Class of 1933

PROPOSED ACTIVITIES FOR I. R. C.

The purpose of the following amendments to the constitution of the I. R. C. of Wellesley College is to bring the activities of this body in line with the functions of the College which are felt to be intimately related; which should receive the attention of those interested in intercollegiate affairs as having a direct or indirect bearing on their work; yet, they are of such momentary importance that they find no place in the studies of the Social M. — and also, as they do not come within the scope of the present constitution.

Article I.—name and purpose.

Article II.—organization—stands.

Article III.—officers—shall be changed to read:

(1). The officers of this organization shall be a president, head of the department of interests, and a secretary.

(2). Character and number of departments.

To be determined in the spring of each year by the executive committee, in so far as is possible without constitutional amendments, as interests in the College still or diminish.

Departments for the year 1929—30 shall be as follows:

(a) Informational Relations
(b) Dean of Students
(c) Debate
(d) Election.

(2). Heads of departments to be elected by the club as a whole, in case no department is assigned to the club by the departmental committee.

(3). Secretary to be elected by the club as a whole.

(4). Qualifications and duties of officers.

(a) President, secretary, and treasurer, as before. President shall act as chairman of the department and see that meetings are held at each department as the occasion arises.

(b) Heads of departments shall be upper chairman of one year's membership.

(c) They shall organize meetings in their several fields, calling the number of meetings as equally as possible.

(d) The program for the year is to be planned by the executive committee in the fall of each year, charge of the organization of each meeting to be assumed by the head of the department most concerned.

(4). A 5 and 4 stand.

PERRY had a friend who found herself in the hospital last week, with, according to the medical examination, infections in her throat, chest, and lungs, and a fever higher than 102. She had stayed in the hospital and stayed a week, enjoying the nourishing food the hospital provided, as well as the expert nursing. Perry simply couldn’t leave her to lie in the sparsely furnished hospital. She had to visit her and stay with her. She went to see her every day, bringing her gifts and flowers. The hospital staff found it strange that she was allowed to visit her, according to the hospital rules, but she had to visit her. She was the only one who could make her feel better. She stayed with her for a week, and when she left, her friend was much improved. She returned home, but she was still very weak. She was not allowed to leave the hospital with colds, according to the hospital rules, but she had to visit her. She visited her every day, bringing her flowers and gifts. She stayed with her for a week, and when she left, her friend was much improved. She returned home, but she was still very weak.

Not to go long after this midnight expedition, the Sophomore was again called to aid her. She had a kitten, a very charming little animal, with unusual spirit. He ventured to fear, however, that for two days he was repulsed. At last, the little Sophomore found him, howling mournfully, up a tree. He would wave first one paw, then another, in a very moved manner, being entirely incapable of taking that first downward step, that would lead to safety. His owner timidly climbed the tree after him, and, on being reached, he gave a slight scream and climbed on his outstretched arm, down over a good grip, which insignified her, too.

The time being, the Sophomore joined with pets, birds, bears, fish, and even a morbidly interested person, and instructed a passenger to inform the fire-department. The history apparatus drew up under her tree, a ladder was raised, one freshman clung all the way up it, shield fastened to the station hall well up, and a third ladder secure at the bottom. The kitten was lowered from freshman to fireman, and then the Sophomore was passed along the same mode. After she had thanked them gravely, one of the men, purring to her behind, said, “Why. isn’t you the girl we put in the window a week ago?”

Perry indulged in the movies one night, and, as custom had it, was sitting for the bus on that cold, windy corner, across from the theater. Two young fellows from Wellesley approached, and finding no bus there, crawled to the policeman with the white suspenders, and asked him when the bus arrived. On the hour and the half-hour, they were told. “Rich,” grumbled one, coming closer to the curb, “what good does that do us? He didn’t say which hour.”

Horticultural interests were the topic of the day, and Perry was conversing with the members of various plants in a friend who did not seem to be very interested in them. He mentioned Wickersham Jew as a nice variety for college rooms, since it does not require much care. “What’s that?” asked the friend. He described it vaguely as a kind of ivy, and they left the subject. Later the friend wandered into Perry’s room, and spied her little green plant. Recognition flashed in her eyes, and she exclaimed, “Ain’t that your own Jew?”

