"But if in your thought you must measure time into seasons, let each season encircle all other seasons.

‘And let today embrace the past with remembrance and the future with longing.’

Miss Margaret Clapp

Knowing that as a Wellesley student Margaret Clapp had been president of C. G., and as a history professor had recently won a Pulitzer Prize, everyone acclaimed last June's announcement of our new president as "the perfect choice". We could not appreciate then, as we do now, how rich a meaning Miss Clapp would give to those words. Since that first speech in Honors Chapel, she has continually inspired us to live fully: "The best preparation for life is to take part in life now." Already we have come to know her diverse capabilities and immense personal charm, her serenity, enthusiasm, strength, and understanding. As her first graduating class, we wish her the greatest happiness in years to come.
Mrs. Mildred McAfee Horton
As president of Wellesley, Mrs. Horton instilled in her students not only faith in the importance of learning, but also belief in the necessity of using our education for purposes beyond self-interest. We of the class of 1950 are grateful to her for the theme of our yearbook. In her Letter to the Alumnae, written in October, 1945, she said:

Wellesley’s ‘ivory tower’ has clear windows and outward swinging doors. From its windows students see a wide and profoundly interesting world. Through its doors they emerge to serve that world with faithful honesty and honest faith.

There is no doubt that we are living in an ivory tower at Wellesley; but we, too, feel that this atmosphere is the very one which best prepares us for facing the world of reality. We are getting something precious here—call it Education, an Ideal, or a Sense of Value.

We do not deny having lived in an ivory tower: we do claim that we have discovered here that the just and the good are more than words. They are ways of life.
The year of our Lord, 1950 . . .
And, Lord permitting, the year of our graduation. As the new half-century opens Wellesley is celebrating her seventy-fifth anniversary of tradition; to us it seems that we are leaving a known area for an unknown era. Yet we do not leave entirely that which during four years has become so much a part of our lives. Taking with us a certain essence of the knowledge, the experience, and the spirit found here in the Known, we feel more thoroughly prepared to meet the exciting years of the Unknown with confidence and courage.
Tower Court
From these windows we have seen worlds we had not dreamed of and discovered regions still to be explored.
We Dedicate this section to Miss Lever. Whether advising us about further study, a career, or marriage—“A husband is a congenial man with a lifetime guarantee”—she has shown a sincere interest in our futures as well as in our present academic lives.

Some of us came to Wellesley with a literary background of Proust and Henry James; others, probably the majority of us, were more versed in the vicissitudes of our favorite mystery-story heroes. On our conglomerate tastes the literature and foreign language departments did not attempt to impose a uniform law of good literature, but rather they helped us to develop our own sense of value so that we might judge for ourselves. Now, with this background, we shall have the ability to evaluate the new ideas and methods of expression as we go into a world more full of propaganda and comic strips than of romances and sonnets.

ART AND MUSIC

In an effort to avoid the isolation of art from life, Wellesley art courses encourage the study of art against a background of history, and offer practical experience to complement the information learned in lecture. The ever-popular Art Department phrase “sensuous reality” becomes more than words when we ourselves have tried to create something expressive of that term with the artistic materials at our disposal. Even if few of us affect a beret or smock alter we leave college, our art courses have given us something of the creator’s—as well as of the connoisseur’s—point of view.

Many forms of musical expression have been open to us in Billings, that ancient and honorable stronghold. In the classroom we learned not only the laws of music, but also the cultural conditions behind its creation; in the practice rooms we interpreted the music of great composers, or perhaps created our own music on a less grandiose scale. In the listening rooms we changed our role to that of audience, playing recordings for relaxation or for analytical study of technical aspects. Because of the beauty which became a part of our lives in Billings, we soon learned to overlook the old building’s architectural faults and to love it.
HISTORY

Buried in the past? Only as it pertains to the records of today. Those of us who heard a certain lecturer from Brooklyn College in March, 1949, thank this department for our introduction to a contemporary historian who has become a vital part of our college life—Miss Margaret Clapp.

PHILOSOPHY

If interested in 101, then possibly 300 seminars complete with coffee. In both we have learned to value logical thinking, to expand our Ethics and to use our Reason—in our personal as well as our academic lives.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Few studies are as directly concerned with all aspects of our world as the social sciences. Settlement work in Boston and political internship in Washington, D. C., are only two of the ways that we have been encouraged to apply classroom theories of the political, social, and economic structure of our country.

