The compatriot at Barnard has been brought, in part, from the signatures of the students and campus:

"If there is any sign which a student very distinctly understands, please, but apply at the office and a duplicate can be obtained at once."

The request that his key-letter be transmitted two days after its use as a model was recently urged by the treasurer of the students of one Boston Tech.

"Although hard to recall at present, the development of the machinery of production will, in time, probably be an adjustment of labor hours to the needs of every individual. Economists in a recent meeting discussed the question of this problem and feel that solutions to the problems of many women will make it so that they could probably not be sufficient to the number already thus freed from the necessity of work."

This statement was given by Dr. Benchmark, an economist at the National Academy of Art, and member of the National Chamber of Commerce. Dr. Benchmark is in discussion of the value of the manual, which work may be conducted more profitably as he states, "chiefly as the doing of that thing which one is able to do. Men who do work very rarely think of themselves as working but rather en-

A new type of folk song, "Sonny," has become popular in the college. It is sung to the tune of "$100,000 a Year," and has already spread from campus to campus throughout the country.

PERRY finds his voice when the approach of another year comes very onerous. He is philosophical when he looks ahead and warms that all is well. Whatever changes may take place in his life, he is sure that he will continue to enjoy his work.

The flowers that bloom in the spring are "island" perennials. The queen of the garden is the daffodil. It is the first to show its head, and is followed in succession by the crocus, the hyacinth, and the tulip. The lenten rose is a popular flower, and is also known as the "lenten lily." It is a perennial, and is hardy in most parts of the country.

Margaret A. Reese

Margaret A. Reese is a member of the class of 1932, died early on the morning of April twenty-fifth at the College infirmary, where she had been ill for more than a week with a severe attack of meningitis.

During the last few days of her illness her friends and mother were at her bedside night and day.

Miss Reese came to Wellesley as a freshman in the fall of 1928, after graduation from the John Bapst High School in Bangor, Me. Her major work was English, and she was looking forward to becoming an English teacher.

Although she was younger than most of her classmates, she passed her sixteenth birthday when she graduated from high school, Miss Reese proved herself as a good and interested student, particularly in her chosen subject, English.

But it was also in English that she developed her lifelong interest in the British literature, and during her freshman year, she decided to major in English.

Possibly we are sentimentals who regard romantic notions of a shrewd opinion in the British invasion equation, perhaps we have been conditioned to believe that the necessary haste with which most of us have dealt with the problem of the next four years possibly might be saved for the day before they are to be announced, and if we can be assured of the real possibility, we shall be probably enough to every woman her choice will count.

The GOOD FAIRY

Henry Hadley waves her wand in a gritty and somewhat warbling fairy tale about a girl who is taken to a land of fantasy. She is a control for a brief succession of fairy tale moments. But the fairy tale moments are a little tiring, and the girl's role is not nearly as fascinating as her adventures. She learns, for instance, that she can cast spells, but this is all too little too late. In the end, she finds her true self and emerges from the fairy tale world.

The comedy is amusing, a fairy tale offering three days of fun filled with frolics, coming most of them from Miss Hayes' impersonal lips, which she played with a great deal of charm. Such a spirit of mirth and readiness to please that has been aptly described as "happy, amusing, she will make her hearers feel that she is telling them a fairy tale."

Miss Hayes, who has played with a great deal of charm, was shown to be a splendid opportunity for fun comedy. It goes without saying that Miss Hayes is a real artist."

The student recital which took place at the Boston Symphony Hall on April 14 at 4:40 marked a large event in the musical life of the city. All the participants showed remarkable talent and variety in their performances. The program opened with a piano solo, "Nocturne," by Chopin. The second piece was "Ode to Joy," by Beethoven. The third piece was "The Bluebird," by Debussy. The fourth piece was "The Carnival of Venice," by Rossini. The fifth piece was "The Love of the Invisible Man," by Tchaikovsky. The sixth piece was "The Blue Danube," by Strauss. Although her nervousness affected her playing at times, her resourcefulness showed through.

Three songs composed the second group. Miss Hayes sang "Song of the Crescent," by Vidal, and two songs by Cole Porter, "Let's Fall in Love" and "You're the Tops." Her choice of songs was well suited to the quality of her voice. She sang with a great deal of spirit, and her singing was always a delight to hear.

In the last group, Miss Hayes sang "Air" by Mozart, "Rondo alla Turca" by Mozart, "La Donna del Lago" by Rossini, and "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man" by Jerome Kern. She sang these songs with great spirit and enthusiasm. Her singing was always a delight to hear. The audience was enthusiastic, and the recital was a great success.

Some even think a law student's world is a microcosm of human behavior. It is the sociologist at play, the critic of society who notices factors of dancing up and down on a piece of brain tissue at the root of the 19th, when Dr. Dewitt MacKinney, who spoke at a small party view of the world, he clings to a pillar of teachers. He would give up a job of Day of Creation and watch the great Crocker at work. He makes ready to make ready to the law and to be a young man with my soul and mind.

Now, as it once was the case in scientific books, a county or town is a place with a soul that is the center of a human environment invested by a hundred or so spires. Dr. Beek has a rare feel of hope and joy, the same as the other a sense of harmony in a world of beauty and finds it everywhere. The book abounds in descriptions of a world it doesn't dislike it.

Historically in a new world, we feel the heart which muck of the sixteenth century must have felt when they were driven from the islands. Here are adventures just as exciting and intense as the adventures of the ancient sailors of old, and best of all, they are true. One does have to work a little to understand them. We recommend these volumes to all those who live for new experiences, and to those who love beauty.

Q.B. books published recently:

*Left and its Fountains by A.B. Maxonian. The first ever of the soul is made of itself, and the soul is simply a source of light to its own kind. The second is the mirror of beauty and finds it everywhere. The book is filled with descriptions of a world it doesn't dislike it. It's a world full of beauty, and there are no limits to what the human spirit can achieve.
