In addition to the gift of the original library of W.R. Lippincott, to whom Robert Browning wrote a letter of thanks, the Lippincott Library has been the friendly center of a long tradition of reading and thought. The Library has been the home of a permanent collection of books, including a selection of early American literature, which has been the center of the library's activity for many years. The collection includes a number of rare and unusual volumes, such as a first edition of the works of William Shakespeare, as well as a collection of early American literature, including works by Henry David Thoreau and Ralph Waldo Emerson.

The library has been open to the public for many years, and is open to students, faculty, and visitors. The library offers a wide range of resources, including a collection of rare books, a number of special collections, and a variety of research tools. The library is also home to a number of events, such as lecture series, book talks, and other cultural activities. The library is a treasure trove of knowledge and a place of discovery.

policies. His first objection to Hughes is that his residence from the Supreme Court, to run as candidate for the presidency in 1916. This engagement in partisan political life was concerned on the ground that it would lead to the perversion of political activity and to the alienation of politicians among the judges of the court. The second objection, however, is of far more importance, and it was in this position that the opposition found its most solid support. After his defeat in the political campaign, Mr. Hughes received private letters and, in his former position as judge of the Supreme Court, coupled with his great personal influence, the two most prominent corporations in the country as clients. Not only does this encourage the judges to capitalize their honor and their position, according to Mr. Norris, but it also becomes impossible for Mr. Hughes to act in final judgment in a contest between organized wealth and the nation.

That the importance of this point cannot be over-emphasized was recognized by every member of the opposition. Letters were read from Henry D. Fiske, of the Albany, New York, attorney for the Manufacturers of New York City, and chairs were the subject of debate in the Senate. This was the first time a public day was set by a hearing on a business. The supreme court met on a Friday night, and flights of four lines, which he had to expand and interpret so that the public could understand.

Various Starting-Points

Professors Johnson and Crossman discuss what outcomes would be seen by authors whom they knew well. In regard to this matter of the manner in which one ought to give a few suggestions as to how to do it. Very young writers ought to aspire to getting a position of the county's outstanding magazines when young from college, one must hope to have a successful novel spring from the books. Unfortunately, these things as trade jobs do not give effective opportunities, and are not the best way to reach one's public. There are many fields of advertising which will give a chance for writing. Professor Johnson in his special Omnibus, and has written other papers, and colleagues of the publication of his own. In this reasoning, the editor, the publisher, or the editor of the newspaper, he was asked to consider the public's best endings for good suggestions. The papers, and a particular one of his own.

The chief conclusion of Professor Johnson as good starting points for would-be authors. Mr. Hughes Johnson very kindly spoke to Miss Johnson. He spoke of the importance of the English Composition course. When Miss Johnson asked him what she could do to get material. He emphasized the need for getting material. If any student to find everything that one could get, but if he met with any difficulty, he did not say if it and Mr. Johnson held the attitude of the editor, and one of humor and interesting personality, and was sided up at the close of the period.

MRS. ROGERS DESIGNS HOUSE IN QUADANGULAR FOR FACULTY

A chump of grunted, old apple trees is all that remains of the former avenues of Miss Rogers, who now is the pride of the faculty, newly furnished, and Hallowell, and that the building is up. House, a club house for the faculty, which has accommodations for twenty, and Hallowell, an apartment house. The windows of the new building rooms, have been very popular with the faculty.

The new building contains twelve suites. The need for a third building, the faculty said, only fairly shows our faculty's desire to be in domestic unity.

When your reporter, on a tour of inspection, visited the building, she found the house of the greatest interest. The previous old apple trees, carefully selected because of their great beauty, and the folding, stand by the building. The new house forms the third side of a triangle, made by the other faculty houses. Various busy women insisted that the work would be finished in three months, but the pace of the work will be ready for occupancy by the first of the year.

The architecture of this group of buildings, which has also designed homes for the Hallowell and the Jenks families, is by New York architect Williams Rogers, a graduate of Williams, who is now a lecturer on architecture in the college.

OFF AND ON

OFF CAMPUS

C. A. entertained a number of freshmen interested in social service work on Monday afternoon, February 15, at 4:30. The many possibilities of the group were explained and discussed. Great interest was shown in social service work by the group.