BIBLICAL HISTORY

"In the Beginning . . ." and in the end the kings of Israel have stood us in good stead. Whatever our religious convictions, we have found our courses in Bible rewarding both as history and literature, and as a basis for a firmer faith today.

SPEECH

Breathe deeply! Enunciate! The Southern drawl and the mid-Western "twang" have been changed to civilized cosmopolitan expression. Not only have speech classes given us new ability to be "articulate young women", but they have helped us in our dramatic efforts in Barn plays and Theater Workshop.

THEATER WORKSHOP

Curtain! In Green's basement our stage-struck selves practised producing the plays written by senior "comp" students. We also gave critical study to current Boston productions. In both instances, by seeing the essential elements in theatrical experience, we have learned to interpret and evaluate drama.

EDUCATION

Hey, teacher! From the practical experience offered in teaching children to the presentation of distinguished speakers in the 1949 symposium on constructive forces in Education, this department has taken every opportunity to make certain that we understand the significance of our education.
The award for "most conspicuous departments on campus" goes to the sciences. Their students are repeatedly bringing home twigs from the woods, bottled souvenirs from the zoo lab, and fragrant odors from the chem lab. Or they are heading for the greenhouses, the aquarium, the vivarium, or the Hunnewell Observatory at odd hours; or pacing up for geology field trips, or sharpening tools for cartology or gem-cutting—anything to make the non-science students look, by contrast, book-wormish. We know, however, that their work is not all experiments and no books. The medical terms, the psychological phrases, the words like "thermodynamics", "atomic physics", and "nuclear fission" that arise in conversation outside class show a genuine theoretical and practical knowledge of the modern world.
In the modern world, increasing emphasis is being laid on an understanding of man in his physical environment. That the fulfilling of this prerequisite leads to better comprehension of man in the social, economic, and political fields is shown clearly in the broad courses the various science departments have planned. Occasions like the 1949 Science Conference, appealing to the specialist and the layman alike, stimulate the entire campus to an awareness of the vast extent of the scientific field and its steady expansion in our times.
Our learning begins with syllabus and text; but it is pleasanably enriched through informal groups bringing together those of us with special mutual interests.

The Classical Club includes not only Greek and Latin students but also all those interested in the history, art, and philosophy of classical antiquity. It is best known on campus for its polished productions of Greek plays, which have in the past included such works as The Frogs and Agamemnon. These dramas have given Wellesley students an opportunity of witnessing the beauty and power of plays which are seldom performed beyond the college campus. Other activities this year included a lecture by Edith Hamilton, author of the authoritative work on Greek mythology, readings of student papers, and a film on archæological operations in modern Greece.

COSMOPOLITAN CLUB

Within Wellesley's ivory tower exists a little One World in the form of the Coz Club. Built around the foreign students here as well as any interested American students, the club provides opportunity for the reciprocal exchange of ideas and the further understanding of countries represented by the members. One meeting this year was a panel discussion on Latin America; another, a "Back to Wellesley" report by some of the girls who spent their junior year abroad.

Coz Club is affiliated with the International Students Association of Greater Boston and through this group has met many other young cosmopolitans.
The Slavic Society seeks to interest not only girls of Slavic origin but also Wellesleyites from every cultural background in the life of the eastern European countries.

At one meeting this year, Mr. Barnett, whose concerts are always a Wellesley event, performed an all-Chopin program commemorating the hundredth anniversary of the composer's death. A former Czechoslovakian minister of education spoke at another meeting, and in the spring a Russian Easter celebration featured Cheteleff and his Russian choir. The Society was also instrumental in securing several first-rate Russian films for all-college entertainment during the year.

MATHEMATICS CLUB

"Everything correlates" might well be the motto of the Math Club, which aims to show the relation of mathematics to other types of intellectual activity. In programs this year club members heard not only Harvard and Wellesley professors, but also fellow students who spoke on such esoteric subjects as non-Euclidean geometry. Other meetings were designed to give girls an idea of the professional possibilities of mathematics, so that the bread lines of the future will not include Wellesley math majors. For recreation Math Clubbers were seen working on mathematical puzzles and playing with moebius strips, a highly advanced form of paper dolls.

