The important season for those interested in sports in now in full swing. There is not much time before Field Day, but in these few weeks every member of a sport is doing her best. It would be well while for you who are not enrolled in our games to walk over to the West Woods some afternoon to see everyone at play, and to encourage the teams by your presence. Show your class spirit now by being interested in those who are going to represent you on Field Day.

For 1914 especially, the Athletic Association would like to add a word of welcome. We hope that you are going to enter the spirit of our sports at once. Come out to the West Playground and watch the different games so that, when it is time to join in the spring, you will know more about them. We want you all in our sports.

Everything is in fine condition. The grounds are better than ever, and a new archery field and six new tennis courts will soon be ready for use. Moreover, every sport is well supplied with excellent coaches, something which has never been a reality before this year. With your aid the season of 1910-1911 will be one of the best we have ever had.

Agnes Roche, President of the Athletic Association.

Dr. Coffin’s Address.

On Thursday evening, October thirteenth, Dr. Henry S. Coffin spoke at the Christian Association meeting on “Jesus as a Church Member.” Jesus’ attitude toward the church of his time, Mr. Coffin said, was that of a debtor. He had been born into the fellowship of the Jewish Church, and through it had been led into the higher fellowship which He found with His Father. Therefore, He felt that on the Sabbath, His place was in the synagogue, and there He could be found. He felt that there was the stimulus of common worship and fellowship necessary to His life. It is a significant fact that Jesus recognized this, in spite of His spiritual independence. To-day, there are many good Christians who never go near a church, but derive their religious inspiration elsewhere. It is true that there are other sources of inspiration—yet the Life of Lives was not self-sufficient; Christ needed the church. No doubt the sermons of the scribes bored Him; He could perhaps gain nothing from the teachings; yet the fact remains, He went. He regarded the church, too, as the best opportunity for investing His own powers. It gave Him a place from where He could make His personality common, where He could learn to know and be known.

Dr. Coffin concluded his talk by speaking of more practical aspects of the church problem. He said that if the church of to-day, with its wealth of sentiment, its faith, its possibilities for the future, were taken away, our country would be more poverty-stricken than we can imagine. Yet many people do not enter churches, because of the barrier of denominational differences. “If you belong to an army,” said Dr. Coffin, “you do not disagree with the purpose of the army, because your regiment is unlike another. Your regiment works as well as do the others for the cause. Enter the church into which you were born if you can. If you are not satisfied, go in; if you are perfectly satisfied, don’t go in!”

Dr. Coffin emphasized the difference which one’s attitude upon entering a church can make. Complicity, absolute satisfaction, is fatal. Rather should one be striving after an ideal church, trying to make it stand on a ground where every stranger will feel at home; doing away with cliques, and the wholesome feeling of the spiritually elite; working from the inside for betterment in every way. It is most valuable for a church to have college women enter who have been trained for some service; who can throw whole-hearted enthusiasm into the Sunday-school or missionary work. They will bring new ideas, doubts, and many differences of opinion from the older, “settled” members; yet they will find that these older people are working for the same aim, with the same purpose and interest.

Mrs. Parks on Suffrage.

Mrs. Parks, the secretayr of the Boston Equal Suffrage League, spoke at the church rooms, at $558 Boylston street, last Friday, on “The Movement in England.” She told of the extraordinary and universal enthusiasm of the women, their many organizations, their clever methods of advertising, their marvelous success at the great Hyde Park demonstraion in June 23. She told of the results of the suffragettes’ work in the movement in America. She told of the charming spirit of the suffrage movement: A young woman, very charming and demure, lead the party to an open space on the pavement of a crowded street, stopped there, and wrote with chalk the following legend: “Come in your Millions.”

The movement for women’s rights is reaching a new phase of development. "It is a time of triumph," said Mrs. Parks. "The way is open for the women of all nations to take their right place in the world of affairs."

Deaths.

October 13, 1910, of pneumonia, Miss Caroline Frances Pierce, Wellesley, 1894, and head librarian of the college since 1904. The funeral was on October 17, at the home of her parents in Northampton, Massachu- setts, and on the evening of that date a memorial service was held in Houghton Memorial Chapel.

October 15, 1910, at Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, Miss Margaret Elizabeth Gray, of the Class of 1914.
EDITORIAL.

Our indignation, both personal and communal, has been smouldering for a long time, and we seize with avidity this opportunity of turning it to good purpose in a defence of the college woman. We have listened to and read distorted accounts of her "attitude", her "dissatisfaction" with herself and her education, of her lack of preparation for her "life work" of housekeeping and homemaking; we have been silent through arrayments of her shallow "general culture," and barren "specialization," until silence becomes a guilty admission.

One of the most noticeable of the articles referred to above appeared in a recent number of a popular woman's monthly—you may remember it as charmingly illustrated with portraits of sweet American girlhood, her hair unbound, entwined with artificial flowers. The author writes, and the remark appears again in a headline, "It prepares men, but not women."—"It" being a college education—and follows up this pithy statement by recounting the tale of a youth, who is now a successful money-maker because he studied engineering when at college, while his sister.

