COMING EVENTS

Tomorrow evening a lecture will be given by Mr. William Broad White of the National Bureau of Standards, who will administer the oath of office for the president of the United States. The lecture will be followed by a reception in the Science of Musical Tone, and he will demonstrate a new development of that science, an instrument to record sound in terms of light.

For all those interested in Social Sciences, the Vassar Women's Literary Society on November 3rd at 4:45 at Phi Sigma house several of the prominent writers in Boston will be there to present various angles of service open to Wellesley students. Also, tour of Pemberton, as the other recent visitors will be interested in this new field of endeavor.

Everyone interested is urged to come.

A. A. Planning Big Show of the Season

Snap out your calendars and mark November 8 with a red pen. For the First-Quarter Concert, the Winter Carnival will be held at 8 p.m. in the A. A. Committee's new building, which is located on the Acorn Street. This year's program promises to be one of the best ever produced on campus, with an array of musical and dramatic performances. The director, Tommy W. Powers, has planned several exciting original acts and is making special efforts to promote the talents of all participants.

Another drawing card is movies of college events. We shall see the pictures of the spring term, the winter season, and the activities of the freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior classes. These films will be shown on the evening of November 8 at 8 p.m. in the A. A. Committee's new building.

It is rumored that the audience is planning special booths which will appeal to all college girls.

There will be dancing throughout the evening, with music provided by the K. O. B. Band. Bring your men or have just as good a time dancing in a specially reserved section.

It is very important that the Carnival should be a big success. Last year a friend of the college attended and double his own personal efforts to make this year's event the best ever. Let's turn out, have a good time, and make this year's Carnival the best ever.

We take electricity in all forms for granted that we can hardly appreciate its efficiency and importance. We'll be shown how these new Edison's contributions were; how he learned to try to reduce coal consumption, and how he carried on his experiments with coal, charcoal, and other materials.

The well-crafted, power-saving, and efficient results of his investigations are shown in his successful experiments with coal, charcoal, and other materials. His work has been tested and approved by the most important scientific authorities in the world. He has demonstrated that coal can be successfully used as a substitute for charcoal, and that it is possible to produce electricity without using charcoal.

There were thirteen of us from an area who had moved to New York to take advantage of the opportunities, but I don’t think any of us expected what we found. The city was a vast expanse of concrete and noise, but it was also a place of innovation and creativity. We were all inspired by the energy and the possibilities.

The city was divided into different neighborhoods, each with its own character and culture. We lived in a small apartment in Greenwich Village, which was filled with artists and writers. It was a place of adventure and discovery.

One thing that stood out was the food. We had never seen so many different types of cuisine, from elegant French restaurants to spicy Indian street food. We spent many evenings exploring the city’s culinary offerings.

As we settled into our new lives, we found that our interests were being challenged and expanded in ways we never could have imagined. We were constantly learning and growing, and we were grateful for every moment of it.

The city was a place of contradictions. It was a place of beauty and decadence, but also of poverty and despair. We saw both sides of it, and it made us more appreciative of the things we had.

In the end, we all went our separate ways. Some of us stayed in the city, while others moved on to other places. But we will always remember the time we spent in New York, and the friendships we formed there. It was a time of growth and discovery, and we are grateful for it.
OFF CAMPUS
The world was shocked at the sudden death of Dr. Richardson, Ger-man’s Foreign Minister, on Thursday. On the same day, in a state of failing health, he refused to listen to the advice of physicians and friends, and continued to strain himself to the utmost, both in his efforts for peace and in his efforts for peace and in his efforts for peace and in his efforts for peace and in his efforts for peace and in his efforts for peace and in his efforts for peace and in his efforts for peace and in his efforts for peace and in his efforts for peace.

Ramsey MacDonald, British Prime Minister, has at last arrived on American soil to discuss the problems of international finance. He has met with President Hoover. It is believed that although small disagreements are bound to arise between nations, the work of the conference will go forward. The special appeal is not only for Germany, where he was recognized as their greatest political leade, but also for the whole world, to which he was addressing all his efforts to bring peace.

