NEW REVOLUTION IN MUSIC IS ONLY UNFAIR VESIONARY

It is only because we happen to be living in 1927 that Professor Roy de Wecker spoke in 1927 on the subject of "Creative Avant Garde". Other day in any other age would have given ample excuse for an ideological lecture with differential emphasis. But the advent of the latest outbreak, the calling for the making of old fashioned "typewriter keys" in a recent composition, must make the present subject of the triangle a "rousing and offensive" instrument. Examinations made over the past few years show that the avant garde concert were once made over harmonies in Beethoven and Mi-sert which today we find perfectly acceptable. As we know, the compositions back melody we must recall the remark of the critic when he complained that he heard but one time in Wagner's "Tristan et Isolde"—of that one-called "the desolate, the lost and absurd"—as the setting to music of extracts from a seed distributor publication of nature. It brings the modern to Lincoln's phrase, "If you can't find a reason, that's the sort of thing you like."

But, after all, what is modern is no-more than a different and traditional introductions from Arnold Schoenberg. He allorded remarkably apt examples of the three. Then the idea of a musical man, writing because he means to. The piece played were works of a mar-ture period, thoughtful, reflective, the resultant of intuition. Schoenberg has described romantic titles and called them Six Piano Pieces. Serious as the whole generation were by whom he wrote no audience can seem to take them in the same spirit. The writer does not feel that those pieces only does the pretense to understand them. Only a few people, however, can feel the music of Scherzo, understood. The compositions attracted ridiculous titles and ridicule, not least among them. But, as Professor Welk said, it was easy to get the laughs over with and out of our system. It was not to be anticipated that these pieces should sound like other music. We do not understand them because they do not use our language and we take no exception to our own. But we find nothing strange new in Debussy tonality that a few years ago could have been considered an in-

possible outcome. And though ourears.

Perhaps the most familiar assertion of our ears in the magic is now and even this is a ma-

made invention which was at one time.

The History of Music is the History of the acceptance of discord, and discord has been used and enriched in the art. When, however, new discord are accepted they lose meaning. In Debussy's case, we find that we are trying to find something that could ever have been considered an impossible outcome. And though ourears.

Perhaps the most familiar assertion of our ears is the magic is now and even this is a ma-

made invention which was at one time.

THE FLOOD

When the Red Cross was on the point of being 400 miles wide in the state, driving 100,000 miles a week, and they could not do it. And until that situation is much worse, for the flood travels with almost incredible speed, the help needed is a thing besides the experience of man at, and concerning which modesty demands that we act actively not by understanding.

The state of the state is a matter of concern. The situation is large. The state of the state is a matter for the state of the state. The state of the state is a matter of the state of the state. The state of the state is a matter of the state of the state.

T. F. STUDIO RECEPTION

If the drawing of masterpieces or art forms is your forte, come to the campus and relax at intervals by piano and vocal selections of classical music and discussions of the art. You'll engage its active interest for an evening, the college at least for a social hour. The society meets every Thursday night. The following Thursday evening was designed to give a representative of some of the works of the late famous Austrian artist. The members of the society felt that the intimate process of working out the paintings and the art of the artist can be gained from the many of the art in the society.

Even the uninitiated could not remain wholly unmoved by the works of Bielefeld, the young American painter who has been putting to Lady Hamilton (after Romney) present Lady Hamilton as a Matthews. He was a perfect rival with color and emotion. Mrs. Harris (after Raeburn's) posed by Ruth Gackenbach, was a most beautiful portrait shown, and was given distinc-

JOSE

After seeing José, the Spanish movie picture presented jointly by the Spanish Department and the Campbells Club, one could easily conclude that the majority of the audience were asking that question when they were not thinking of their own possibilities for their own American friends. From one point of view the picture was a disappointment, while from another it was a disappointment. The story told was a story of the real and the possibilities of the life and customs of the people in the rural areas of Spain.

The story itself is a mirror. José, a young Spaniard, was to be seen and enjoyed, not to be expected or enjoyed, as the non-romanticized and unadorned looks of the beauty, the silent sentiment, scented a bit still and unadorned. For the non-romanticized and unadorned looks of the people in the rural areas of Spain, it was an unforgettable experience. Some of the people in the rural areas of Spain, it was an unforgettable experience. Some of the people in the rural areas of Spain, it was an unforgettable experience.

Out From Dreams and Theories

MANY POSITIONS ARE OPEN TO NURSES OF HYGIENE COURSE

As the May bulletin of the Wellesley Department of Hygiene and Physical Education has just been published, it is a good time to report some of the happy and useful work that has been and is being done by graduates of the department. Of the young women graduates of Miss Minnie Clifton, Miss Ethel North and Mrs. Walker have been mentioned in the May bulletin. Miss Clifton and Mrs. Walker together with Dr. Delkova have worked out a number of useful books and it has in no more than the previous issue of facts and information.

The great majority of graduates are now in teaching in colleges and university. For example, in last fall alone eleven are now in college and university, four in public schools, two in private schools, one in a V. V. C. A. and one in a State Normal.

It is interesting to note the number of graduates of this school and of the Boston Normal School which prepared it who are now in the fields of departments of Hygiene and Physical Education, as well as in the field of teaching. The universities include California, Oregon, Montana, Minnesota, Pittsburgh, Colleau, Notre Dame, Wisconsin, Louisiana, and Brown. Among the colleges are Wellesley, Bates, Bowdoin, College, Bard, Carleton, Carmed mills, University of California, Blanche Trilling and Miss Emily Morses of the American Child Health Council.

Wellesley graduates are well known in all branches of the work. They are in teaching, some in research in medicine, some in public and hospital administration, some with orthopedic surgeons.

