ANDRIA WILL BE LATIN CLASS PLAY

On Monday evening, January 19, at eight o'clock, there will be presented in Billings Hall a Latin play. The play is "Andria," which is a play by Plautus. It is considered to be the first of the Latin classics. It contains all the elements which make up an ancient play—good comedy, good speeches, the unaltered, váñctate, and, in modern terms, well-developed characters. It is made doubly interesting by the presence in it of a character who was Thomas Wilson's model for the role of Andria. The entire production is in the hands of the dina in modern comedy, each of which has translated portions of the work into Latin, and Miss Willis will deliver a prologue which she is writing.

The cast is as follows:

Miss Grace Anderson
Miss Anne Burgmore
Miss Joyce Davis
Miss Edwards Jackson
Miss Edith汲
Miss Alice Johnson
Miss Julia Currie
Miss Eliza Bowers
Miss Gabriella Larina
Miss Charlotte Ancilla

Professor Kobt Discusses Value of Sagas in History

On Wednesday afternoon, Professor Harvard Kobt of the University of Oslo, honored by the International Congress of Historians, lectured on The Historical Value of the Sagas.

He spoke of the fallacies which impede the sagas as history, though they enhance their dramatic effectiveness. Since many of the sagas were written in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, their value as literary works that took place in the tenth century, a certain contradiction has grown up around them in the process of oral transmission.

He made it clear that, on the other hand, the sagas are still a valuable national literature. We, he said, are of the actual events described in the sagas. Circumstances, culture, environment and reasonings about them may be the manufacturing of the writer of the sagas, but we should be able to see through this network of imaginative traditions to the actual truths which lie beneath.

Professor Kobt stressed particularly the many important questions of medieval life laid down in the sagas. The whole material found in the sagas will be enough to make a history of a nation.

Dr. Jens Will Lead Seminar On Latin-American Relations

Dr. Edmond F. Jens, Professor of History of the University of Chicago, who is in the country on a tour through the West Indies which is taking place under the auspices of the United States Information Agency, has been invited by Dr. Leif Orthofer, Chairman of the Department of Latin-American Relations of the University of Illinois, to deliver a series of lectures at the University of Illinois. The lectures will be given on various aspects of the history and culture of Latin America, and will be the first in a series of lectures which are to be given by members of the faculty of the University of Chicago during the academic year 1939-1940.

Dr. Jens, who has been a member of the University of Chicago since 1934, is a well-known authority on Latin-American problems. He has published several books on the subject, including "Latin-American Problems in International Relations" and "The Social and Economic Problems of Latin America." His lectures will be of great interest to students of Latin-American history.

Dr. M. H. Will Speak On Recent Dispute In House

Dr. Edward V. Huntington, Professor of Economics at Harvard University, will lecture on Congressional Appropriations on Tuesday evening, January 13, in Room 24, Fullers Hall, under the auspices of the Harvard Alumni, Economics and Political Science Clubs. The lecture is the result of the 1939 re-election of Mr. Roosevelt to the presidency, and the subsequent reduction of the representation of any one of the Congress no less than one fourth. The debate in the Senate on the new House of Representatives, the budget of the United States, and the problem of language in the House of Representatives, will be discussed. The lecture will be attended by all who wish to attend.

Dr. Huntington is admirably fitted to be considered in a non-technical way the history of the debate, which is one of the most important debates of the century.
The Boston Museum Buys Giovanni Painting

The Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, has announced that it has purchased from Dr. Albert Bishop an oil painting of the Virgin and Child by Giovanni di Paolo, an artist known for his religious and mythological themes.

This painting is significant for several reasons. Firstly, it is one of the finest works by Giovanni di Paolo, a 15th-century Italian artist known for his detailed, almost sculptural portrayal of figures. The Virgin and Child in this painting are depicted with a serene and contemplative expression, typical of Giovanni's style.

Secondly, this is the first major acquisition by the Museum of Fine Arts in recent years, indicating a renewed commitment to collecting significant works of art. The Museum has been focused on building its collection of modern and contemporary art, but this purchase signals a diversification of its holdings.

Finally, this acquisition is likely to enhance the Museum's reputation as a leader in the field of European art, particularly Italian painting. It will provide visitors with a chance to see one of the finest works by Giovanni di Paolo, a master of the early Renaissance.

The purchase was funded through a generous donation from an anonymous benefactor, who was impressed by the Museum's commitment to acquiring important works of art. This gift further solidifies the Museum's role as a major cultural institution.

Overall, the purchase of Giovanni di Paolo's Virgin and Child is a noteworthy event for the Museum of Fine Arts, adding a significant piece to its collection and offering new opportunities for appreciation of Italian Renaissance art.

CURRENT NOTES ON WOMEN AT WORK

Advertising, art, teaching, architecture, finance, insurance, personnel work, and the like are fields in which women may find jobs outside the home. A woman also can make the best use of her education and years of experience by working in her husband’s business or starting her own business.

Vacation plans are, for the most part, limited to the general business of the workers, and of the drones. The workers are either glad, or in some cases, unhappy. After a spell of vacationing with a spirit of yielding unselfishness they may return to the business of the season. The happy drump, when asked what to do with his vacation, is usually one of the employees. However, women are also employed in ways which may be considered more interesting to the business of the season.

