Chinese Crisis Evokes Student Participation

At a time when political and economic problems are engaging the attention of the world with unusual degree, it is interesting to observe the enthusiasm with which such events are being followed by students in China. The following extracts are drawn from the News, the periodical published by the News and Literature Cooperative Committee of the University, which is written by Fr. Yeh-Chien Chen, a senior student in English there who, with interest, has brought it up to date.

"In trying to understand the various events that are occurring in various parts of China, it is well to bear in mind the fact that the Chinese students have been fighting for many years for a democratic government. The Chinese students have been fighting for the right to vote, for the right to have a voice in government, for the right to have a voice in the making of laws. They have been fighting for the right to have a voice in the making of laws. They have been fighting for the right to have a voice in the making of laws. A flavor that neither possesses alone

Early in the 17th century, tobacco seed from America was taken to Turkey. Different soil, different climate, different temperatures night and day, and different farming methods produced an entirely new tobacco — small in size, but very rich and aromatic.

Four certain spots are famous for the quality of their Turkish tobacco — Xanthi and Cavalla in Greece, Samosum and Smyrna in Turkey. And it is principally from these places that our buyers get the Turkish for Chesterfield.

These Turkish tobaccos are blended in just the right amount, with Domestic tobaccos. It is this blending and cross-banding of the right amount of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos which gives Chesterfield a flavor that neither possesses alone.
Plea for Exactitude

These are critical moments for the nation, whose welfare will be irreversibly affected by any decisive action. But it is the responsibility of the leaders, for those few seconds of the announcement of such a policy, to present the public with the facts in a way it can understand, in a way that will ensure that the public is not being misled, but will understand the consequences of its actions. The failure to do so will have serious implications for the future of the nation.

Next Year Already

With Spring Time there comes inevitably the task of choosing electives and filling out schedules for next year. This task comes at a time when most of our students are already heavily laden with work. Many students have announced that they will take this last week in April, and many papers are due. Juniors are busy with last minute preparations for their course for next year without having the mind clearing break this year. We are beginning to look forward to June and summer vacation. It is not a propitious time to ask us to concentrate on plans for next year.

We hate to seem priggish, but we feel that for all of these reasons, there is too much at stake to make these decisions so casually. We appeal to our students for next year not to make their plans more complicated, and to let us do the planning for them so that we have no choice but to sit back and see the results of our decisions.

A most successful and enjoyable plan revival was presented Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, April 30, in the Little Theatre, by Miss Jean Wicker, member of the music department. The program opened with Four Old Dances for the Lute as transcribed in 1500-1550. The first dance, Reiana, was followed by a delightful rendering. The delicate quality of the melody was suggested in the second section by runs and ornaments to give it a little bit more color. Mendelssohn's Aretta, Variation Dance, followed and ably displayed Miss Wicker's excellent musicianship. Each variation was presented with careful study and interpretation, yet remained a part of the whole, giving the theme a correct amount of emphasis.

The Chorus included the tenor in F Major, the F Major and B flat Major Preludes, and the A flat in A flat Major, op. 42. The Alto, an interesting study in simplicity and dramatic quality, was done especially well in the opening section which is very difficult to interpret because of the complexity of it. A lack of dramatic intensity in the more technical and brilliant passages was greatly due to the exigencies in time. The two Preludes which followed, in which Miss Wicker showed her sympathetic mastery of the real Chopin kept us entranced. The spiraling A flat Major Valley brought the first half of the program to a close.

The remaining group, was done exclusively from modern composers. The delightful and charming Caprices op. 25, no. 1, by Prokofiev, received spirited handling. The delicate and emotional Nocturne in E flat by Chopin (from Gaspard de la nuit) was fully realized in its presentation. Gershwn's Rhapsody in Blue, and Mozart's Allegro in A major were played with great intensity and the miniature A major, was most attractive. The concluding number, Fantasia from A B major (Barbaresi), by Chotini was slightly marred by evident faulting but was done well on the whole. Miss Wicker's encore was Rachmaninoff's Rhapsody.
