Meeting of Student Government Association.

The second meeting of Student Government Association was held at 4:15 in College Hall Chapel, Friday, November 22. The President called the meeting to order and the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. The Secretary of the House President made the following report:

- Serious errors, 80.
- Semi-Serious errors, 157.
- Irregularities, 170.
- Permissions, 71.

It was moved, seconded and carried that this report be accepted.

The Secretary gave the report of the executive board. It was moved, seconded and carried that this report be accepted. The President then told the girls that on the day of the Harvard-Yale game they would be allowed to lunch at Memorial Hall without a chaperon and to walk through the yard—but for this day only.

The House President of College Hall spoke about maintaining quiet in College Hall during recitation hours. It is a part of our loyalty to student government and alma mater, to remember the quiet hours and to keep them.

The resignation of Miss Herbert, as fire captain of the college fire brigade, was read, and it was moved, seconded and carried that it be accepted.

It was voted that the President's appointment of Miss Tyler as fire captain be accepted. Miss Tyler then made a report of the past month's work, urging the importance of fire-drills and conscientious attendance to them. It was moved, seconded and carried that this report be accepted.

A chairman for the ensuing year was then elected for the International Institute League of Spain. Miss Eleanor Raymond, 1909, received the election.

Miss Zabriskie reported on the Student Government Conference at Vassar. She gave us a very interesting account of the social side of the conference, which made us all wish that we might have been there.

The President spoke of the practical help the conference had been to the delegates. She said that we not only gave but also received new ideas, and that it had been a great inspiration to all.

She closed her remarks by saying how proud she was to have represented Wellesley at the Conference.

We then had the pleasure of listening to Seignorina Marcil, who is a graduate of the college in Spain. She gave us a delightful picture of the Spanish college, and a history of its founding by Mrs. Alice Gordon Gulick. She told us of the Spanish girl's life and the narrow confines she must always walk within. She has nothing to do but embroider and keep house, until she marries or enters the convent. The Spanish girl loves the home of all that is progressive, as Spain is the protector of old traditions, and old customs. The idea which builds a woman's college has not yet been born in Spain, and the help and sympathy of American womanhood is needed to give the Spanish girl the freedom and liberty she so longs for in her land of flowers and color and song. They are very grateful to Wellesley for all the help she has given them and with eagerness look to Wellesley for sympathy and aid, and she has always been so willing to give. Selena Maria has made us feel that there was a page of medieval poetry here in the midst of our strenuous life at Wellesley. In closing she quoted words from a college song of the Spanish girl, which made us feel that we could not do too much for our sisters across the sea.

O Wellesley beloved!
Your name we repeat.
Your gift we remember.
My heart is entwined.
Those who for us
Leave country and friends.
They hate Wellesley.
Her homage now sends.

The Missionary Conference at Barnard College.

The conference at Barnard College over November 16 and 17 was a signal event in missionary work. It marked the first assembly of Eastern college girls for a serious study of missions. The conference was called to further college enthusiasm in home and foreign missions, and to suggest informally an annual meeting of college representatives to discuss the mission associations of the nation.

The delegates, twenty-four in all, represented the following colleges: Adelphi, Baltimore, Bryn Mawr, Mt. Holyoke, Radcliffe, Smith, Vassar, Wells, and Wellesley, and were, in almost every case, the President of the Christian Association and a Student Volunteer. Besides Wellesley, Adelphi and Bryn Mawr sent a third delegate. Some of the delegates were entertained at Brook's Hall, Barnard's new dormitory, and the others were hospitably received by Barnard students in New York. Before the formal opening of the conference at ten on Saturday morning, most of us had been introduced, not only to each other, but to the Columbia University campus, to the Barnard campus and recitation hall.

The opening meeting was addressed by Dr. Charles Cuthbert Hall and by Mrs. Labarce. Dr. Hall gave us an idea of the thinking East as a missionary problem. The Western nations, he said, are responsible for their greed and rapacity for the distrust of the East toward Christian missions. He expressed an earnest desire to understand his neighbors and backwardness that we can hope to conquer the barriers and work in harmony with the people of other lands.

Mrs. Labarce told us something about college life at Barnard, and of her many visits already from other conventions. At the meeting Mrs. Labarce told us of the great value of volunteer work, with the help of our particular groups, in cooperation with the Miss. of the Barnard College, and the President of the Barnard College Association.

