THE FIRST ARTIST RECITAL.

Mr. Reisenauer's piano-forte recital on Monday evening was the first of the series of Artist Recitals for this year. The programme was exceptionally fine, and one very well suited to an audience of students. Mr. Reisenauer selected characteristic works of the greatest composers, and played them in almost strictly chronological order, beginning with the old classics, Bach, Scarlatti and Handel, and ending with Chopin and Liszt. The programme was very long and fatiguing, and required a tremendous amount of endurance on the part of the player.

Mr. Reisenauer's interpretation of the Bach prelude and fugue was rather disappointing. He was a little inclined to 'bang', particularly in the fugue. It was the beautiful nine-note fugue, and a more delicate rendering would have been more suitable, without making the parts less distinct. But the wonderful delicacy of shading in the Scarlatti fully compensated for any deficiency in the fugue. The Mozart Fantasia, too, was rendered with a refinement and clearness that one hears only in the playing of the greatest masters.

The second part of the programme was Schumann's Carnaval. Mr. Reisenauer's rendering of this combined his great vigor and breadth with his extreme delicacy and refinement. He played with marvelous flexibility and impressed the audience unmistakably with the idea that it was a Carnaval. His most marked qualities were shown in the very and in the character sketches, especially in the contrasting Eusebius and Florestan. He played the preambule and the final march in a very conservative tempo, which made them exceedingly impressive.

Mr. Reisenauer's treatment of melody was very wonderful. The distinctness with which he brings out a melody, and his subdivision of accompaniment were shown beautifully in the "Lieder ohne Worte," the Chopin-Liszt Polonaise and the Schubert Impromptu.

One cannot help comparing any artist's interpretation of Chopin with Mr. de Pachman's, and Mr. Reisenauer's, with most of the rest, suffers by the comparison. The value was one of his weakest points; the nocturne, however, was played very beautifully.

The Liszt Rhapsody in E major, the last number on the programme, was one of those pieces which require the physical powers of a giant and which makes the audience wish that they were in Carnegie Hall at least. Mr. Reisenauer's gymnastic feats were wonderful, and the octave gisando and the other hopelessly technical passages were executed perfectly.

The programme in full was as follows:

Prelude...and Fugue, D Major
(from the Well-tempered Clavier)
J. S. Bach (1685-1750)
Pastorale, E Minor, and Capriccio, E Major
D. Scarlatti (1683-1757)

The Work of the Department of Physical Training.

Never before in the history of the college has such genuine interest and enthusiasm been shown in the gymnastic classes, sports and games offered by the Department of Physical Training. From the Freshmen class above there were one hundred and five applicants for rowing, and one hundred and ten for motor. It is to be given in strict estimation of the work done in our small gymnasium some idea may be given by the following list of the classes which are accommodated. There are three special classes for individual work which meet three hours a week, and three First Year Gymnastic Classes, open to all comers, meeting two hours a week. Two classes in Advanced Gymnastics meet two hours each week and it is from these that the representative class squads are chosen to compete for the Lincoln Challenge Cup at the Indoor Meet. In dancing there is one class for Freshmen, which meets two hours a week, and to the Senior class four periods of instruction a week are to be given.

The entries for Rowing are unusually large in all the four classes. In the coming season the Senior, Junior and Sophomore classes will each have a squad consisting of twenty-four members with a large enough margin to make up a club. Instruction in novice-rowing will be given to thirty-six freshmen.

As yet the Rowing Club has not been fully organized but the entry-lists are well filled.

In addition to the work in the gymnasium, Miss Hill is giving the Freshmen instruction in carriage and walking for one hour a week in the Barn. This is but a temporary arrangement and will be succeeded by a weekly class in the minut and in the three-step walk open to Freshmen and Sophomores.

The following provision has been made for those desiring lessons in Riding, Swimming and Fencing. In Riding two weekly classes meet on Monday at the Brookline Riding School. These courses consists of ten lessons the charge for which is ten dollars. Three weekly classes in Swimming are held on Monday at the Brookline Baths. Twelve lessons are given for six dollars. The lessons in Fencing this year will be given in Boston and not, as formerly, in the gymnasium. Here again eight in a class, will meet on Monday. The number of lessons and the rates are the same as those for Swimming.

M. Lucien Fournon is the instructor.

Meeting of the Student Government Association.

A meeting of the Student Government Association was held on November 24, at 4.15, in College Hall Chapel. The president presented the minutes of the previous meeting and approved. Reports from the Executive Board, and the Executive Board were read.