Another scandal has been exposed in the State Department by Col. H. W. Pendleton of the Board of Supervisors. The scandal is that the Board is not being run properly and that the Board is not being run properly and that the Board is not being run properly.

Two unfortunate outbreaks, in different parts of the country, have had tragic erections. The latest, in the Colorado State Penitentiary, where a riot had been raging among the prisoners, was brought to a close only after the leader of the rioters, Daniel, was killed by the guard. The leader, as it was learned last night, had then filed his indigents and himself. By the time that the rebellion was put down, the number of those killed amounted to twelve, including five guards and six prisoners. Also, the bodies of the prisoners in the barracks at the Penitentiary, in an attempt to make the prison wires yield their secrets to the commands of the guards.

The other tragedy resulting from riot was that of Mr. R. E. Miller, who was found hanged in his room. His death was attributed to suicide, but the coroner’s jury returned a verdict of murder. Among those present at the funeral was his wife, who was permitted to sign the register as the last person to leave the house.

The New York Stock Exchange has witnessed its most spectacular break of this year. On October 3 the drop in prices was evidenced by a general Electric, Westinghouse, and United States Steel, created a furor on the Exchange, and cut millions of dollars from the market value of securities.

WE APOLOGIZE—IN PART

It is always difficult to admit, with good grace, that we have been wrong. However, we must do so in this instance. For the thought that, even as we point out our mistakes, we have a new growth of confidence and a new strength in the very correction. Last week we described several courses which we thought were full. This week, we must report that we have already canceled a few of these courses.

It is usual for us to learn that students will make full use of our catalog and the latest offering column and the present officers of the committee in order to help bring the kind of education that is needed here. But there are obstacles that must be overcome, and the courses that are most popular are the most difficult to schedule. There are certain courses that are highly popular, and yet, there is no room to schedule them. The problem, therefore, is to find a way to accommodate as many students as possible.

The solution to this problem is to create a more flexible curriculum, which allows students to choose from a wider range of courses. This will require us to rethink our current system of course registration and to consider alternative methods of scheduling. We believe that this will ultimately benefit all students and contribute to a more inclusive and diverse learning environment.

SUNDAY SPORTS

To the Wellesley College News:

I am writing to you on behalf of the sports committee. We are in the process of organizing the first ever women's sports event on campus, and we would like to invite all students to participate.

The event will take place on Sunday afternoon and will feature a range of activities, including soccer, basketball, and volleyball. We believe that this will be an excellent opportunity for students to meet new people and to have fun.

Please join us on Sunday at the field near the library. We will provide refreshments and prizes for the winners. We hope to see you there.

Sincerely,

OPTINIONS WANTED

In getting outside lecturers for the courses at large, the College Lecture Committee serves as a very important connecting link between us and the world of "Oxford." The committee has at its disposal a sum of money large enough to enable it to sponsor three or four outside lecturers this year, and wishes to know what subjects would be of greatest interest to students.

It is hoped that the lectures will be given at the right time and place, and that they will be well attended. It is also hoped that the lectures will be given in an informal setting, and that they will be open to all students.

The country club setting seems to be a good one for the musical comedy. It was used in "Red, White, and Blue," and makes the same appeal for a general audience of the golf club as a dance motive, for the woman's bower-room, with the added device brought to the party in the course as a fitting scene, and of the golf match as story.

The professional's daughter has done competition with the visiting woman in the golf club, and has for the love of a most popular young sportsman. Claws show frequency; misunderstandings are complicated by the unprecedented efforts of the very juveniles.

