THE STUDIO RECEPTION.

Once a year, on a night in May, the big, dusty barn is transformed by the Tau Zeta Epsilon Society. The walls are wainscoted in dark green, against which etchings and pastels in dull gold stand out clearly, while all the angles of the long, bare room are softened by bits of tapestry, by tables holding jars of purple and white irises or apple blossoms, and pieces of gleaming copper and brass, or by quaintly-carved chairs. The center of interest, however, is upon the curtains at the far end of the "studio," which conceal the society's "ex-hibit" until the proper moment.

Last Saturday night the following eight pictures were given:

1. Easter Offering ....... Ethel Wright
   Model: Jessie Heber.
   Copley Gallery, Boston.
   Dame Gabriel Rossetti.
   Model: Sara B. Mitchell.

2. Doge of Venice ....... Howard Pyle
   Illustration for "Island of Enchantment"
   Model: Irving Rouse.
   Metropolitan Museum, New York.
   Model: Emily McClary.

3. Portrait ............... Andreas Horn
   Model: Esther Barbour.
   The Loving Cup.

4. The Loving Cup.
   Dante Gabriel Rossetti
   Model: Sara B. Mitchell.

5. Femme aux Cerises .... Edouard Monet
   Boston Museum.
   Model: Florence Ham.

6. Doge of Venice ....... Howard Pyle
   Illustration for "Island of Enchantment"
   Model: Irving Rouse.
   Metropolitan Museum, New York.
   Model: Emily McClary.

7. Broken Pitcher ....... Antoine Greuze
   Palais Luxembourg, Paris.
   Model: Josephine Bean.

8. Pot of Basil ........... John Alexander
   Boston Museum.
   Model: Caroline Ware.

"The Easter Offering" — a young girl in robes of pale yellow and blue, bringing her light to the altar, with a touch of awe on her face — was a very simple yet charming study, and especially good in the cleanliness and purity of its high lights.

"Jeanne d'Arc," in her peasant's dress of dull green and brown, against the stormy sky, listening intently for the voices, was an unusually difficult pose well held, and was, above all, very successful in the skillful blending of the lights and shadows.

The "Portrait" was that of a young woman in a flimsy white dress with black furs, leaning forward expectantly. The pose, though more or less conventional, had a certain freshness about it, and the tones of the black of the furs, and the delicate tints of the face and the bare neck, were reproduced so exactly that one instantly realized, without even a glance at the catalog, that it was a Horn.

To all lovers of Rossetti: "The Loving Cup" was a great pleasure and delight for the richness of color and the wealth of detail so carefully followed out. The slender figure in its deep red robe stood out strikingly against the intricate background, while the tender, mystical expression was as fleeting upon the face of the model as it is in the picture.

The "Femme aux Cerises" was a typical case, in a dainty gown of white, with touches of the grey of the woman's coat and skirt, in the exaggerated shadows, and in the one touch of color in the basket of cherries resting so carelessly in the hollow of her arm, the strangely shifting expression of the mocking eyes and mouth were especially admirable.

The "Dog of Venice" brought forth a murmur of appreciation the moment the curtains concealing it were drawn back. It was a splendid study in black and red, with the flat massing of the coloring brought out in clear contrast with the subtle whites of the official cap, and the deep lines of the stern face.

The picture which followed this was in sharp contrast to it as the black of the Doge's robes were to the red of his chair. From out of the big gold frame there looked a girl, slim, dark-eyed, dark-haired, in a dainty gown of white, with touches of pale pink, carrying gracefully a crumbling, broken pitcher. The high lights of the shimmering satin were perfectly caught, yet together with this delicate reproduction of the texture was the "flat" effect of painted satin, which is always difficult to obtain.

The last picture was perhaps the best of all in this unusually good "collection." The long flowing lines of the robes, the dreamy, uplifted face, the exquisite effects of the lights and shadows, the delicate yellow of the roses were all so perfect, that it was very hard to realize that "The Pot of Basil" was not really in the "Barn," until the "studio" until another year.

Christian Association Meeting.