The business of the day was the election of a committee to confer with the Faculty on non-academic matters. A letter from D. Pendleton was read asking for such a committee. A motion that this committee be appointed by the president was then moved, seconded and carried.

The next business to come before the meeting was the election of a leader of the Fire Brigade. To fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Miss Bixby, a motion was then made and carried to appoint the appointment of Miss Edna Moore.

Miss Moore then spoke on the need of better arrangement of the fire brigade, and moved that the Student Government Association petition the Faculty to consider the question of the Brigade at the coming conference between

“Entered as second class matter, November 12, 1903, at the Post Office, at Wellesley, Mass., under the Act of Congress, March 3, 1879.”

Each day of our college life is so busy, each hour filled with academic appointments or some of the many other things that seem to us important, that the weeks pass almost without our noticing that they are gone. The first break in the academic year—the Thanksgiving recess—is close at hand, and Christmas, with its accompanying baste and good cheer, is less than a month away. One of the inevitable accompaniments of Christmas cheer, however, should be even nearer than it is—it is not too early now to begin our Christmas shopping. Occupied as we are with our own affairs, we are very likely to forget, if indeed we realize at all, what the results are for those who serve us, if we leave the planning of our Christmas gifts until the week before Christmas. In large cities the rush of Christmas shopping makes the two weeks in the middle of December a long-dreaded time of suffering for the employees of retail merchants and of express companies. Young girls—in some places even children—are kept hard at work half the night; the assistants of milliners, dressmakers and tailors are driven far beyond their strength by “rush orders,” while delivery men and errand-boys are forced to exhaust themselves in the effort to deliver on time articles not ordered until the last possible moment. We have all heard the story, told by Mrs. Kelly of the Consumers’ League, about the little Jewish girl, who was so astonished to learn that there were kind Christmas; she had seen them only in the stores at Christmas time. she the Christmas message of good-will means something very different; and if it were not merely thoughtlessness on our part, it would be almost criminal to pervert the Christmas spirit for half the world by leaving our Christmas shopping to be done in the last few busy days.

COLEGE NOTES.

On Friday evening, November 17, a novel ceremony was inaugurated by the class of 1908, when they buried the mathematics books of their Freshman president as symbolic of the feeling of the class. This ceremony came as a surprise to the College, as no one had known of the intentions of the class until the line of black-robed figures, carrying torches, wound about the campus afterward.

A meeting of the debating club was held Tuesday, November 21, at 7:30 o'clock. An informal debate was given on the subject: “Resolved: that the theatres should be under municipal control.” The affirmative was taken by Geraldine Lermitt, 1906, and Annie Abell, 1909; the negative by Elizabeth Condit, 1907, and Emma McCarroll, 1908. The affirmative won the debate. The chairman for the evening was Dorothy Tryon, 1906; the critic, Edna McClellan, 1906. The club is planning an open meeting of which the subject and date will be announced later.

The Faculty Science Club met in the Observatory, Tuesday evening, November 21. Dr. Bell of the Psychology Department read a paper on the “Psychology of the Crayfish.”

The friends of Miss Elsa Stoeber, formerly of the German Department, will be interested to know that her address has been changed and is now Zurich IV, Chausse strasse 36, Pension Hohenlinden, Switzerland.

At the Christian Association meeting, Thursday, November 23, Mrs. Kelly spoke on the work of the Consumers’ League.

On Friday afternoon, November 24, Dr. and Mrs. Powers received the members of Art 13 in the Art Gallery.

The First Trip of Investigation of Lower Boston.

Saturday afternoon, November 18, Mrs. O'Sullivan, the agent for the "Improved Dwelling Association" took several Wellesley girls to investigate the conditions in some of the sweat-shops on Beacon Street. The shops visited were upon the third and fourth floors of wretched buildings, reached by dark, narrow stairs, and consisted of several dirty, low-ceiled rooms, from eight to twenty people working in a room 20 x 30 feet. One woman who sewed on buttons, replied to a question about her pay by saying, "Two and a half cents. I get." She sews buttons on coats, does some hand work around the collar and around the bottom of the coat. Think of it! Two and a half cents for that! She works ten hours each day, and it is possible for her to make $1.25 per day, but she usually does not make more than $1.00. Thus, however, is above the average, for most of the workers do not make more than $6.00 per week.