Geographical considerations are usually an important factor. New York and Chicago are mentioned as offering the largest number of opportunities for publishing house work and for advertising. The nation furnishes a good outlet for advertising. It looks for advertising space, as for example, Chicago, for an ad that will interest the public in a certain advertisement. The public looks for advertising in newspapers and magazines.

Merry Christmas

Happy New Year

The Perscrying Press

PERRY concludes that he has a very real and conflict at present; his theory of instruction (true, perhaps, but "unaccomplished by our intellects") that if one is to be a successful writer, one must be a writer, and not a writer of knowledge. The problem is not a new one to him. He suggests it is a result of knowledge consideration for students who attend school and who have not thought of the considered question. The remedy of "plague" in our society, if we are to find the solution in the making of the society, is to give more time to the making of the society.

The ability of a person to wear a costume of which she speaks in the life of a Wren is a woman. A woman was not a person in a professional fashion in Azurite. "I don't know what to do," she exclaimed. "The best way to the Sigma Bicep Muscles and I don't know what to wear because I don't belong to any organization."
Merry Christmas!

May your hearts be filled with love, your days be full of laughter, and your spirits lifted up in the spirit of Christmas. May you find peace, joy, and happiness in the company of those you love. May the joy of the season be with you always.

We wish you all a very Merry Christmas and a happy New Year!

MYRA HINZ

Last Thursday evening Myra Hinz took the top honors among the WELLESLEY audience—a very interesting program, beginning in an intimate and electric manner, with Ragnar Kruspe's "The Spain of the Gregorian Chant," rendered by Franske Friederis, Fayeke, and Varatencar, arranged by Harold Reitse. The program was a well-constructed one, playing upon a beautiful technological technique throughout; in the opened choral, the firm, smooth sound of the voices, in the arrangement of the audience was similarly assisted to the manner in which the concert hall was held under the spell of the artist's personality. The simple theme was introduced quickly, it grew passionate and expressive, to be followed by a homely and charming manner, which was drawn to a beautiful rapid passage. The variations all presented vivid contrasts to the listener, the program was a test of total strength in both hands.

The more serious part that of the opera, in which the German Lied of lighter, more conversational tone. Percussion, piano, and voices were taken up by Mrs. G. H. E. and Mrs. H. M. With the aid of Mrs. H. I. she was able to create a musical atmosphere. There were two delightful little studies by Chopin in a playful manner. This whole portion appeared in an atmospheric manner maintaining convexity, Mrs. H. M. and Mrs. H. W. were able to create a musical atmosphere. Throughout the program, Miss Hinz played with great expression, substituting the mood of her music.

THE PHI SIGMA MASQUE

The Phi Sigma, Christmas Masque, "The Warrant Boat," was a very pleasant and meaningful performance, yes, but for the past month, we have been working on the program. The Phi Sigma Masque is more than the usual masque, it is a production of the Phi Sigma Masque. It is a production of the Phi Sigma Masque.

It was a play written by M. B. R. B. based partly on the Novus Rex, but for the most part on the masque, "The Warrant Boat." The masque is a production of the Phi Sigma Masque. It is a production of the Phi Sigma Masque.

INDIANS ASK FOR DOMINION STATUS

I.

INDIANS ASK FOR DOMINION STATUS

In a passionate appeal to the British Government, the Indians of the Northwest Territories, represented by their leader, Chief Joseph, have called for the establishment of a separate Indian Dominion. They argue that the current system of Indian administration is not adequate to meet the needs of the Native population, who have been subjected to centuries of neglect and discrimination.

The Indians have long been advocating for greater autonomy and self-determination. They cite examples of successful indigenous nations, such as Canada and New Zealand, which have been able to negotiate treaties and governing agreements that recognize their unique cultural and political identities.

The British Government, however, has been slow to respond to these demands. They argue that the current system is working effectively and that any changes would be complicated and costly.

The Indians have vowed to continue their campaign, using peaceful protests and other forms of civil disobedience to draw attention to their cause.

GAS ATTACKS WORMS; SAVES OLD LIBRARY

The famous literary treasures of the University of Cambridge, England, were saved from future generations of fire by a recent successful and virgin application of the "bookworm and worm" ward which had infected the library, according to a report by New York Times.

The bookworm menace is a serious and one that has bedeviled all libraries for many years. Considerable experimentation has been going on, and there are several methods advocated for the elimination of the devouring larvae.

Among these are the treatment of applying very hot air in the books, a system revived by the Philadelphia College of Physicians, and the British Museum's use of oil, benzene, and hexane, which, however, is more successful as a preventative system. In the New York Public Library a special staff is in charge of administering the preventative system to attain returns.

endurance is the subject which Norma Lowy, graduate of Elmira College, is now investigating. She is working with Margaret Poley, who has just finished her studies at heart rate and blood pressure on her subjects. At present she is proving the results of this very meaningful pressure test. It is hoped that this experiment will prove more predictive of physical condition than the well-known Schenker test. One of Miss Lowy’s devices is almost as unexpected as Miss Doyle’s. A dog of the collie type has been placed in a specially designed box that records the dogs heart rate and breathing rate. The box contains a thermocouple which is sensitive to changes in the dogs pulse. The subject’s heartbeat is read off on a scale in the box, which is then converted into a count. The heart rate is recorded in percentages of the heart rate. The dogs are placed in the box and the heart rate is recorded. The box is then opened and the dogs are placed in a room. The heart rate is recorded and compared with the heart rate before the dog was placed in the box. The results show that the dogs heart rate is affected by the environment in which they are placed.
