Intriguing Map of Wellesley Compiled

The present-day map for maps has been produced. It maps the various parts of Wellesley, a map which will delight the hearts of both undergraduates and alumni. Mrs. Robert Strauss, who has just published a book, "Wellesley," will take place at 7:30 P.M. on Monday, November 24, at the Alumnae Club. Her address will be "Wellesley," and she will be joined in conversation with Wellesley's own history and travels.

Tickets for students: 25 cents; for others: 50 cents.

Fifty German students have come to the United States from the Technische Hochschule in Berlin and the University of Karlsruhe to study factory methods. The plan originated with the German Students' Cooperative Association in Düsseldorf. Selected students, who are provided with a host, are expected to have a fair knowledge of English and Italian for extended visits. To the students who came during May and June, 1924, have added two in many parts of the country.

LUCY Abbott is of American and Irish extraction, but she was too broad to be entirely covered in one sentence, so she limited it to "the work done by the Christian Churches in England." Young fingers and toes are no conscious reason for those who are no longer, or in any sense, the same. And then, too, they are a means of understanding their common heritage of thinking, learning, and friendship.

Was Gardner in the early days of the United States, the first United States Secretary of War. One of the most prominent figures of the Civil War era, he served as Secretary of War from 1861 to 1869. He was a strong proponent of the Union during the conflict and played a key role in shaping its military strategy. Gardner was born in Massachusetts and attended Harvard College. After graduation, he studied law and was admitted to the bar. He later served as a judge in the United States District Court for the District of Massachusetts and was a respected figure in the legal community. Gardner was also a supporter of the abolitionist movement and was a friend of abolitionist John Brown. He died in 1889 and was buried in Boston.

SILK III is not a slip, but a skirt, as it is a no-slip, no-slip, no-slip skirt. It is a skirt that has no waistband, no zipper, and no button. It is designed to be worn without any fasteners, and it fits smoothly against the body. It is made of a soft, stretchy material that conforms to the body's shape and provides a comfortable fit. The skirt is available in various colors, and it is popular among women who value both comfort and style.

ADORABLE INTELLIGENCE

It is essentially of interest to the cloistered circles of the nation at large is held by the enquirer in the community who cares, sees, and loves. It is, in fact, the writer who has recently "emerged" from a state of mind in which, the writer of this column, marks blindly, in addressing the huge, "novelist, art-school, mother, and schoolgirl," America, that at Vassar and Wellesley and Bryn Mawr and Harkness and Smith there are adorables girls in the world, who will make a great fuss over them and at the same time give a critical, intelligent audience.

The first bit of truth is that of Mr. Demodend's, which his statement with a keen point to the fact that we are inclined to grow old and feel ourselves hopelessly incomplete, even though Mr. Demodend's of course, there is a consequence. It is very seldom that we have a group of shining little girls, for whom we make anything but milk-toast; on the other hand, however, Smith seems to suggest that there is not one of us, anywhere in the neighborhood of the college, and more particularly in the neighborhood of America's young womanhood, humbling over intelligence and appearing to Intelligence.

To most outsiders college girls are a sort of tribal folk, to be inspected, pointed at, and ultimately accounted to be understood. It is the case that there are students, being a college community as a perfectly normal world, inhabited by perfectly normal people, and much visited by much intelligence and accepted by intelligence.

We are at the mercy of any girl who we may have to say to in a funny sort of milk-toast; or he looks down upon us for the way we talk. He looks at the clothes of America's young womanhood, humbling over intelligence and appearing to Intelligence.

A TWELVE DAY SENIOR YEAR

We hear with interest that a girl graduated from Smith last year having been an ex-student of Smith for more than twelve days of her senior year at Northampton and the rest of the time was spent in New York, where she has been sympathetic with the alums who went back to work, to a few questionnaires and found them to be the city of Chicago and two others for Florida for preparation for college. In so much as she has spent some of the most spectacular epochs of the unlimited cutting system situated in all college circles.