A visit was then made to one of the tenements in South Boston, which the "Improved Dwelling Association" is trying to make more sanitary. Here suites of two or three rooms rented for $1.50 or $2.00 a week. They looked thin and dark and dirty enough but Mrs. O'Sullivan said they were an improvement over the old ones in having the walls painted instead of papered, and that the Association tried to teach the people to keep their rooms clean and well ventilated.

Mrs. O'Sullivan feels deeply the responsibility of bettering the conditions of these poor people. She is willing to give all of her time on Wednesdays and Saturdays to Wellesley girls wishing to visit either the tenements or sweat-shops. Any girl who would like to go on such a trip may leave her name at the book hanging outside the door of Room 71, B, College Hall.

A SHEAF OF OLD LETTERS.

Through the kindness of Mrs. Durant the Library has come into possession of some old letters relating to the early history of the College. It may interest the Wellesley of to-day to see what was occupying the attention of the Wellesley of thirty years ago. The poem referred to in Longfellow’s letter is the “Psalm of Life,” which hangs in the west centre aisle of the Library. The letter from Charles and Mary Cowden Clarke was presented to Mr. Durant by James T. Fields, to whom the Library owes many an old book and autograph letter.

Camb., Sept. 6, 1876.

My Dear Sir,

It gives me great pleasure to comply with your request. I have copied the poem and had it framed for you. It will be sent by express to-morrow. I hope you will like the style in which it is done. I made several experiments, and found it impossible to bring the verses into a smaller compass without crowding.

I have such pleasant recollections of Wellesley that I shall be most happy to come again if I can find a leisure day.

With kind rememberences to Mrs. Durant, and to the Captain and the crew of the Evar-geline.

Yours very truly,

Henry W. Longfellow.

September 30, 1876.

Gambrel Cottage, Manchester.

Dear Mr. Durant,

My only autograph of Wordsworth is at your service, but unfortunately it is not suitable for framing, being too large a document to fit a portrait. I think I know of an autograph of the great poet belonging to a friend of mine, and if he has not yet given it away, I will get it for you.

Next week I begin work, and fear there is no chance of my reaching Wellesley with Longfellow.

Cordially yours,

James T. Fields.

Friday, the 5th November, 1880.

Dear Friend,

Is it next Monday, the 8th. I am to come? And shall my subject be some introductory remarks about English Literature, some talk about reverence for genius, a little advice to young students—and a half-hour about Goldsmith? I am too long to be touched on to prelude, first night. Or will you have Campbell instead of Goldsmith? Remember this! After this date, the 5th of Nov., 1880, the price for each lecture at Wellesley will be $50, and not $50. Remember this, O worthy, but extravagant Guide, Philosopher and Friend!

J. T. F.

Villa Novello, Genoa,

30 January, 1875.

My dear Mr. Fields,

Your welcome Christmas-Day-dated letter and the copy of “National Journal” for 24 November, ’74, containing reports of your charming lecture on Longfellow reached us amid much home delight, and added deliciously thereto. I had the pleasure of reading the dissertation aloud to a happy breakfast circle, whom you thus enabled to be in a manner present at your lectural feast... The universal remark when the lecture was concluded expressed cordial agreement that that was the way to praise true poetry,—with a genuine, genial, unstinted praise, a thorough outpouring of hearty, affectionate, appreciative praise. Again thank you for our family pleasure on that morning. Some hold that evening is the right time for enjoyment of such intellectual and artistic treats, but I who remember dear Leigh Hunt’s animated talks or readings or quotations over a prolonged first-meal, and Hazlitt’s lounging chats during a similarly lengthened bachelor cup of morning tea, when we called upon him somewhere towards noon,—maintain that the breakfast-time is often the hour of the day...

To-day’s book-post will, I hope, duly convey to you and Mrs. Fields a copy of a little story that may serve to beguile you into a ramble of pleased fancy through old-fashioned romance paths,—in which paths some of us still have faith.

We lately received charming letters from your friends,—and, I am proud to add, now our friends,—Mr. and Mrs. Furness. So that you see what with kindly warm communications from correspondents abroad, and what with lively young companions at home, we have been a most favoured and happy old couple lately.

For your own share in this joy accept cordial thanks from Your affectionate friends,

Charles and Mary Cowden Clarke.

PARLIAMENT OF FOOLS.
Oh, Laundry day a joy is and surprise,
Think of the judges, shirt waists, cakes and pies
You find within the crannies of your box—
Your friends hail its unpacking with glad cries.