Mrs. Labarce told us that there was a general appreciation of getting acquainted at a luncheon and at an afternoon performance of The Rose and the Ring, which reminded us of Barnard and was consequently an unanticipated delight. Our enthusiasm centered itself in loyal (though modest) praise of our college sisters. We adjourned for the evening meeting Dr. Janes and Miss Labarce made us a personal view of Eastern conditions and Mrs. Labarce talked of the Student Volunteer Band, the meaning of its pledge and the progress of the Band.

Then we heard a report from each college, and although we were proud of our own interest in missions, the presentations of some of the other colleges—Miss. Janes, of course—made us realize the great possibilities we have everywhere about us in the country to do missionary work. She described the work of the Episcopal Board of Missions. His message was about China and Japan and especially about the Philippine Islands. He told us of women who were the single champions of the Christian religion among thousands of people, and characterized the kind of woman needed to aid in such work. After the address we were all free to ask questions about any phase of missionary work. Thus the conference ended with a final clearing of doubts. But it ended with a great deal more. It ended as it began, with a new interest in other lands and a sense of kindliness and gratitude toward Barnard and its students.

The closing address was made on Sunday evening and was given by Dr. Lloyd Hኖ of the Episcopal Board of Missions. His message was about China and Japan and especially about the Philippines. He told us of women who were the single champions of the Christian religion among thousands of people, and characterized the kind of woman needed to aid in such work. After the address we were all free to ask questions about any phase of missionary work. Thus the conference ended with a final clearing of doubts. But it ended with a great deal more. It ended as it began, with a new interest in other lands, and a sense of kinship and gratitude toward Barnard and its students.

such treasures. It must certainly be a reflection on somebody that the love of the "things of the mind" can make so sorry competition with extra food. Even if students are so fortunate as to have a well-stocked library at home, it is hardly conceivable that in the voyage of splendid discovery on which all youth is embarked, the student who has come across, if they are living vitally and keenly, book, that speak to them with peculiar appeal. To discover such books is an epoch in one's life, and when they hunger possess them, looks to share them with their friends, to lend them from hand to hand until they have gathered them about them imperishable memories of comradeship. Not, in some form to have had the experience portrayed in Keats' "On Looking Into Chapman's Homer," to have missed the immortal heritage of youth. A student's bookcase should have in it besides the books for their courses—these, the least necessary—his necessary tools—the books that minister to his life on its human side; the poets to whom she turns in her weariness; the essays that guide the way, the story-tellers who quicken her zest for experience. The intimacy of books can never be lost if one depends solely on public collections. Books to be enjoyed must be at hand in one's room when the spirit invites their companionship.

Should we not, particularly we who are college women, scrutinize our expenditures and see that we maintain just proportions among our different interests. Food and raiment should have their due; pleasure and recreation their due; and the permanent interests of our life their due. A student by the time she is leaving college ought to have gathered about her some of the instruments of culture that will be a second and permanent need; she should set apart a certain percentage of her means to secure these, and rigidly require of herself intelligent stewardship.

COLLEGE NOTES.

During the past week the various College Houses have been having their first fire drills. The Fire Captains this year declare that they are going to make a vigorous and systematic effort to make their fire drills really efficient. To this end they are examining all the apparatus such as fire-extinguishers, hose, fire escapes and the like, to be sure that everything is in condition for prompt use. They propose to hold monthly meetings wherein reports of fire drills shall be read. On such houses as are laggard the fine of weekly drills are to be imposed, until every house on the campus can respond quickly and scientifically to the fire signal. A drill that serves to empty a house of about half its inmates, and that in the course of twenty minutes or so, is worse than futile. The fire captains urge the earnest and unselfish cooperation of students and Faculty in these their efforts to organize an efficient fire drill.

