing graduate work in philosophy and psychology in the University of Cincinnati, and also some tutoring in Mathematics.

Miss Virginia Hoge, 1903-1904, has been spending the winter in Florence, Italy, studying vocal music with Vannucini.

Miss Maude Burroughs, 1899, has charge of the stenography and typewriting in Gloucester High School. Her address is 10 Riggs street.

Miss Rebecca D. Moore, 1899, is teaching French and History in the Saugus High School, Mass.

Miss Alice Keefers Le Roy, 1900, is living in Dubluth, Minn.

After graduating she studied Extractive Science at Pratt Institute, New York, and taught that subject at Y. W. C. A. in Dubluth. Her address is 122 Twelfth avenue.