On Monday afternoon, February 15, the social work department at the University was opened with a tour of the campus and the departments. At the very end of the tour, the group was led to the faculty residence, where a meeting was held with the faculty members.

On Monday evening, February 15, the social work department held a meeting in the faculty lounge. The group discussed the possibilities of social work and the future of the department.

New York statistics, weary of the more plebeian side of their occupation, turned to scientific and technical devices to determine the social center of the city. Much thought and many calculations, they fixed upon 15 East 40th Street, which they named the "New York Center of John Chandler Moore, as the vital point of New York.

Rumors is always involved in some difficulty, financial matters being so important to one of the royal family. Princess Ikea has not disappointed the court, for it is known that she is deeply interested in whether or not she shall marry the young man to whom she has given her heart. This engagement is expected to last no longer.

The death of Mr. Eugene T. Slattery, a cow whose life was devoted to science, caused great sorrow in the Penn State campus this week. Eugene was a cow, in spite of the fact that someone had inserted a wire into her neck, and only a possible experiment, was thoroughly confirmed until her home was made. Genevieve, who thought she was being given a pleasant change dis- covered that she was not happy in her new surroundings. Her last revolu- tionary discovery was that a cow can die of a nervous breakdown.

The Edward H. Barkas gift of $10,000 to the Yale Dental School for the purpose of adopting the quadrangle system has been the cause of some argument, and no little apprehension at New Haven Alumni, who are underestimating the fact that this gift will aid in the development of the dental faculty.

The controversy is interesting in that it doubtlessly cripples the American Association of Colleges and universities far so far as their introduction into this country is concerned.

All those who have traveled in Europe know that the beauty of a college campus is the best of College campuses. The influence of such a beauty on the student is inestimable. The beauty of the campus is not only pleasing, but also educational, as it helps to develop the student's appreciation of the beauty of nature.

C. A. REVISES CONSTITUTION AND PLANS FOR CONFERENCES

On Monday, February 15, the C. A. Board held a morning meeting at Phi Sigma. One of the most important problems before the Board was the re- vision of the Constitution, and much of the evening was devoted to this work. It was also decided that folders be printed and distributed among the students giving the dates of all meetings planned for the remainder of the semester so far as they are now known.

On the week-end of February 16-17, there will be a two-day conference of C. A. officers and faculty from the fraternity houses of Wellesley College, and the conference will be in charge of the Wellesley delegation to the Eastern Square Conference, and will also be in charge of the whole Conference.

The theme of the conference will be the relation between social and spiritual experience, and the question of whether or not this difference is experienced in either one of the cases to be discussed. There will also be a conference of all men, and Wellesley is sending from the faculty personnel to the conference. The Conference is being called by the Christian Association of Smith, and will deal with the subject of the Christian Conflict in America, and will discuss these under the headings, Protestant-Catholic, Jewish-Christian, Negro-White.

During the week there will be a meeting of the Student Industrial Union at the house. The subject for discussion and investment will be for Women.

A meeting held in Lowell on Tuesday, February 23, by the W. Y. C. A. of the Lowell union, with representatives from several local churches, was held at the Lowell Union. The group discussed the possibilities of establishing a Christian Student Union in Lowell, and the idea was well received by the audience. The group was a small one, but it was a very pleasant group.

Constant principal of the high school at Albany, Michigan, he did some graduate work at Michigan in 1877, and in 1882 the University presented the degree of Ph. D. Mr. Freeman then entered upon his duties as professor of Mathematics at Wellesley, where he had been the subject of much discussion. He was the first to join in a position in the Queens department because his sister was dying. In 1879, after the death of her sister, Miss Freeman came to Wellesley as head of the department of mathematics.

Miss Freeman's five years at present head of a college. Miss Freeman was made acting president; the succeeding year she became president of the college.

Miss Freeman's ten years at Wellesley have been significant years in the development of her leadership. Miss Freeman accomplished important work in the organization of an Academ- ic Council, the standardization of pre- paratory courses, the revision of courses from a selected half-hour a day to two hours of "examination," the extension of Wellesley's holdings, and the establishment of contact with other women's colleges. Miss Freeman is a strong group of Ann Arbor graduates, all of whom are now in business. Miss Freeman was brought to the new institution a broad scope and big heartedness.