A business meeting of the Christian Association was held on the evening of May 17, in College Hall Chapel. After the reading of the minutes, and the reception of new members, the president called the roll of the officers and of the members of the various committees, who have charge of the work of the Association.

The report of the Vice-President, Miss Reynolds, and Corresponding Secretary, Miss Francis Taft, and of the Treasurer, Miss Helen Gilmore, told the records of meetings, and correspondence, and of the expenses of the money receipts and expenditure. The Chairman of the Bible Study Committee, Miss Katherine Hazel, reported an enrollment of 456 in classes and, including those who joined Mr. Deminison's class, a total of 372. The Chairman of the Mission Study Committee, Miss Marian Durrel reported an enrollment of 324 in classes, and, including the reading circles which have been carried on for the last few weeks, a total of 456. The Chairman of the Religious Meetings Committee, Miss Caswell, reported the number and kind of meetings and the amount of the money given for missionary work during the year. There has been a large increase in the amount of money pledged for missionary work during the year. The Association, Miss Pauline Sage, also gave her report, telling the few words what her work has been during the year, routine duties of making calls, writing letters, and other duties not so easily tabulated, but imperative. Miss Sage also thanked the faculty and the board of directors for their hearty cooperation during the year. The last report of all came from the President, Miss Ruth French, who described briefly the growth of the Association from the year of twenty-second year. She showed that it has been a year of growth in three ways. First, in the increased interest in the study of the Bible, which must be at the foundation of strong Christian life. Second, the interest in mission study, that inevitable fruit of earnest Christianity. And; lastly, in the way in which the week of Prayer was observed this year. The prayer circles were earnest and spiritual, and the Day of Prayer an epoch in the deeper life of the Association. The lessons of prayer, hardest of all for the college student to learn, are impressing themselves upon the girls. Miss French quoted from Robert E. Speer: "Deeper than the need for men; deeper than the need for money; deeper down at the bottom of our spiritless life is the need for the forgotten secret of preserving, world-wide prayer." She said that this has been the year of change. First, by instituting the taking of a Sunday morning offering, and second, by challenging the associations by the Association to elect the President and Vice-President without a nominating committee. Last, Miss French spoke of the work that has been done. The Christian Association has brought the Kingdom of God nearer to us this year.
EDITORIAL.

It is a very old and very true saying that no two people are alike; this man excels along certain lines and that one along others, but it is astonishing how many people, with whom we are obliged constantly to deal, fall short along exactly the same line—that of responsibility. Perhaps one reason why so many fail to shoulder their responsibilities, is that they know that if they draw back long enough and persistently enough, some one else will step in and fill the breach, and they reason like Steele when he said: "I hate to carve, for if I keep the choicest piece I am a pig, and if I give it to my guest I am a fool." The words might be altered to fit the case, and run, "If I let so-and-so do that bothersome little task, I am a pig, but if I do it myself, when I might let him, I am a fool." But comparatively few stop to think it out in this way; in fact they fail to think about the matter at all, and that is one of the ways by which they let it slide.

Take such a simple and concrete thing as keeping promises. How many girls who have served as heads of committees, or on committees, or attempted any kind of co-operative work, have found that the average girl does just what she is expected to do, or just what she says she will do? Probably very few. The average girl does not do what she is expected, and reasonably expected, to do. However, she fails you in such unexpected ways, that it is impossible to be fore-armed. One girl will not do it at all; she forgets; she finds it is too arduous; she can't make time; or thinking it over she doesn't believe she can; or maybe she lightly admits that some one else will do it if she doesn't, so "away dull care." But the next girl does it,—at least she does something, but not what she was told to do. She is told to come at time; she comes at quarter past; she is told to prepare one thing and she prepares something else; she says she will be on hand in case of such-and-such circumstances, and when the circumstances develop she is "over the hills and far away." So it is, time and time again, and one's faith in human nature grows dim, and one's confidence begins to totter.

As for the few that are there, the few who do what they promise, when they promise, and in the way they promise, these stand out like strong rocks in a parched and weary land. Of course, in the natural order of things these few,—and they are startlingly few—shoulder about twenty times as much as they ought to, and the rest of the world takes it as a matter of course.