Le programme de l'Alliance cette année a été composé de trois réunions. En octobre, quelques étudiantes ont joué des scènes basées sur leurs visites en France. À Noël il y avait une représentation des fabliaux de La Fontaine. On a fini par jouer une comédie dans laquelle les élèves et des membres de la faculté ont joint leurs talents pour la production. Les étudiantes et les professeurs de français ont eu l'occasion de se rencontrer dans une atmosphère très différente de celle de la classe, et ils ont pu voir et prendre part à quelques aspects de la culture française.

CIRCOLO ITALIANO

Il CIRCOLO ITALIANO diede anche nelle scorso anno prova della sua vitalità: rappresentazioni drammatiche, canzoni e danze allietarono le nostre serate e misero in luce versatilità delle nostre socie.

Accogliemmo tra noi Italiani in visita negli Stati Uniti ed Americani che, di ritorno dall'Italia, sentivano il bisogno di comunicare il loro entusiasmo per quanto avevano goduto nel Bel Paese.

Non mancammo poi di portare il nostro cordiale contributo a riunioni di carattere internazionale e poliglotta, nelle quali i vari circoli letterari andavano a gara nel manifestare il loro apprezzamento per quanto di bello e di buono seppero creare i vari popoli del mondo.
And in our friendships with students from foreign countries as well as from our own, we begin to realize that "One World" has no boundaries, but symbolizes an understanding and a respect among all mankind.

* We regret that we were unable to include all the foreign students now at Wellesley.
The best preparation for life . . .

These words have been running through our heads, and now, as we recall the academic year, they seem particularly meaningful. Our teachers, classes, and clubs have laid a foundation for creative thinking in the formulation of our own ideas.

. . . to take part in life now.

In recording the next section, we have come to realize the value of this daily participation in life. We have learned not only how to accomplish a task, to know our capacities and limitations, but also to work in close community with those around us.

From these doors we have found diverse paths of interest and set out upon far-reaching roads.
We Dedicate this section to Miss McPherrin because she took us by surprise. Never have we known anyone who could simultaneously put us at ease, amuse us, and inspire our confidence so completely. We shall remember her name as she has always remembered each of ours.

MISS JEANETTE McPHERRIN, M. A.
"CG is you and you are CG." College Government, the efficient clearing-house for student and faculty opinion, not just a solemn conclave of "wheels", is depending more than ever on the student for ideas at the same time that it serves her. For example, this year the class which traditionally would have worn Wellesley blue caps appeared in green ones. This change resulted not from the persuasions of an eccentric hat-maker, but from strong student feeling against blue caps for any one class. The decision was carried out by the Senate, the legislative body of CG whose members exercise a thoughtful guardianship over that Wellesley pamphlet of precepts, the Grey Book. Last year's student committee report on reorganization instigated the first of many revisions tending toward greater democracy on campus, of which the new method of selecting vll juniors is one example.

Superior Court, as always, has the distinction of being the one College organization that Wellesleites have no desire to become acquainted with, for an encounter with the Court generally means broken rules or too many irregularities. It must be admitted, however, that the decisions of the Court often temper justice with mercy and hand down opinions worthy of a Holmes.

Service Organization may have grown very weary painting bucks with big antlers, but the results were most rewarding. The slogan, "Don't Pass the Buck, Give It", which became the byword of the Service Fund drive during November helped the organization collect $16,000 to send to welfare and educational organizations throughout the world. Service Organization members are always busy with new projects on campus whether it is sending CARE packages, collecting old clothes, or sound-scribing textbooks on records for blind students. Social work in Boston is one of their most interesting annual activities, while meeting D. P. boats was a new opportunity which aroused much enthusiasm this year.