On Saturday, November 16, the College was visited by Miss Maria Babbitt, Miss Martha Bowie and Miss Brown of Vassar.
On Monday evening, November 18, in College Hall chapel M. Madelin delivered a lecture in French on the subject "Nancy et la Lorraine," illustrated by the stereopticon. After the lecture the Alliance Francaise held a reception in the Faculty Parlor.
On Tuesday, November 19, the usual Student Recital was given in Billings Hall.
On Wednesday, November 20, Mr. Alpheus H. Hardy, Treasurer of the College, addressed the Economics classes on the present financial panic.
A service of thanksgiving was held by the Christian Association, Thursday evening, November twenty-first. After the opening devotional exercises, Miss Ruth Hanford, our delegate to the Week-End Conference at Barnard, told of the great help and inspiration which the conference had given. The leader, Miss Katherine Hazelton, then referred us to the words of the Psalmist, "The lines have fallen unto me in pleasant places; Yea I have a good heritage." She brought to our minds the national heritage we have of freedom of thought, and our college heritage in the wealth of tradition in our intellectual, social, and Christian life, here at Wellesley. Our debt to Mr. Durant is very great for the world of privilege which he has opened to us—this world of richness and beauty, with its intellectual training and opportunities for development. To those, also, who have made the ideals of the Christian Association what they are, and insured the sympathy and support of the faculty and the college at large, we may well be grateful. But more than all these, we should have hearts filled with thankfulness for the measureless heritage of the Father, and of Christ himself. After Miss Hazelton had spoken, others, in quick succession, told the things for which they were most thankful this year for the help and inspiration of friends, for our busy active life here at college, for the opportunity of hearing powerful preachers and listening to beautiful music in chapel services, for the feeling of fellowship here at Wellesley—and for all the special blessings which appeared to be the result of our thanksgiving.

The atmosphere of the Thanksgiving was more or less dreamy and melancholy, and we were indeed in a strange mood.

student shall carry offices whose points aggregate more than 25. The Faculty has hitherto made regulations governing the number of parts which may be taken by any student during the college year, but has long felt it advisable to formulate a system in conformity to that of the Student Government Association. It has therefore divided entertainments into groups and has assigned values to parts in each group, hoping to gain greater definiteness in the administration of its regulations.

The formal plays given before the Barnswallows have been increasingly elaborate and it therefore seems to the Faculty that the time has come to regard these plays on the same footing as other dramatic entertainments, so far as placing a value on their parts and superintending the list of students in the casts.

In addition, therefore, to the regulations hitherto published, the Faculty has assigned numerical values to parts in dramatic and social entertainments according to the accompanying table, although the Committee on Student Entertainments reserves the right to raise or lower the scale if any play proves to demand more or less time than is usual in plays of its group.

Evaluate Parts.

The Committee on Student Entertainments wishes to call the attention of students to certain existing conditions which it hopes will be regulated by the regulations of the Faculty, published in "Extracts from Legislation," 1907-1908, p. 21, article: "Paris."

The burden of office-holding has tended to fall on comparatively few students, so there is a tendency to exist in dramatic the same students many times in a year. The former difficulty has been obviated by the Student Government Association, which has evaluated the offices and made the regulation that no
ART NOTES.

TURNER'S LIBER STUDIORUM.

Among the recent acquisitions of the Department of Art, is a series of the fine photographs from Turner's Liber Studiorum, presented to the department by Miss Margaret Norton of Cambridge. These photographs are now on exhibition in the Art Gallery.

It was in 1857 that the first numbers of the original work were published in England. At this time Turner's paintings were not selling rapidly, and like many other artists he turned to work in black and white. He acquired facility in etching and mezzotinting with remarkable ease, and practiced both for a few years until his fame as a painter was further established.

The form in which his work appeared in the Liber Studiorum was chosen in an attempt to rival the Liber Veritatis of Claude Lorrain. Turner on this, and other occasions, directed a special effort towards matching his skill against that of Claude, whose fame in England was very great at this period.

The idea of the two books, however, was completely different as Claude’s was made up of sketches of sold works, and kept as a matter of convenience and only published after his death. Turner's book, on the other hand, was a thoroughly planned attempt to illustrate in these productions "his command of the whole compass of landscape art, and the boundless and matchless richness of his strokes, both of fact and invention."

During the years of its publication, from 1807-16, the book was not remarkably successful, but after his death fine copies brought as much as three thousand pounds. Turner’s personal work on the plates for the Liber Studiorum, varied considerably. In some instances, it was left entirely to the engraver. Turner, however, always made a drawing in brown, a pen of ink, from which the organic lines were etched, and the more complete treatment of masses of light and shade accomplished by the use of mezzotints.

These works exhibited both the range of Turner’s art, and the characteristic breadth of his treatment. He never reproduced a given place in its most familiar guise but rather, the impression made on his artist mind—what to him suggested its distinctive beauty. His was a large mind, which, as Hamerton says, "notes the fact, but at once passed beyond, to the principle, and after that holds the fact with a somewhat loose and careless grasp."