But after all, it is not so much the fact that everything would run more smoothly, and that a great deal more work would be accomplished if everyone did what he or she agreed to, but rather that the effect of not doing this, swings around like a boomerang and hits the sender. There is a certain loss in moral firmness which inevitably creeps in whenever one is not straining up to his fullest. The girl who obliges five people to wait eight or ten minutes for her pleasure or convenience has most surely lost her scale of values, to say nothing of a delicacy of perception, if she fails to see the injustice and unfairness of such an obligation. And the girl who will see another doing the very thing which she herself ought to be doing, is rapidly losing her sense of proportion and allowing her idea of balance to become sadly awry.

For, and we all know this, the reason that we turn to the girl who we know will do just what she says she will, is not so much because we know she will do it, but rather because we feel she will, and what we feel is always so much stronger than what we know. The little duties fulfilled, the petty obligations met and fulfilled, have woven into her character, and through that into her personality, an absolute integrity, to which we cannot help offering our trust.

It is worth while, it is quite worth while, and although we may not be able yet to carry our larger responsibilities, still we can try our best to shoulder them; and as far as the simpler ones, we may surely meet and fulfill them. A little thought, a little time—that is the prescription, and it yields most famous results. There is a quaint little compliment in Shakespeare that any of us might be glad to claim; it runs thus: "He was ever precise in promise keeping."

COLLEGE NOTES.

As a result of the trials held in the Debating Club the following girls have been selected to represent their respective classes in the Inter-Class Debates to take place soon. Gertrude Marvin, J. Isabel Newell from 1907; Charlotte Hubbard, Emma McCarrol from 1908; Marjorie Rimmer, Marion Savage from 1909. Grace Kilbourne, Mary Collett from 1910.

Many alumnae and former students have been visiting the college lately. Among them have been Helen Robertson, 1905; Sarah Woodward, 1905, Theodora Harrison, Lucie Weston, and Helen Keyser Sturgis, all formerly 1908.

A little while ago, members of the Social Study Circle enjoyed the hospitality of the Circulo Italo-Americano in Boston. They desire to show the appreciation of the Circle by giving a reception for the Circulo on May 30. All of the members are asked to give the group both personally and financially. At a meeting of the Science Club held Tuesday evening, May 14, in the Chemical Lecture Room, Dr. Henry P. Talbot of the Institute of Technology spoke on "Some Modifications of Old Notions Suggested by Recent Investigations." Dr. Talbot traced scientific investigations from the days of alchemy and spoke at some length on the principles and possibilities of radium.

The Class of 1910 had a prayer meeting at the Agora House, Monday evening, May 10. Frances Taft led the meeting; her subject was "The Holy Spirit." On Sunday, May 15, the following girls were received into membership of The Consumers: Josephine Butterfield, Martha Cecil, Mary Zabriski, and Isabel Ridgeway, all of 1909.

Owing to unforeseen difficulties it was found necessary to abandon the play which the Deutscher Verein had planned to give on Monday, May 20.

At a recent meeting of the Class of 1908, the following members of the Legenda Board were elected:

President.................................................................Lucy Tatun
Vice-President..................................................Margaret Erwin
Secretary..............................................................Isabel Rawn
Treasurer..............................................................Katherine Hazeltine
Associate Editors............................................Charlotte Hubbard

Art Editor-in-Chief........................................Evelyn Gifford
Associate Art Editors........................................Gertrude Mann, Emily Hathaway.

The election of Dorothy Hazard as Editor-in-Chief has already been announced.

A business meeting of the Southern Club took place on Thursday evening, May 16, at College Hall. The following officers were elected for 1907-08:

President.........................................................Ella Tiford, 1908
Vice-President..................................................Elizabeth Woodson, 1908
Secretary............................................................Elizabeth Anderson, 1908
Treasurer..............................................................Helen Owen, 1908.

The "Six Cups of Chocolate" was given at Denison House, on May 19, at the last play of the year. Gladys Doten, Mabel Hendrie, Helen Hartwell, Anne Benton, Helen LeGate, and Gladys Dempster took part. Marion Cole was chairman of the committee and Mae White danced before and after the play. A passage (upper berth in a room for two) on a Cunard steamer, the Umbria, sailing July 6th, is offered. The price is about the minimum of the line, and might still be somewhat reduced if the desired arrangements could be made. Further inquiry may be made at 138 College Hall.