The name of Service Organization is also associated with many festive occasions. During Thanksgiving week they gave a party for children from a Boston settlement house; and before Christmas vacation they sponsored the annual Christmas Bazaar and International Students' Day which provided education and entertainment, as well as the chance to buy early Christmas presents from local charities. Through Service Organization, Wellesley has been able to express effectively its feeling of responsibility towards the community in which it exists.
In 1919, with enthusiasm for furthering among world youth the cooperation indispensable to peace, Wellesley students decided to adopt a sister college in China. One in Peking, later renamed Yenching University, was chosen, and to it we pledged the financial support and student-teacher exchange which has since been carried through so successfully. Spoken English, bicycles, and American sports, dating, and study customs soon became part of life on Yenching's beautiful campus. During World War II, our Chinese sisters trekked hundreds of miles, struggling ingeniously against the greatest odds to keep together; today, under the People's Party, Christian-administered Yenching again faces crucial problems. It has managed to exist, however, on an amazingly economical budget; and the government has recently commended it for the high scholarship, leadership, and community spirit of its graduates. Yenching's curriculum, with its emphasis on liberal arts and religion, continues unchanged except for the addition of three courses in Marxian philosophy. In 1951, with an eye on China's political situation, we must vote, as a college, on whether or not we will keep open the avenues of contact, understanding, shared ideals, and firm friendship existing between Wellesley and Yenching.
Whenever you discover an article in your newspaper about Wellesley, you may be sure that Press Board had something to do with it. In the words of its chairman, it is the college organization which “keeps the outside world aware of Wellesley”. Working closely with the Publicity Office, its Boston Board handles all the news and features which are of interest to this local area, while the Hometown Board supplies newsworthy material for various home areas.

Press Board’s work is never dull, nor is it ever lacking. The office itself is always host to a passing parade of interesting speakers, reporters, and photographers. The Board is continually being asked to round up a group of girls in fifteen minutes to pose for a picture of Mr. Curtis’ seminar, or to perch on bicycles for Time photographers. Keeping photographers out of mischief has always been another of Press Board’s principal jobs. Last year when a cameraman was about to take a picture of a group of girls in an apple tree he was discouraged by a Board Member; according to the chairman, “Wellesley exists solely from the waist up!” Despite frequent bouts with deadlines and the resulting fatigue, all members of Press Board agree that life is never boring.

Travelling through subterranean channels, WBS subtly invades the privacy of campus dorms. Popular songs, variety shows, plays, classical music—sounds to suit every taste—are broadcast.

After a search through the campus for live talent, WBS initiated some new programs this year. The early morning audience was treated to more amusing nonsense by the disc jockeys, and Wellesley's amateurs performed for the college on the afternoon Feature Programs. Seventy-Fifth's "Miss Hush" received wide publicity over WBS in the fall. Radio's regular schedule of plays was interspersed with productions of an independent drama group which had its own director and publicity squad. The contrast of voices of the Harvard, Tech, and Babson actors made the shows all the more convincing.

While LP records made Music for Studying more relaxing for the Technicians and the audience, the extra hour each night for broadcasting demanded subdivision of the staffs. A new office—secretary to the president and treasurer—was created, and the department of program and script was split in two.

These new features, together with the old favorites on the Wellesley Broadcasting Station, resulted in another successful year "for your listening pleasure".

After hounding faculty, creeping into the dormitory at 1:30, and screaming for more No-Doz, a harassed but tipsily happy News staff manages somehow to meet the deadline each week. While the editors genially crack whips, reporters search every crevice for news fit to print, and business staffers canvass the vit in their struggles to keep the paper out of the red (red leanings being so unpopular these days).

News this year has mirrored and attempted to mold campus opinion and activity. The staff has aimed at reflecting both the serious and whimsical aspects of college life, fitting them into the jigsaw of world affairs. A four-page spread on the Education Conference in the fall was the first of several supplements depicting the role of Wellesley and college students in international living.

Staff members learn far more than the meaning of such esoteric by-words as slugs, stepping, and 14-point heads—they gain a fundamental knowledge of journalism and the influential position newspapers hold in shaping thought. By living and breathing printer’s ink, Wellesley journalists combine creativeness with preparation for active participation in the world outside the ivory tower.
Although there may have been rumors to the contrary, Forum is a non-partisan organization, not subversive, and has never been subject to Congressional investigation. As an all-college organization it is a large parent-body, with its smaller progeny carrying on a program which allows a certain amount of elasticity for the unexpected developments that always crop up in world affairs.

Forum launched the year with a lecture by Senator Saltonstall of Massachusetts. Momentum was gained through the activities of the Debate Group, the Young Progressives, the Young Republicans, a student delegation to the town of Wellesley’s chapter of ADA, and chapters of the United Nations Association and the United World Federalists. Students participated in panel discussions and debates, as well as in conferences to exchange views with delegates from other colleges, while on the practical side they took part in local elections and other political functions, lending their time and effort to the causes in which they believe.