When a girl devotes twenty-one dollars to books out of a budget of fourteen or fifteen hundred dollars, it may be that she is right. Perhaps she does not care to read, and her parents are forcing her to be educated; or, let us hope, she has at home a large library which she brings such equipment as she needs. But I am convinced that the students in the two lower classes reckoned in Miss Walmsley's recent figures, make a mistake in buying second-hand books. For the most part they come to college because they want an education, and the majority of them mean to teach. They love every volume on their shelves, and they look forward eagerly to having money of their own earning to spend in this way. But they cannot afford it, and the library must wait.

But some things cannot wait. If one is to accomplish anything in the world, one must have the tools for effective work. When I was in college I did not make my own clothes or do my own laundry work,—time was too precious for that,—but other wise I must have remembered almost all the things I had to study at the lowest margin of Miss Walmsley's records. I have a recollection that habituation to her subject which comes from reading and learning to use and daily using the books that help one to master it. You have knowledge, she will find, that you have not always known, but where you have used it, you will find that what you have used it for has been knowledge. You have not always known how to use it, but you will find it easier to use it. And, if you come to last to understand what you are doing, it is too late to make your mind over what you have used, for you have used your knowledge as an organ of yourself.

"But my home people are paying so much for me, how can I ask them for one cent more?" WP.

I know that the American love of success will ask no questions of your subject and I cannot help wondering whether you are fair to your parents when you beg them to sacrifice so much, while yet you refuse to ask for the little more whereby that sacrifice would gain its end.

ALUMNE NOTES.
In addition to notes concerning graduates, the Alumnae Column will contain items of interest about members of the Faculty, past and present, and former students.

The editors of the Wellesley College Record, published in 1900, were unable to secure the addresses of all former students, and after constant effort a long list of the unascertained still remains. Anyone who knows the present address of any member of the following list, or who has any information which might be used in this connection, is respectfully invited to communicate with Miss Caswell, 130 College Hall. It is especially desirable to know the exact whereabouts of all students who were in the college during the first year, 1875-76. Not a few students of that year remain undetermined.

Knight, Harriet E. Entered college in 1873 from N. Brookfield, Mass.
Mrs. Anna Brown Lindsay, 1883, Alumna Trustee, was a guest of Professor Whiting during her recent visit to Wellesley. The Crowell Company have recently published an essay by Mrs. Lindsay on "The Spiritual Care of a Child." Mrs. Georgie French Magenau, 1901, was lately the guest of Miss Grace Davis. Her home is now in Southern Mexico, as her husband is connected with the National Rubber Company in Gomez.

Other Alumnae who have recently visited the college are Misses Minnie A. Morris, 1891, M. A. 1893, who has returned this fall from a long stay abroad; Henrietta Crane and Ethel Sullivan, 1905. Ruth Goodwin and Mabel Waldron, 1906, Gladys Doten, Alice Perry, Marion Ellis Smith and Helen Porter Ward, of 1909. Miss Ruth de Rochemont, 1905, is abroad for the year. She spent the summer in France, went to Switzerland in September, then to Genoa, from which port she sailed for India. She will go as far east as Indo-China, and will probably return next spring.

Miss Marion Lowe, 1902, is teaching English and German in the Milford School, Baltimore, Maryland.

A note from Venice, from Mary Lee Cadwwell, 1906, records her travels with Ruth White, 1907, this summer and fall, in Scotland, England, Holland and Switzerland. They plan to spend the winter in Italy and Egypt. She says, "Come, where we spent a portion of last week, awoke pleasant memories of a far distant sonomhonic time when I strove with friend Pliny." Their address for the winter is care of Baring Brothers, 8 Bishopsgate St. (Within) London, E. C. England.

Percy Elliott, formerly of Wellesley, 1902, took her degree in 1902 at the University of Chicago. She has been teaching since that time in this country, until the fall of 1906, when she went out to Manilla, as teacher of Domestic Science in the American School. There are three other Wellesley girls in the city, Mrs. Frances Warren Pershing, 1901, Mrs. Mary (Polly) Storm Walthall, 1902, and Elizabeth M. Miller, 1906; so Miss Ellison reports frequent meetings of the Wellesley delegation in the Philippines.