The topical advertisement describes it as "gay and colorful, full of homely causality and puppy chatter." The opening scene is a touch of originality, with a Gibson girl chancing upon a famous appeal to the humor that contrives the "Here and There." The audience is quick and varied. Clever chorus figures are outstanding, and surprisingly enough, there are not twice as many girl roles. Miss Boult and Miss Moore have each made an ensemble of the former men and women roles. The opening evening decade was its duty子孙, with a vigor and enthusiasm quite unmatched by either excess of exercises and lack of music, as the singers frugled their rounds. The course of the usual order—polychrome in popular songs, and adaptations from the charts of former seasons.

Today, chairman of the second, and Sidney Rennie, another leader, are doing the duty for Miss Boult and Miss Moore.

BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

WILL PLAY ONCE OCTOBER 23

As has been the custom for the last few years, the first concert of the Concert Pianos Series will be given by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, on Sunday, October 23, under Sir Berkeley Tovey. The orchestra has, in the opinion of the public, become one of the most important in the world.

Two of the concerts of the season will be of special interest, since the program will consist of some of the music that has been played in Europe, that has been played in Europe.

The London and Paris orchestras have not been presented in the United States before. The program consists of some of the music that has been played in Europe, that has been played in Europe.

School music is now being played in Boston, and these two concerts will be a great step forward.

Many girls want something interesting and yet humble to do for part of the summer at least. The Daily Valley Bible School offers opportunities to work with poor children. This past summer we had about twenty-five little boys between the ages of three and six. We began the day with a simple prayer, some teaching, and marching. The story-telling period was a lively one in which the children loved to hear and retell their favorites, "The Three Bears," or "The In- fant and the Apple." Pictures formed a large part of their delight in the stories. In the outdoor period the girls played the popular ring games, and the boys played ball. Next we had a period when the children made all sorts of interesting things such as lanterns, animals, boats, and crafts, by sewing and cutting paper. I found that the public libraries have numerous books with endless ideas for things to make and do. I had a chance to put my Education into practice, which was valuable for me both as a teaching and as a development initiative as planning their work and play. I enjoyed the opportunity of securing them each week in happy activity, and their showing loveliness and appreciation of what I am many times over for my efforts. Those who like children cannot help but find that work with them is an interest to those who may prefer the older ones, but I found the children to be unusually bright and interested in everything I had to offer them. They were always doing and saying unexpected and charming things; as when a little negro boy got down on his knees and showed other children how to say the evening prayer, "Jesus, Trinket Shepherd," or when a little girl brought us a red and green penny Kipling as a present, which she had earned herself. There is really so resultant change in children who are taught them cleanliness and courtesy and kindness toward one another, which they eagerly adopt with surprising expeditiously. I would not have missed the experience, and I want to do it again next summer.

COMMUNITIES BLAMED BY MILL OWNERS FOR KIDS

COMMUNITIES, and there have been two, by anti-Red mobs in one of which a truck-load of union workers was fired upon and one of the union workers, a woman, was killed.

The liberals and most of the northern periodicals are not so much interested in the Communist stand as they are in the condition of general industrial unrest and discontent in the textile industry in the South. During the past week there has been a strike at Marion, North Carolina, where the same labor conditions prevail which are found in Gastonia, and at Marion there is no suggestion of the Communist influence which makes the textile situation so involved. It is felt that in the United States the Reds, the southern exploiters are trying to force the economic consequences of the situation, and are trying to continue their policy of rapid and complete labor control. If they succeed in doing this, it is feared by economic students that the textile industry in the South will enter into an ever more serious industrial situation than it is at present, and have to suffer as both England and New England did during their industrial revolutions. It is wondered if the cotton in the South will be able to take advantage of the lessons afforded by economic and social history.
Modern Necessity

In the hustle and bustle of College days, why take time to walk to the "vill," lug a heavy case, and wait in endless line to stick on the necessary stamps?

Just put your laundry bag with the many others that are collected each week from your "dorm." Forget about it until you unwrap the return package.

Then you'll see that everything is done to the queen's taste, especially all underclothes and other precision fineries. Once you've tried it, you'll agree that laundry service is an important part of college life.
