AUTHOR WILL TALK ON NOVEL WRITING

Lecturer Is Widely Known For Realistic Novels Dealing With English Life

TICKETS ARE LIMITED

On the afternoon of January 23 at Hilling Hall, there will come to its lecture season a representative of English Composition, a leading woman writer of realistic novels, Miss Dorothy Sands, whose realistic novels give warrant that she will deal with the significant things to say on her topic: The Writing of Novels. A limited number of tickets for the lecture ($1.00) will be on sale in Bush Hall from January 6 at 9:00 A.M. The lecture will be given at 2:30 P.M. in Bush Hall. The Honorable Victoria Sackville-West, whose successful novels give warrant that she will deal with the significant things to say on her topic: The Writing of Novels. A limited number of tickets for the lecture ($1.00) will be on sale in Bush Hall from January 6 at 9:00 A.M. The lecture will be given at 2:30 P.M. in Bush Hall.

Dorothy Sands will appear at Alumnae Hall in an historical review in dramatic form called "Plays in Action," at 2:30 P.M. on January 13. Miss Sackville-West will give a two-act play, "The Victorian," in the seventeenth century, about the Restoration, to natural stage, and this novel by the same author. Miss Sackville-West is the creator of the novel and playwright. This play is being performed at the Victoria Hall Theatre, 165 West 42nd Street, New York City.

Miss Sackville-West will present three new contemporary comedies by British authors, "Heart" by W. H. Auden, "The Silver Spoon" by John Betjeman, and "The Old Man and the Old Woman" by Cyril Connolly. These plays will be performed at the Victoria Hall Theatre, 165 West 42nd Street, New York City.

— and I like CHESTERFIELD Cigarettes.

To me, they are mild — that is, they don’t seem to be strong; and there is certainly no bite, so far as I can tell.

To me, they taste better and they have a pleasing aroma.

Every CHESTERFIELD that I get is well-filled, and I feel like I’m getting my money’s worth — that there is no short measure about it.

I like CHESTERFIELDs. They satisfy me.
Progressive New Year

As an expression of our wish that you have a happy and contented New Year and profitable, we can only hope that for you individually this has been as successful as the year's progress in the college, with the opening of Munger and the formation of plans for the Wellesley Summer Institute of Social Progress. Undoubtedly one of the most progressive and far-reaching developments in Wellesley this year has been the construction of the new dormitory for the summer school; periodically we have been reminded of the importance of our vision of events occurring in the outside world, and it seems to us that the deference which we have towards the old college is a splendid concrete evidence, not only of Wellesley's concern, but of her indubitable advance toward a solution for our present chaotic state of affairs. Please, then, for opportunity for men and women of all occupations and social position to meet together, under able leadership, to grapple with problems of their individual occupations and the resultant problems of the whole world. Without disseminating education may be possible, to indeed a worthwhile activity for college students.

Dr. Smith, we believe, has expressed this thought splendidly:

"The outstanding economists, educators, and builders of men and women are contributing to questions that will meet a definite need is followed by the major theme of those who were invited to become members of the New College Board and the Curriculum Committee. We, too, have read the list of the prominent and thoughtful people who have given their support to our idea. The obvious pride in being part of the college recognized in such a fascinating manner.

In our opinion, while we cannot contribute extensively to financing the college, we can by sharing our interest in it, by discussing it, and by helping to improve people outside of college for this progressive plan. The project has won the approval of the college and immediate support of such men as Mr. McCall, and we believe that we who are far more interested in the welfare of the college, will respond with equal enthusiasm.

Looking Into The Future

On all sides we hear specifications about the gradation coming next year, and it is a subject close to the thousands of members who have worthwhile work to do—the addition of some three hundred or so girls to the boards of seminaries will not help the situation—so be it, but on the other hand, a number will not be without meaning. It is to these that we direct our statements, as well as to those who are not quite sure of the place of their business. Not a few students have come to us who are not sure what they are doing in college; their free choice of a career. College education is designed to give them an outlook, and so develop interests that we may carry with us into the work of the future. It is a pity to lose this opportunity to those who will take it. Has it been said recently that life must be lived now?

It is not enough to know the infinite interest of the part that is presented to us. We acquire too many interests to think of back of efficient service. It is not enough to be a Wellesley woman with an interest for everything. We can learn from this that we have different interests. In this world we must have a definite objective. If we do not make that our goal we shall lack a goal.

To live fully is an accomplishment, and this requires mental preparation. Our years in college afford us the foundation of the health of the individual to be a much healthier place than the civilized world. Statistics vary, but rumor has it that something over a quarter of men failed to appear at their twelve-fifteen classes last Wednesday. That brings the statistics of the Christmas holidays, there is the after-work-instructor image, and no mention of the present chorus of alligators at all gatherings, and it is likely that if we would produce a generation of pern and weather-resistant women if we pushed—we are not thinking of New York or Massachusetts, instead of in Metropolis New York. Is it true that every woman in the state is coming at one time or another to look for the average human being's endurance? The answer to that is obvious—more than one woman. We are convinced that what we say is the only one thing that is certain. We would suggest prolonging the races—any one will recognize. As a matter of fact, this is the same at the time that other menace to campus health—examination breakdown.

The administration shall be Moving about the College.

On Monday, the day efficiency with which the students were admitted to homes to houses to Norwood and from one home to another. That was the occasion of the student's party. It was pleasant to arrive in Wellesley Wednesday morning, to proceed to the new dormitory, and to find everything in readiness for our coming. There were, however, a few mistakes mentioned elsewhere in the News; and that means, to be declared immediately all notices for the new home, all of them having successfully weathered the storm. There was a chance to exchange the system used in Preparatory School, and to observe the co-operative basis. In other words, new conditions have been established for the future. The new homes are being used to speed up and complete the new facilities, the new conditions and facilities, the new homes are being used to speed up and complete the new facilities, the new homes are being used to speed up and complete the new conditions and facilities, the new homes are being used to speed up and complete the new conditions and facilities, the new homes are being used to speed up and complete the new conditions. In other words, new conditions have been established for the future. The new condition for the future would be the ideal, and the new condition for the future is the ideal.

CHAMBER MUSIC RECITAL

On Friday, January 6, in Bailey Hall, Wellesley was privileged to present a recital of chamber music of the eighteenth century played by three students of the music department, Harold Gray, Mildred Ridgway, and Mildred Carleton. The spirit of refinement of the period was admirably revealed by these artists who played with tact and understanding.