As for the girl who has lacked this home training, it is not amiss to ask whether she has not somewhat better off after four years of college training than the society girl at home, who is equally ignorant of domestic cares, and quite undesirous of interesting herself in them. The college girl is at least "dissatisfied" and wants to learn, —even "the young person of twenty-four," previously referred to, seems to have that ambition—and with the balance and common sense which she should have gained through the years of mental discipline at college, her success should not be far off—for mental discipline and common sense have a lot to do with bread-making.

EDITORIAL—Continued.

Again, it is said that the college graduate, returning to a small town, finds her knowledge and experience of little value to her. In a place where Schopenhauer and the Preraphaelites are seldom on a par with Myrtle Reed and Harrison Fisher, the college girl is like the proverbial fish out of water. It is true an alumna once exclaimed that she found it impossible to settle down at home, "she'd been so used to the society of geniuses." But this girl was a most unusual girl. Most graduates, who do not enter professions or continue their studies in wider fields, soon find their places at home helping out their families, very often taking part in the movement for social and municipal improvement, making the community a better and richer place for their being in it. The dissatisfaction of the college woman arises chiefly from the poverty and squallor, intellectual as well as social, that she awakes to upon first viewing the work-a-day world with the eyes of maturity. And if her discontent lead her to help others from the riches of her store, let us recognize it as a "divine discontent;" not the discontent of one who pessimistically views herself and her attainments as wasted and useless, but as the discontent of the idealist, the discontent of one who works for progress and better things.

BIBLE STUDY COURSES.

The courses in Bible Study which are offered this year are as follows:

1. A course entitled "The Christian Life," open to all students of the college, but intended primarily for Freshmen. This course is based on a handbook of suggestions in daily readings as starting-points for thoughts. Classes will be held in the village and will be led by members of the Village Committee.

2. A course entitled "The Service of God in the Lives and Teachings of the Leaders of Israel," open to Sophomores only, and designed to supplement academic Bible study. Normal study classes for the training of leaders of the Sophomore classes will be conducted by Miss Wheelock.

3. A course called "The Teachings of Jesus," open to Juniors only, and intended to supplement the academic Bible study. Normal study classes for the training of leaders of the Junior classes will be conducted by Miss Calder of the American Missionary Association.

4. A course on "Modern Sunday-school Methods and Aims," open to Seniors only.

Now the committee is going to tell you something you have heard many times before. We are eager for the largest enrolment in Bible Study courses this year that Wellesley has ever known. We earnestly ask you for your heartiest cooperation. Why? That we may feel our work to be faithfully and successfully carried out? That the college may show its gratitude to the members of the Bible faculty who have worked unceasingly and devotedly during the summer? Of course you know that we have far bigger, grander reasons than these. It is because the Bible is such a living reality in our lives, because we cannot come to our fullest development, or fulfill our ideals without it, that Bible study is not only important but necessary. We of the committee do not ask you to study the Bible for its literature—beautiful as it is—but for its history—we have that through academic Bible study, but we do ask you to study it for a knowledge of the meaning and purpose of life—for the "peace which passeth understanding." Do these remarks sound like truism to you? Then it is the writer's fault, and not her subject. Enter the Bible class and you will see.

FIRE BRIGADE NOTICE.

Girls, let us make the fire drills and the other necessary precautions against fire as useful and effective as possible this year. I am sure we all realize their importance in buildings as large as our campus houses. The college has provided the escapes and the apparatus, and has left it to Student Government to train the girls in the use of them. Since the members of the Fire Brigade are the ones to whom you have given the responsibility of accomplishing this, we trust you to do your share in the work by co-operating in what we try to do to lessen the danger from fire.

The officers of the Fire Brigade for the year 1910-1911 are as follows:

College Hall—Ida Brooks, 1912.
Stone Hall—Alberta Peltz, 1912.
Beebe—Dorothy Bowden, 1912.
Shafter—May Gorham, 1912.
Cassenove—Sue McCroddan, 1912.
Pomeroy—Josephine Little, 1912.
Norumbega—Helen Cross, 1912.
Freeman—Lydia Brown, 1912.
Wildier—Sue Newell, 1912.
Wood—Mildred Washburn, 1912.
Eliot—Frances Gray, 1912.
Fiske—Anna Summer, 1912.
Noanett—Edith Ryder, 1914.
Crofton—Nell Brach, 1914.

Show your loyalty to Wellesley and to Student Government, girls, by supporting these fire-captains in the important work they have to do.

Leader of the Fire Brigade.

Vocations for the Trained Woman.

The News wishes to call attention to a recent publication by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union of Boston. It is entitled "Vocations for the Trained Woman," and is edited by Miss Agnes F. Perkins of the Department of English Composition in this college. The purpose of the book as set forth in the preface is "to suggest to women who are unqualified for teaching, but who are apt to drift into it because it is the vocation with which they are most familiar... and to others about to choose an occupation, some lines of work now open to them and the equipment which they should have to justify a hope of success in any given line."