The Burson Stocking is knit to shape in leg, ankle, heel, foot and toe without seam, corner or uneven thread anywhere. It keeps its shape.

ART LECTURE.

On Friday afternoon, May 15, Miss Jewett, of Mt. Holyoke, spoke to the students of the Art Department on Italian landscape and its relation to early Italian art.

In the days of Renaissance there was no such thing as landscape painting as we know it today. Needing a background to set their stories, the artists began to paint landscapes, symbolic at first, but gradually more and more realistic. Although by no means slaves to realism, such men as Ghirlandajo and Perugino felt the beauty of their loved Italy and transmitted it to their canvases. Miss Jewett showed stereopticon views illustrating how much of the atmosphere of even modern Italian country was to be found in the paintings of the old masters, or walled cities at the veen of some great mountain or hill with just such columns and towers as charm us in many a fourteenth century painting.

Next to the hills and roads we notice the Italian painters' use of trees. Passing by the graceful olive, perhaps because of its preoccupation with nature, they found inspiration in other typically Italian trees. The mulberry, much seen in vineyards, the umbrella-pine and cypress with its sharp-cut silhouette against the deep southern sky, the formal box, the sycamore with its vertical lines, and the delicate, feathery poplar, were all made use of, as were the pergolas and arbours so common in an Italian landscape.

In the first place, the traveller in Italy will see great ranges of mountains, sometimes hemming in the valleys in the foreground, sometimes rising steeply and presenting the sheer cliffs so often seen in Italian painting. Up the sides of these mountains wind well-kept white roads, ribbon-like. Because of the steepness of the ascent they are obliged to twist and turn constantly, giving us an extended view of them. This explains why the Province of the Magi was so often depicted as a great throng of people winding down a mountain road in just such a way. Such roads lead frequently to convents.

Italian architecture, also, was adopted as background for scenes purporting to be in any part of the world. For this end we see the use not only of convents, cities and churches but also of the great empty valleys and the ruins of the great Rome of the Pagans. However, although these familiar scenes fired the imagination of the beauty-loving painter, it must be understood that they were always inventive, it was the spirit and mood, not their borrowed, rather than any photographic copies.

HEMENWAY CHORAL CLUB CONCERT.

On Monday evening, May 15, at Billings Hall, the Choral Club from the Hemenway, Tyler Street, Boston, gave a very delightful concert. They came at the invitation of the College Settlement Club and were entertained for supper by that organization at the Zeta Alpha House. The program was:

"A Slumber Song"
"Forget-me-not"
"Lady of Shallot"

and the soloists were Mrs. Cook, Miss Fraser and Miss Douglass.

The work done by both club and soloists showed artistic ability both in discriminating choice of pieces, and in rendering the selections, and the finished production was undoubtedly the result of faithful tireless effort. Nearly $5.00 was made which the club is going to devote to founding a small musical library and in advancing the interests of the club next winter.

FAMINE RELIEF FUND.

Receipts from the treasurers of the Red Cross and the Russian Famine Relief Committee have been received by the College and made known to the students of the Art Department on cipher day last. The Red Cross has sent a bulletin which contains both an illustrated report of the Chinese famine conditions, and a statement of the measures which have been taken for relief. This will be found in the residency library. A subscription from the letter of Mr. Barrows, secretary of the Russian Famine Relief Committee is appended.

The second appeal receives this morning a check for $830.24, one half of the sum which has been contributed by the faculty and students of Wellesley College in aid of the sufferers of China and Russia. The committee appreciate most thoroughly not only the generosity of the membership, but also the sympathy which goes with it; fresh and grateful evidence that the students of Wellesley College are interested in the great social and humane questions of our day and that their sympathy extends even to distant sufferers of other lands. In transmitting our funds I shall take the pains to inform the representatives of the Russian Relief Associations of this contribution from Wellesley, and I am sure that the Russian teachers and students, many of whom are bravely giving of their time and scanty means to sustain the Famine kitchens, will be deeply impressed with this offering from one of the most representative women's colleges of the nation.