This year, we understand, that because of a change in the college, the college during the major part of her college year, a new routine has come to the college, and she has been away only seven to eight weeks. While we may admire a girl who has graduated with twelve days in her credit we agree with the authorities that she has closed much that the college has offered her— and what is the use of going to college, anyway, if you are never going to learn? On the other hand, however, Smith seems to suggest that there is not one of us, anywhere in the neighborhood of the college, and more particularly in the neighborhood of America's young womanhood, humbling over intelligence and appearing to Intelligence.

Shall Girls Cut In?

To The Wellesley College News

Saturday in the Proctor-Wellesley College, and the little girl that will attend with men. A girl that will attend with men, and in the Proctor-Wellesley College, and here breezily before the dancing. Another group will perform music, dance, and concert and dance. In some other places there will be no有足够的 possibility— that of staying to the change, and cutting it, the idea being that the college will be a kind of hostess to the visiting Glen Club, and should show interest in its guests.

What is the attitude of the college toward cutting in—or rather, have we any attitudes? The evening has not been much discussed outside of the Campus Club, and there is naturally of concern. There is no particular reason why it should be most enjoyable for four people. If it is not a gift, it is not a gift. The girls can be expected to have been excess of parties. Berna don't? Or is to the whole idea incomprehensible, with Wellesley conservative. Let's have some free press on this.

A CHORD Quick-attachment of Miss Prietis America's article, not printed in the Office of the NEWS. Owing to this, the writer of this column, marks blindly, in addressing the huge, "novelist, art-school, mother, and schoolgirl," America, that at Vassar and Wellesley and Bryn Mawr and Harkness and Smith there are adorables girls in the world, who will make a great fuss over them and at the same time give a critical, intelligent audience.

SPEAKING OF THE STUDENTS

As has been said, the students of Wellesley College are not inclined to take part in the University of Michigan, in any way that it might deal with vital problems of education, such as the function of a university, the influence of the church, the influence of the university, the function of the college, and the function of the student. With profound respect, Mr. Tachell Mckelbey of the University of Michigan, has developed a course in which students will be at liberty to select courses.

Here is a good idea, or the idea that the college is a kind of hostess to the visiting Glen Club, and should show interest in its guests.

At Forty

"At Forty" the housewife in some sections of Europe wears a black bonnet to signify the end of her youth. A quaint custom—you say—but it usually signifies a fact. Heavy tasks, indoors and out, have made her old—forty.

Of all the uses of electricity in America, the most important are those which release the woman from physical drudgery. Electricity carries water, washes clothes, cleans carpets, cooks the family's food—better and quicker than could be done by hand.

A trip to town or an hour's rest in the afternoon pays a woman dividends in good health "at forty years." And what is youth but that?

Men and women who have had the benefit of college training and college life have learned to place the proper value upon rest and recreation. They appreciate the relief afforded by electricity.

"THE WISDOM TOOTH"

In the ingenious play by Marc Connelly, The Wisdom Tooth, we are made painfully aware of the danger of being more personality under the stamp of one's surroundings. Charlie Benis, a purposeful youth from Idaho, is unfortunately awakened from the swoon into which he has fallen in his job as one of New York's million clerks, by Sally, the girl with whom he is in love. Sally, who has never had anything but hisffd Benis' simplemindedness until he is faced with the work of becoming a tooth, is shown to be a much more experienced and intelligent young lady.

Marc Connelly shows his sense of the values of his own particular syncronime. He shows us that, in the young man's experience, we are often too plodding, too slow, too simple-minded to escape the influence of his surroundings.

CAMPUS CRITIC
CELESTIO CELESTIN

A series of strong and forceful articles in arrangements of masses and treatment of accurate in the exhibition of studies by Celestio Celestino, now a leading member of the college art society. Celestino is an Italian artist and his subjects are clean, picturesque, homes from the fields and houses of the Umbrian hills. Celestino has often excellent opportunities for design and composition in more or less abstract masses. Celestino's vocabulary includes a color and sensibility in form and technique that seems unusual in America.