With this in view, research work was begun principally in New York and Boston in 1906, and the above-mentioned publication has resulted. It is a collection of articles, written for the most part by men and women working in those two cities or in the states of New York and Massachusetts. The articles cover a number of fields of activity, and have been grouped under the following headings: articles concerning "Social and Economic Service," "Scientific Work," "Domestic Science and Arts," "Agriculture," "Business," "Clerical and Secretarial Work," "Literary Work," "Art," and "Special Forms of Teaching."

Under the heading, "Social and Economic Service," are treated such forms of employment as civil service, police matron service, probation work, work in organized charities, child saving and reformatory work, rent collecting, settlement work, and so on. Under "Scientific Work," work in chemistry, biology, and in museums. Under "Domestic Science and Arts," institutional management, the management of hotels, restaurants, and the like, dressmaking, millinery, and interior decorating. Under "Agriculture," farming in its various aspects, landscape gardening and forestry. In the field of business are considered opportunities in department stores, in advertising, in banking, real estate and insurance. Clerical and secretarial work is treated in its general aspect, and more particularly under private-secretary work and secretarial work in the business office. The kinds of literary work considered are literary work, newspaper and magazine work, indexing and translating. Under "Art" we have illustrating, designing and museum work; and under "Special Forms of Teaching," vocational teaching, teaching mental defects and physical education.

Each article is supposed to cover "the nature of the work in question, the training necessary or desirable, the opportunities and compensation." It is, of course, impossible here to present any detailed account of the material given in the three hundred pages of the book, but a few salient features stand out as typical of the articles in general. First, almost without exception, they emphasize the need of love for, and interest in, the chosen line of work as being of importance in the successful, even moderate success. In the second place, for almost every vocation mentioned, either a decided natural aptitude for the work, or experience or definite training in addition to that gained in college, is desirable. As regards "opportunities and compensation," it is noticeable that in all the positions where women are working under others and for salaries, advancement is very limited and salaries small in consideration of the work, much smaller than those received by men in similar stations; that the women who are achieving the greatest amount of success and gaining the largest incomes are those who are working independently for themselves.

The book is published by Macmillan & Company, at the modest price of thirty cents. It is well worth the while of the Wellesley girl who proposes seeking some definite employment on leaving college, or who is interested in the economic position of the professional woman.
FREE PRESS.

I.

Poor, downtrodden, disheartened Wellesley! Surely it is no wonder that since 1903 came to college our numbers have dwindled from 813 to 1,370! Seriously, that is the impression people would get from the tone of many of the recent Free Press articles; whereas most of us know that our college is a beautiful place of high endeavor and happiness, and trust that it is growing for the best in every way. Of course, such growth means "growing pains," but the good-form columns would tell us that it is not correct to speak too much of such things. Remember, you writers for Free Press, that your extremely individual opinions are taken by many readers of the News as expressions of the attitude of the whole college; and also, you who should write for Free Press, but do not, remember that sometimes material is so scarce that the editors cannot so select as to control entirely the personnel of the week's issue. Also learn that the exercise of critical ability, though sometimes clever, is more often cheap, while to try to right things through appreciation and loyal cheerfulness shows sure and deep-founded knowledge. 1903.

The News strongly recommends that contributors to the Free Press column do not confine themselves solely to adverse criticism of "things as they are," but so far as is possible to add to such criticism a constructive policy of "things as they ought to be." By so acting they will do away with the attitude of fault-finding, of which we have been repeatedly accused by outsiders, and add to the dignity of the News as a whole.

THE EDITOR.

II.

From the point of view of a hockey player, I do not think that athletics are in danger of becoming too "academic," as has been suggested. On the contrary, the improved coaching system has made the game much more interesting on account of the increased opportunity for improvement in both individual and team work. Hockey is much more fun when you understand the game thoroughly, and such was not always the case in the old days. As for sports counting towards a degree, it seems to me rather illogical not to enjoy doing something just because you get credit for it. I don't see why it should interfere with your enjoyment of the game or with the customary excitement due to intercollegiate rivalry on Field Day.

THE EQUAL SUFFRAGE LEAGUE.

The first meeting of the Wellesley Equal Suffrage League was held at Agora on Tuesday evening, October eleventh. The elections for the coming year were as follows: Almyra Morgan, President; Jeanne Guyot, Secretary-treasurer; Mary Daley, 1908, Leah Bleazzy and Marjory Stoneman, Members of the Executive Board.

Any member of the college, excepting Freshmen, is eligible to full membership. An amendment to the constitution, subject to the approval of the Academic Council, was passed by the league, offering associate membership to all, excepting Freshmen, who do not approve of suffrage for women, but who desire to study the question. The names of associate members will be sent in to the state league, nor will a portion of their dues be contributed, as in regular membership. Informal meetings will not be open to persons outside of the league. The Welleseley League promises fine speakers for the coming winter. A cordial invitation is extended to all to join in our membership.