The aim of all this training in current affairs is not to produce future lady presidents of the United States, but to assure for our democracy future community members, who, through their responsible action and constructive thought, will make that democracy a living reality.
Putting their "practical music" into action, Wellesley's Orchestra members meet twice weekly for a few hours of highly specialized artistic teamwork. This year their performances included a Mozart-Haydn-Vivaldi program in the fall, a winter concert with the M. I. T. glee club and the Wellesley choir, and a spring program with Brown featuring the Bach Magnificat. Orchestra has the distinction of being one of the few organizations composed of both faculty and students. These two groups get along extremely well, but it may be wise for a girl to investigate the status of the friendly violinist beside her before she complains about the Bible exam!

Stiff competition makes for the Choir voices which more than one ecstatic reviewer has called “heavenly”. Each of Choir’s two hundred members had to pass a preliminary voice test and, six weeks later, a trial-by-jury in quartet singing. This year’s Wellesley warblers provided Chapel music daily, sang at four Vesper Services, and did a number of secular music programs. Nor do they believe in singing in a cloister. Their jaunts throughout New England during the year included concerts with outstanding male choruses at Amherst and Brown, who provided not only the necessary balance of voices but also good entertainment afterwards.

The Barnswallows may well place a feather in their caps for the highly successful 1949-50 season. Although Barn promotion workers are generally averse to Hollywood's "super-magnificent, stupendo-colossal" adjectives, they agreed with their Wellesley audience that the fall presentation of Dark of the Moon was the biggest and best ever done here. Incorporating both music and dancing in the drama for the first time at Wellesley, Dark of the Moon also marked technical advances in the form of seven complete changes of set. The second play, East-ward in Eden, was also a love story, of which Emily Dickinson was the heroine. The final program was The Two Orphans, 1875's most popular melodrama, done in honor of the Seventy-fifth Anniversary. Staged in a form as near to the original as possible, the drama featured oles between the acts and footlights covered with gaslight shields.

Besides these, various groups in Barn presented six one-act plays from Aristophanes to Noel Coward, supplied actors for the theater workshop one-acts, and performed parts of senior comp plays. All of which activities bespeak Barn's purpose of giving Wellesley good theater while enabling all those interested in any phase of the theater to get valuable experience.
Mr. Durant stated that Wellesley is dedicated to “glorify God and the Lord Jesus Christ through the education of women”. Chapel is the college organization which comes nearest to carrying out his words.

This year Chapel placed an entirely new emphasis on a continuous program of activity, the focal points of which were four commissions: Christian Faith and Worship, Interfaith, Social Responsibility, and World Relatedness. Chapel’s original idea of religious discussion continued, but the new keynote was direct participation. Girls came not as passive onlookers but as sharers of responsibility who learned both the meaning and the application of their faiths. For example, the Social Responsibility Commission not only studied political morality but went to the Massachusetts Legislature to see it in action. If they were distressed about political practices, they wrote to their congressmen. Again, the speakers who came to college were not only preachers but laymen active in the social, economic, and political worlds, who could illustrate the place of religion in today’s life.

Chapel began to bear the fruit of last year’s extensive reorganization and redefinition of its ideological basis, and the whole college learned what a spirited thing faith can be when it is accompanied by imagination and enthusiasm.
Three years old and a most rambunctious child, NSA is Wellesley's Jack of All Trades (with a deaf ear carefully turned to the second half of that old saw). NSA is a precocious organization, venting a youthful enthusiasm on every one of its varied projects.

Proving that it can serve Wellesley directly, NSA runs a student Travel Bureau and, under its Hospitality Program, brings Wellesley girls and foreign students from local colleges together for special events on campus. Suggestions from colleges all over the nation are acted upon, or re-routed to the campus organization to which they will be most helpful. By no means confined to campus activities, a hard-working subcommittee has organized a sociological summer tour in the United States for twenty European students who will study Problems of Democracy. NSA is in close touch with students throughout the country, and through house meetings and discussion groups has striven to bring to Wellesley an understanding and interest in the problems faced by less fortunate fellow students in this country and abroad.
Those canny students who wish to imbibe culture in a pleasant, vaguely Bohemian fashion are often found in the ranks of the Art Club, which has quenched the artistic thirsts of countless ivory-towerites with a heady menu of lectures, movies, contests, life-models, raffles, and exhibits. When all these ingredients have been mixed together with a dash of the inimitable left-bank atmosphere of the Art Building (created by a smoker tradition on the West steps and a coke machine in the basement 'slums') and a pinch of imagination has been added by faculty advisor McAndrew, the result is a recipe to suit the tastes of a connoisseur.