The money will be sent by cable as part of a large remittance, but I will write at once to our Russian correspondents informing them of this special gift.

ALUMNE NOTES.

This column will contain items concerning Alumni, former students, and present members of the Faculty. Other items will occasionally be added which are thought to be of especial interest to the readers of the Alumne Notes.

Miss Alice W. Wilcox, formerly instructor in Zoology at Wellesley, who is now teaching at Brown University, is planning a vacation trip in England this summer. She sails June 22.

At the meeting of the Boston Wellesley College Club last Saturday, May 11, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. Caroline Rogers Hill, 1908; Vice-President, Miss Cornelia Huntington, 1895; Secretary-treasurer, Miss Florence C. Hicks, 1905.

Miss Anna Pope, 1909, is to be Educational Secretary of the Detroit W. W. C. A. for the year 1907-1908.

Miss Annette H. Smolley, 1906, has left the University of Chicago, where she was working for her master's degree in Latin, and since the first of March has been teaching Latin in the High School at Port Huron, Michigan. For 1907-1908 she has accepted the position of teacher of Latin in the High School, Memphis, Tennessee. In this same school are Miss Elizabeth Dix, 1901, who is teaching English and French, and Miss Lydia Smolley, 1902, who is teaching science.

On Monday, May 13, Miss Caroline Jewell Cook, 1884, won a divorce case in the Suffolk Superior Court. This is the first time for five years that a woman has pled a case before this court. Miss Cook's conduct of her case was very warmly praised. Mrs. Marion Perrin Burton, 1891, spent a few hours with some of her old friends at Wellesley last week. Mrs. Burton is an active worker for Wellesley interests in her home in Rochester, New York.

Miss Mary Brigham Hill, 1893, who has been by ill-health obliged to make her home in California, may be addressed at the Washoe City Inn, Redlands, California.

Miss Rena Deverd Parker, 1901, has been working at the Pratt Institute, and is about to complete the Art and Manual Training Course.

Miss Corinne F. Hamilton, 1905, has been teaching Latin and History, French and Economics in the Vail-Dean School of Elizabeth, New Jersey.

Miss Mary Alice Emerson, President of the Class of '02, has been elected Professor of English Literature at Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota. Her duties will begin in September. At present she is the guest of Miss Louise Manning Hodgkins at Wilbraham, Massachusetts.

Three recent bulletins of the Observatory of California report the work of Miss Annie Estelle Glancy, 1905, in computing the orbits of comets and asteroids. Professor Watson left a fund to keep up accurate knowledge of the asteroids which he discovered. These Watson asteroids are in charge of the observatory of the University of California and Miss Glancy is chief computer in this work.

Kant and Fichte wish to protest against the implication of a recent editorial of the College News. They are highly flattered (this is no joke!) at being classified with “the most popular Freshmen” as diverting topics of conversation; but they object to being ruled out on discretion on “the special work” of the day.

To Kant it seems clear that the maxim “Act so as to use humanity...always as an end, never as merely a means” is not at all unlikely to lead up to the question “what can I do?”

Fichte contends that the man who roused all young Germany to arms is not to be reproached with encouraging “objectless dialectic.”

To be serious: is it not a mistake to try to divorce the practical from the theoretical and to oppose life to philosophy? By all means let us have a goal and discuss how to reach it, but let us take courses—if we may—of Darwin and Goethe, of early and modern. If we philosophize on philosophy, our philosophies are incorrect if they do not terminate in personal decisions; but, conversely, our practical choices are ungrounded ones if they are not based upon our best thinking.

At the risk of being dubbed a Heretic, I wish to put in a plea for the Comic Spirit. Unfortunately most people, and we Wellesley girls are no exception to the rule, fall into two classes, the sheep and the goats—in other words the frivolous and the intensely serious. There should be a way of merging these two, for they are by no means oil and water. A man or woman can be interested in the problems of life, or even indulge in a purpose with a capital P, and yet possess the saving grace of humor.