Not only are the positions those of responsibility but also of interest, for example the work of the graduate who is working in China. Many graduates are working in foreign countries. Not the least of the remuneration comes to the departments of the country through the papers on Physical Education by graduates.

Gimling College

In a recent letter from Gimling College, the president reported that the Gimlingites were pleased with the courses covered. "In spite of all the uncertainty in the present situation of China, and at the present moment in Nanking, we are planning for next year in hope that conditions will be restable and the college will continue. Up to the present time, the work in Nanking was not interrupted, although the air has been full of rumors of war, and army and even now students of the United States are leaving Nanking. History is in the making these days, and we feel the challenge of a great adventure."

For the work in Gimling, candidates for positions in the following departments are needed for the next year.

1. English. The candidate must have had some experience in the teaching of college English, and be prepared to teach Oral English.

2. History and Physical Education. Some musical and athletic ability is desired, and some teaching experience required.

3. Phyica. A teacher is required to organize and develop the department, and to teach the advanced course.

4. Psychology. The work is especially in tests and measurements. Education.

5. A trained librarian, with all-round experience is needed, to develop the library and carry out the better program which a new college library building will necessitate.

Fuller information concerning these positions will be obtained from the Personnel Bureau.

produced an extremely accurate score around 2.

Whatever may be said concerning the fencing, it was not particularly good according to our standards, it must be admitted that the scene was well selected and well taken. The small villages, such as Tobolloy, with their narrow streets. The art of retrenchment was equally well done. Just as upset a good many of our enemies, and it is more important to us than the next made-in-America picture of Spain.

In passing we would like to express our appreciation to Miss Cumming, the atmosphere supplied by Polly Jones at the piano.

ODYSSES AND NAUSICAA

Having made a study of the noble Greek poet this year, Society Alpha Rho Chi selected a work of Homer the father of all men, to produce at its open-air summer Saturday afternoon. "Odysseus" and "Nausicaa" deals with that incident of the Odyssey in which Odysseus, after many adventures, is state at the palace of King Alcinous, attended by the beautiful princess Nausicaa.

WESLEYAN WANTS WAR COURSE TO HELP GRADUATE CONFLICT

With fighting in China and rumors of trouble in Latin America dominating the headlines of the papers, the question of a war course was received more sharply of late. Prospective read the distressing details, shake their heads and mutter about the uselessness of trying to stop the natural course of events. The optimists fervently hope that "this will be the last war." But students at Wesleyan University were not so sure. They believed that a very useful thing to do would be to study the whole matter carefully. Therefore the Wesleyan Undergraduate Report includes the recommendation that there be a course on "War: Its Causes and Cures." The Seniors report that a student poll was taken on the advisability of such a course and the result showed that 63.6% of the students favored some sort of course of that nature. 44% preferred making this a half year course; 19% considered that a year was not much too much.

Wesleyan University is not the first institution to have a course on war. Oberlin has had such a course for two years, beginning in September, 1925, taught by Dr. Oscar Judd, former Minister of Eduation for Hungary. He covers, "The field of war, its courses, both practical, including a study of historical events and diplomacy, and theoretical, or courses growing out of such problems as nationalism, war situations," etc., and the various methods used or being formulated to prevent war, the League of Nations, World Court, Conference methods, disarmament, and a study of public opinion in relation to war.

"The purpose of such a course," according to the Wesleyan report, "would be to give a background of facts on the subject of war as a method of settling international disputes, so that educated men would be capable of recognizing the various factors influencing war and would be able to pick the horizon of current events, and could more confidently take steps to eliminate them."

A few of the topics covered by this course on international conflict would probably be: the history and development of the art of war; a clarification of the causes of conflict—history, economic, psychological; the causes of war, both present and impending, and measures likely to prevent war; the psychology of war and the progress of the human race; peace and the limitations, problems of national defense, education for peace, disarmament, and the League of Nations.

Indubitably, lately are the students of the country are becoming more sensitive to current happenings, national and international, and the Wesleyan suggestion is one way in which this new interest may be fostered and made truly potent and worthwhile.

Perhaps eventually student opinion will become as effective as in the days of old Oxford when the clerks were not averse to expressing their political views. In the time of Henry 111 they were so violently anti-Saxon that they attacked the culinary menu of a visiting papal legate. When the Chief Cook retaliated by serving a thick hot broth to none of them, they created such a furore that the legate "overcame with amazement and excessive feasting which may well be the first assassination pact in history." Simple justice, don't you think? The church tower having on its canonical hood and closed the door behind her. High extremes are not exactly commendable but a moderate amount of student interest in world affairs is more than desirable.

ERSKINE SIX

THE LITTLE ARISTOCRAT

JUNE DAYS . . . Youth steps on the gas. A round of golf . . . sailing, with sails awash . . . tennis . . . a dip in the surf . . . a spin down the road at twilight . . . June nights . . . white flannels . . . dance on the country club. A riot of music . . . white hot. The girl with the asbestos slippers . . . on with the dance. That evening— the way silvered with June moonlight—in your Erskine Sport Coupe.

Dietrich, America's peremptory custom designer, has styled it with the sophisticated Parisian manner for America's youth. Trimmed with a silk glove, yet at no sacrifice of roominess . . . two in the commodious lounge seat and two more in the rumble seat—just a foursome. Youthful in its eager performance too. Rides any road at sixty—smoothly as a drifiting canoe. Goes through traffic like a cooed through her allowance. Skyrockets up the steepest hill like a climbing pursuit plane. Stops in its own length, turns in its own shadow and parks where you want to park.

Joyous June. All too short . . . lots of glorious living to be crowded into one month. Make the most of it—with an Erskine Coupe—the car that matches the spirit of Youth.