DANCE GROUP

"1-2-3-4, 1-2-3-4. Get that rhythm. No, not that way, feel the movement." The memories of these admonitions will haunt the dreams of Dance Group members for years to come. Their schedule began with Dark of the Moon and was followed by lengthy preparations for the group's own performance, which featured music commissioned especially for it. In addition to these college activities, weekly meetings were held, sponsoring guest teachers and lecturers; and demonstrations in other colleges gave all fifty-seven members an opportunity to perform. Members finished the year tired and a bit gaunt, but well-rewarded in Tree Day, the crown of all their efforts.

They fly through the air with the greatest of ease,
But laugh up their sleeves at a flying trapeze,
For they pilot their planes high over the trees
Or learn about flying with the ground 'neath their knees.

Ground school, inter-collegiate air meets, flying lessons at a Marlborough airport, solo flying for those who have their licenses—nothing is too much for the Wellesley Flying Club, which has tried to spread enthusiasm among flying fans and to foster new winged Wellesleyites. From now on the college password is, “It's a bird, it's a plane, it's my roommate!”

When Pandit Nehru visited the college in the fall, one of the things which he said touched him most deeply was the playing of the Indian National Anthem on the carillon. Wellesley is proud of its enthusiastic musicians who climb the tower at all hours to play the bells. In the eighteen years since Mrs. C. Nichols Greene gave us the carillon, it has become an indispensable part of the college life. In early morning and late afternoon, at step-singing and other special events, the Guild of Carillonneurs sees to it that the Wellesley girl shall have music wherever she goes.
While few Wellesleyites boast the physique of an Amazon, almost all have an interest in at least one sport, be it shuffleboard or squash, field hockey or fencing. Athletic Association, of which every girl is a member, recognizes that a healthy mind can exist only in a healthy body. This rosy-cheeked organization is the main body from which Outing Club and Swimming Club grow, and it sponsors many other activities directly.

The most distinctive of these sports are those connected with crew. In the fall dorm races are held, and in the spring an even keener rivalry is fostered among the four class crews. Other AA-inspired activities are the intercollegiate hockey games, the student-faculty baseball game, and Field Day. Interest runs high, so that even the girls who never come near to winning a "W" or a blazer often take part in athletics outside of regular sports classes.
The Outing Club looks back on this year with memories of charred hot-dogs, snow-scarred skis, and warmed-over sleeping bags. They reconstructed the lean-to, romped with other outing clubs on I.O.C.A. Day, schussed through ski patrol, made merry with equally athletic men at Carousel, and spread their sails over Atlantic waters. They enlivened the Dartmouth, Yale, and Amherst O.C. week-ends, evaded the issue when the Harvard Bike Race winner demanded his kiss, and established a fine tradition of square dances in a never outdone outdoor year.

Swim Club tempers the fire of intellectual life at Wellesley by providing both recreation for the swimmers and marine entertainment for the landlubbers. Its tank-suited mermaids, both from the Apprentice Group and the Swim Club proper, have enjoyed many hours of recreation and team practice in synchronized swimming. The year’s performances included starring roles at Winter Carousel and the Annual Swim Parade, and a command performance at the M.I.T. Junior Prom week-end. The fame of our mermaids is spreading!
That's no Dodger, that's my psych instructor! Scholarship, we've discovered, is only one of a professor's talents when the faculty softball season comes around.

It's not often the carillon plays in the middle of Friday morning classes; it's not often that everyone from U. P. to Movietone News comes to Wellesley; but then, it's not often that the Indian Prime Minister comes to visit us. When he did, Wellesley girls skinned their knees climbing trees to see him.