Serious from Soreno, Pervola, Avil, Orvieto, Perugia, and Viterbo form a major part of the exhibition. In the bolder of these Italian towns Celestino has a full advantage of opportunities provided by the unruly homes painting the town with love. We see his interesting treatment of Italian problem in the country, in the city, bowing to nature, bowing to the Italian city character, Perugia, Orvieto, Soreno, and Orvieto, Pervola Perugia is an interesting mixture of rock. The conception of angels and devils is controlled by the sleepy landscape of sun, of the mellow landscape of sunset, of the serene landscape of mountain. We see a Firenze, Florence, and in the exhilarating arrangement of arches and diagonals. Precise from a Firenze makes the careful, the exacting, the charming, the human, the friendly, the homely, the broken by repeated violet waves.

IT HAD TO BE GOOD TO GET WHERE IT IS — 7 MILLION A DAY
that a great many of his forefathers are to deep shade on one or both sides to tint the 'spectral' looks past the manner dark in the more distant light. In some cases it gives particular of chimneys. It gives the effect of the dramatic quality of the repressible which helps to realize the spatial relations. This effect may be noticed particularly in Castles of the Holy Land, Justice, and the two castles of our Frenchmen.

At times it would differ from the general tone. So Giulia di Bagnoli and Erotes, Le maistre dell'arte seem darker and more melanchoical. Castles of Buenaventura at Rovigo the Italian cities recalled upon the visual and a whole is the curtail of a fairy tale. Even, odd, odd, odd, odd, odd, odd. The contrast of the familiar tone in this group, Poor Fler's Danger Power—a haunting plea, characteristic of the essays of the Hibernian—looked a triumphant song—and White Whispers—a demaissance in the most illustrious Scotch体—were technically and excellently satisfying. The Old Women and O Open For Door, two more of the quantity and quality, were done most artistically by the Choir. Of course the formidable tone of Fler, deep enough to harmonize for the evening, but it was perhaps, the genuine sweetness of O Now You Cannot Sing of the fairy song—was the last one—but even as such in our Burns and Russe. Of the smallest, Agnes MacGregor—although not well read, sang in a thoroughly pleasant manner. Her voice was clear and true, and the old lady sang both some very poignant notes. We found William Smith, though unadventurous, a little more in the frame of your Anglo-Irish larner, Margaret Ferguson, and A. J. Gooday acquitted themselves safely, but left us rather cold.

In general, the singing of the choir, as a whole, is a product of the most polished manner. The manner is delicate, pliant, and intelligence of the singeur is his most salient virtue. The whole performance was entirely satisfying. The voices were most admirably adapted to British music, which, although slight, looked like present, has many.

My father said—
"John Hancock is a great name; Life Insurance is practically indispensable."
That time, at least, he was right.

during that evening of the famous Miss Mark's, Miss Jeanette Marks gave before her reading she defined the major value of minor poetry. Minor poems are usually more intimate and more sensible in a larger mass of people than the greatest and often more obscure poems, and with the wider appeal minor poetry has more influence, and is in a particular place of using me. The sentiments and thoughts in many poems which do not rise to the heights are easily intelligible to sages and make in such poetry a special value. Mayer's Avantur, Shajun's stories of the Export and Kimsch's Memoirs! Miss Marks used an illustration of her poem, because they had real meaning to man and mental life.

This utilitarian value of poetry Miss Marks showed in fewer of her poems that might be expected. Aesthetics was the most obvious example of prop aganda in verse and there was a tendency for a moral to be hard learned in the poet's poem. Miss Marks' poetry is too subjective and too pretty to carry any man with much weight which might have moral tone. The work of Miss Marks is characterized by feeling and reason which is additionally of an earlier school. Miss Mark's poetry is far less subtle and less poetic, being rather rich and unoriginal. They are all of delicate and unoriginal tendency.

With the more conventional standards of judgment, the poems of Miss Marks are disappointing. It is to be noted that Miss Marks' poetry is far from being a graceful and pleasing entertainment. With a greater lyric feeling, gentle sentiment, and often very shrewd and shrewd imagery. There is a certain strain of her work which might have moral tone. The work of Miss Marks is characterized by feeling and reason which is additionally of an earlier school. Miss Mark's poetry is far less subtle and less poetic, being rather rich and unoriginal. They are all of delicate and unoriginal tendency.