It may be that today only forty per cent of the Wellesley alumnae get married, but Perry thinks it must have been different in the old days—then were enough Wellesley grand-daughters in the college now to provide a desirable group for the two dinners held at Tower on March 13 and 15 by Mrs. Ewing and Miss Wilson and Mrs. Ewing and Miss Pendleton, respectively.

The Last Fling

It scarcely seems possible that this will be the last time we shall ever write, but as the last of our line is about to face the front page. Scarcely possible, we can hardly agree, for now we have, as a great degree, emptied college to us since the fall of our freshman year, and losing the relic on other hands given it the unwanted sensation of being a joke who has run his last race.

The Democrat, with its pictorial decorations and Adams’ shining red pen, was on our desk the other night, and the dormitory rooms from which we shifted them. Books have been changed, but Newi has remained, a link with the past and a present that is superficially the same. And now we must realize that News still influences people much more by our transient effect.

The thought of this, last time, makes us wonder as we dare admit, News has played such a large part in our college life that we feel as if a ship of State is passing through our eyes.

We are not going to say, having read the paper matters deeply, never understand the joke, or, for that matter, strong enough, but even make up and adding word frictions, have become convinced that certain people who have a new house has presented itself. The News has been more vibrant, less strung out, and more mature.

We have not done many things we once stumbled to accomplish, we have our backs turned to the fact that our four years are ended for an encore to pop into the Democrat, for we look vital factor.

One who does not love printer’s ink and looks at some of the trash-scouting for news, the busy click of typewriters, the unity of reporters in front of the paper, the pluck of newspapers, the paper matters deeply, cannot understand the joke. Humor is strong enough, but even make up and adding word frictions, have become convinced that certain people who have a new house has presented itself. The News has been more vibrant, less strung out, and more mature.

Sawing A Woman in Half

ILLUSTRATION:
A large packing case is exhibited on a raised platform. A young woman stands inside the box. Her head and feet project, and are held by spotters while the magician makes a cutaneous saw cut, with the help of an assistant, sawing through the center of the box and apparently through the woman.

PLANNING:
There are many explanations for this illusion. One method of performing this illusion requires the presence of our girls in the box. Our girl cuts up in the left half of the box with her head and hands protruding, giving the illusion of an illustrated body. The other girl is doubled up in the right half of the box, with only her feet showing. Nobody is saved in half.

Cigarette advertising, too, has its tricks. Consider the illusion that "Flavor" can be achieved by some kind of magical housekeeping in manufacturing.

EXPLANATION: Just three factors control the flavor of a cigarette. The addition of artificial flavoring, the blending of various tobaccos. And the quality of the tobaccos themselves. Quality is by far the most important. Domestic cigarette tobaccos vary in price from $5 a pound up to $60 a pound. Imported tobaccos vary from 50c a pound to $1.15.

No wonder then, that cigarettes differ in taste—since distinctive, pleasing flavor depends not only upon the blending of the costlier tobaccos.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, more expensive tobaccos than any other popular brand.

Try Camels. Give your taste a chance to sense the subtle difference that lies in costlier tobaccos—a difference that means all the world in smoking pleasure...in pure, unalloyed satisfaction.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE NEWS

ALUMNAE WILL HOLD WEEK-END MEETING

...begin at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Academic Council Room, Green Hall, and the conference closes with the Sunday sermon at 12:45 o'clock.

It is believed that many alumnae will espouse and advocate the spirit of this opportunity to return to the College, and to exchange ideas and experiences with each other, as well as to enjoy pleasant moments of inspiration and beauty, as ever present on the Wellesley Campus. The topic for discussion, it is felt, should prove to be widely appealing and thought-provoking in its present day of unemployment, and economic depression, and only because more people have more leisure than ever before, but also because there seems to be a growing and a deepening conviction among that permanent fulfillment can be only in the realm of the mind and the spirit.

For further information please address the Executive Secretary, Alumnae Office, Wellesley.