On February 2, 1901, Miss Freeman re- signed from the presidency of Wellesley College to the presidency of George Herbert Palmer of Harvard. After her resignation she retained a keen interest in the affairs of the college, acting as a Trustee until her death in De- cember, 1902. Miss Freeman, in her last days of life, was always interested in the welfare of Wellesley's third president, Miss Babbie.

STUDENT'S AID

One name, however, is too often so little understood that it barely receives a glanced glance before being summarily passed over. This is the Wellesley Students' Aid Society.

An organization of alumnae, its purpose is to give financial assistance to Wellesley students. To some extent it is in keeping with the need of the moment, for others of it makes possible coming to college at all. The heart is without motive and two years after graduation. The fund from which these appropriated is made up not only from the alumnae but also from a student body itself, in addition. It allocates the money on the Pay Day plan. It is the earliest organization, except Sheridan, in Wellesley in which graduates and undergraduates co-operate equally and the bond thus established is worth something in itself.

Student's Aid is not to be confused with the Service Fund. The latter is organized to take care of outside charity, the Students' Aid Society is for the assistance of friends and classmates here in Wellesley.

Sport Shoes are as much a part of the Springtime as the first crocus—and especially dear are they to the heart of the college girl. For her we have a most unusual collection of spring sport shoes both for active and spectator wear. The moccasin type shoe illustrated will give an inkling of what we offer. This is a combination of dark and light beige elk with a gray sole. The all-leather heel has a grisly lift. Priced conservatively at $9 the pair. We suggest an early visit to our Wellesley Shop while our stock is most complete.

Seniors Search Soul Depths
To Assist Personnel Bureau

Together with Senior Promenade, the news of yesterday, and other transient phenomena, the Clinical, Sociological and Socialian Ascendancy and other examination sponsored by the Personnel Bureau for the benefit of Three Destinies Vocational Guidance, have come and gone, vanishing in that vast, utilitarian vessel of mystery wherein is hidden the results of Scholastic Aptitude Examinations. The nature of their contents, say the authorities, may not be divulged now or at any later time, for fear of their Purpose. And this being, his conscious creativeness leads to a comparately unsearching subject a rather academic sense like that surrounding the documents of crime or diplomacy that every worthy Obermiller character conceals in his private apartments. Odd wonders as to what amazing revelations will be contained therein. Is it a case of rare Souls?

There is an excellent floundering among the titles of these inventions of the well meaning. They have a consummate sound, as befits the last (prematurely) of a long series of L. Q. tests and the like extending from Kindergarten to college. And now, one learns, the psychologist bounds the infant in his earliest years. In such human curiosity knows no decent restraint. But the report should find some comfort in the reflection that answer to further inquiry concerning their private life will be purely optional, and restricted more or less to the questionaries of the Society for the Prevention of Vice and the Alumni Association. Which should be spicy, at least.

Yet it is the high vibrations and inestimable benefits of these examinations that call forth a report. Is it just, after all, to waver to the Pew this opportunity for fruitful introspection? Would not the Mass profits by the same soul-searching? Whether one is a job-hunting young, there can be no concealment of the value of actually knowing if one is afflicted with marked Clerical abilities, or if one is Socially Ascendant or on the Decline. And everyone is keenly interested in such introspection. It is only that questions are so hard to invent, and the ones that occur most readily to the lay mind, such as What is my P. percentage? in my personality sufficiently distinctive? Should I read the Five Foot Shelf, or buy a saxophone and be the life of the Party? Are these too general to be very effective as guides. In fact, there is a chance for genuine moral service in this effort to youth the means of following that axiom dear to the heart of the Psychology Department. Let us hope that the challenge will not long remain unanswered.

BROWNING LETTERS
At the close of the Exhibition of Material Illustrative of the Life and Works of Ruskin on March 10, members of the College will be given an opportunity to see the Browning Letters, which have been presented by Miss Caroline Mann.

SENIOR GRADUATION EXPENSES
The senior class is starting a drive March 3, to raise money for the graduation expenses of those seniors who are working their way through college. Everyone of the class of 1930 is asked to contribute a small amount in order to help toward defraying these expenses. Margaret Brown, Pomery, is treasurer. Correction: The drive has nothing to do with the Student Aid Fund, as was announced in the NEWS last week.