There is a lightness of touch found in such writers as Stevenson and Barrie, a play of fancy, a delicate sense of fun: there is also much keen and deep thought. Lewis Carrol was a learned mathematician. There is no need to enumerate further. But do let us strive to follow in the footsteps of men who have possessed the desirable combination of thoughtfulness and playfulness.

Last week there appeared in the College News a Free Press on the subject of “snap courses.” The student advanced the idea that it is not “grown up” to be seeking a royal road to learning. Then she proceeded to advise the uninitiated to elect such courses as especially appeal to them, things they like. It seems to me that that is not the right spirit either. The thing we want to do in college is to supplement ourselves. We need mental discipline. We are not particularly interested in some one or two lines of work, and there is little danger of our not trying to get all that we can in these lines. The danger comes in the narrowness of selecting “what we like” and nothing but what we like, when all of us must confess that there is so much that we need, which we do not particularly like, and which may not be particularly easy for us. If we do not take these things in college, we will probably never have them.

The girl who is interested in literature, for instance, and who finds it very enjoyable, perhaps does not like sciences and more practical studies, and carefully avoids economics and history. Yet it is by studying such things that she will strengthen her work in her own line. Many instructors in literature advise students intending to specialize in that work to take zoology. One English to “shark” told me that mathematics had done much in teaching her to write. Let us be strong-minded and choose neither what upper-class girls recommend as snaps, nor what our own bent will make easy for us, but what we actually need.

OTHER COLLEGES.

An opportunity for summer study on the continent. Season of 1907.
University summer courses, chiefly in Modern Languages, are offered to foreigners in the following cities: Bayeux, Besançon, Boulogne-sur-Mer, Caen, Dijon, Grenoble, Honfleur, Lille, Paris, Saint Malo, Tours, Villefranche in France; Berne, Geneva, Lausanne, Neuchatel in Switzerland; Grieswalt, Jenau, Königsberg, Marburg, Neuried in Germany; and Santander in Spain.

A new university for women was founded in Tomsk, Siberia, last January, as the existing University was unable to accommodate all the women students who applied for admission. More than one hundred native young women of Tomsk immediately registered and as many more flocked to the new seat of learning from the outlying districts. The founding of the new university of Tomsk is due to the generosity of Madame Sergien, Paris.

Princeton's great professor of English Literature, Dr. Van Dyke, has resigned his position on account of literary work.—Ex.

Indiana University has established a department of journalism. The first two years of the course will be devoted to English, History, Languages and Mathematics. In the third year the major work will be devoted to journalistic subjects, history and the theory of newspaper making. The fourth year will be given to practical experience. Courses of lectures by prominent newspaper men will be given throughout the course.—Ex.

Princeton defeated Harvard and Yale in the annual debate this year.—Ex.

A class in the new universal language, Esperanto, has been organized at Ohio State, the first Ohio college to take the step.—Ex.

THE AMHERST "TWELFTH NIGHT."

The Amherst College Dramatic Association, who will present Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" at Wellesley Town Hall on the twenty-fourth of this month, has received very favorable criticisms in the various cities visited by them. A member of the English Department at Smith College is quoted as having said that the play was the best thing of its kind ever given at Northampton; and to be asked to repeat the performance there during "Prom." week at Smith is considered by the Amherst cast as the greatest honor yet received.

To those who had the pleasure of seeing the fine performance of "Twelfth Night" at Wellesley last June, the coming presentation will be of unusual interest.

MUSIC NOTES.

There will be a concert by the Wellesley College Orchestra and the Wellesley College Choir at Billings Hall on Monday evening, May 27, 1907, at 7:30. Tickets for reserved seats are fifty cents each, admission twenty-five cents. The sale of tickets for the general public will begin on Saturday, May 10, and continue daily from 9:30 to 11:30, A.M., and from noon to 6 P.M., at Room C, Billings Hall. On the evening of the concert tickets will be for sale at the door, but no more than the seating capacity of the hall will be sold. Orders sent to Miss Wheeler through the Resident Hall will be filled in order of application, if accompanied by the money. The proceeds of the concert will be devoted to paying the expenses of the orchestra.