Now the reverse; a sadder picture makes
A home benefit of judges, pies and cakes.
To which a box comes beaped with soiled white skirts,—
No care to fill drear corners daughter takes.

Why not, from the small business of the day,
Seize time to pack your suit case with some stray
And pleasing gift each week for those at home—
Some article for use or for display?

A new fur coat for mother, or a few
Theatre tickets, a cut glass dish or two,
A tempting breakfast, or a centerpiece
Embroidered when you've nothing else to do.

And then how thoughtful 'would be to complete
Your father's efforts to make both ends meet
By tucking in a crisp ten dollar bill
For his worn purse, which you so oft deplete.

For sister choose some small and feminine thing—
A dainty hand-made blouse would surely bring
Smiles to her face—so would a real shell comb,
A dainty tea set, or a diamond ring.

A little time and a few pennies spent
And from our homes a cloud of gloom is rent;
How eagerly they'd wait for Laundry day
If every week some thoughtful gift we sent!

ALUMNÆ NOTES.

In addition to notes concerning graduates the Alumnae Column will also contain items of interest about members of the Faculty, past and present.

Miss Helen J. Sunborn of the class of 1889, is printing a volume of poems by members of the English Literature Department for the benefit of the Library Fund. Persophone and Other Poems, which is now in the bindery, will soon be offered for sale at the College or may be ordered direct from Miss Sunborn, 383 Broadway, Somerville. The price of the book, one dollar, should accompany every order. Miss Sherwood opens the volume with a dramatic poem embodying the Greek myth of Persophone; an Arthurian ballad and group of lyrics by Miss Jewett follow; then "Songs and Sonnets" by Miss Bowem; a series of Yale prize-sonnets on some early English saints, together with a group of Nature lyrics by Miss Shackford; then come a number of poems on European themes, "Wayfaring Memories," by Miss Scudder; and Miss Bates closes the volume with a collection of lyrics entitled, for reasons best known to herself "Marginal Notes on the Book of Life." Professor Hamilton contributes a musical setting for Miss Bates' patriotic song, "America the Beautiful!"

The English Literature Department suggests to the College that while it would be most praiseworthy to help on the Library Fund by purchasing this volume, it is by no means necessary to read it. As a Christmas gift for alumnae or fellow-students, it would be an appropriate object.

Professor Roberts and Miss Moffett sailed in August from Philadelphia to Liverpool. After a fortnight in England, they went to the quiet old university town of Besancon in France, an ancient city with Roman remains and reminders of Spanish occupation. "We are in the Jura Mountains," writes Miss Roberts on October twenty-first, "and near enough Switzerland so that we get Fine mountain scenery. It is cold, though, here. Winter seems to close in upon us very early. I thought so, when a day or two ago, I awoke to find the hills all around the city white with snow. Besancon plumes itself a great deal upon being the birthplace of Victor Hugo; though as he left it as soon as he was big enough to walk, I don't see great reason for being so proud. More interesting to me is the Granvell library here, a library founded in the seventeenth century. I believe that has a number of old books by alchemists and the earlier chemists which I have been reading with great interest."

At a conference of Trustees of American Colleges and Universities held at the University of Illinois, October 17-19, Mrs. Adaline Emerson Thompson, 1888, the representative of the Trustees of Wellesley, was, according to the printed program, the only woman given a place among the speakers. Mrs. Thompson opened the discussion of the first meeting of the conference, and also presided over a session devoted to addresses and discussion on business management of universities.

Miss Mary Alice Emerson, 1893, who took her Master's degree in English literature last June, sailed in September for a year abroad. She is now pursuing her English studies in Oxford, attending the lectures of Professor Raleigh, Professor Selincourt and Mr. Carlyle, and reading Jacobean drama in the Bodleian.

Mrs. Marie Whitney Thornlilke, 1897, and her husband, will spend the winter abroad.

Miss Edna E. Rounds, 1901, took work in history at the Harvard Summer School, last summer.

Miss Louise Prouty, 1902, has recently been transferred from the Boston Public Library, where she has been employed for the last three years, and made custodian of the Brighton Branch Library.

Miss Harriet B. Whitaker, 1904, is studying at the Normal Art School, Boston. Her address is Tyngsborough, Massachusetts.

The Sophomore with wisdom new acquired,
With zeal for Economics now is fired.
Pongees from Hatch at lowest price she buys,
And regally to Chapel goes attired.