"Conference on Constructive Forces in Education": it was an impressive title, and an impressive conference. Proof of its success lay not so much in our discussions in Comp or Ec classes as in our twelve o'clock bull sessions when we stayed up late in smoky rooms evaluating our newest theories.
Those of us who didn't utilize what little snow we had for skiing were likely to be found tobogganning down Severance Hill on trays or sliding down the catwalk on notebooks.

There is only one question; where did all the snow come from this year for Winter Carousel?
We have portrayed only the formal elements of our organizations, but to many of us the small happenings of the daily routines make up the patchwork of our memories. We shall not soon forget such things as the Changing of the Guard at the Founders' Proctor's Desk, or the cryptic notices on the Index Board each morning.

In the following section we have included the traditions familiar to all, but there are others — simpler, perhaps, yet cherished. We shall remember the proud red roses for new officers, Mock Academic Council, Christmas Vespers, our comfortable blue jeans, and all the various little things which have patterned our days and are a part of Wellesley.
From this tower we have seen the past, the present, and the future united in one living tradition.
Galen Stone Tower
Honorary member of the class of 1950

We Dedicate this section to Fred Waring, a musician popular with audiences everywhere, and especially so with students who recognize his constructive interest in education, but most popular of all with us, his classmates, for giving us a song, and for adding a lilt to our lives.

FRED WARING
The past is more than fragments of time remembered; in our traditions, it remains an actuality both significant and enduring.

WELLESLEY TRADITIONS

Tree Day

"Let's have a Tree Day tomorrow!" This startling exclamation by Mr. Durant seventy-three years ago raised the curtain on a long line of May celebrations. The present Tree Day is a more complex affair than that of 1877 when students, costumed in black gowns trimmed with color tissue paper and streamers, sang odes and recited class prophecies. But the Ceremony of the Spade still makes use of the original implement, and the Tree Day Mistress and her Court still enter to Pomp and Circumstance. In spite of cynical comments from Harvard men, Wellesley girls do enjoy dancing barefoot on the grass in cheesecloth costumes!

"In what ethereal dances!"

Tree Day Mistress, Nancy Thornton
At six a.m. the sophomores huddle together on Tower Hill, wishing that their big sisters could get a man any other way. Then, in academic robes and blue jeans, the seniors, hoops crashing, tumble down the hill. The winner receives her bride's bouquet; and the Harvard imposter, shivering and wet, gets his dip in Lake Waban. Then the ingenious sophomores, hidden under blotters, sing to the madding throng; and so endeth another May Day celebration.

But in the good old days, May Day was even more energetic! Seniors, dressed in children's clothes, rolled their hoops from class to class and played children's games on the green by College Hall. They also scrubbed the Chapel steps and all the local statuary! Even in the tradition of May Day, the old principle of "evolu" has been at work again.
Honors Chapel

Honors Day Chapel, held at Wellesley in the autumn and early spring, became part of the living tradition of the college thirty years ago. Perhaps the most impressive sight at Wellesley is the colorful and stately academic procession, in which the President, trustees, faculty, graduate students, and seniors march in to the music of the “Priests’ March” from Mendelssohn’s Athalie. We see pageantry seldom found in our world as the company of scholars files in, wearing somber gowns and brilliant hoods which signify everything from “Docteur de L’Université de Paris” to “M. A., Oxonian”. Besides the announcement of new faculty appointments and of students who have won honors, this year’s fall service had the added distinction of being our first official opportunity to meet President Clapp. At the spring Honors Chapel fellowship awards, graduate scholarships for seniors, special research appointments for the faculty, and various student prizes were also announced. Through this tradition, Wellesley honors those who have set her highest standard of scholarship and have enriched her academic life.

Step Singing

“We want Dean McPherrin on our steps!” The seniors, crowded together on the chapel steps, were remembering that this was the last Tuesday they would be standing there singing. Long before the inauguration of Step-Singing in 1902, students had gathered after formal Sunday night chapel to sing hymns, but tonight’s strains of Evolu and The Way a Wellesley Girl Should were hardly hymn-like. Two by two the class of ’50 walked down the steps, received their forget-me-nots and then headed up toward the archway. ’51, ’52, and ’53 rushed eagerly to their new places, singing the Alma Mater as Tra-la-la-la Wellesley echoed from Founders Hill.

A motley crew.

Songleaders: Elinor Bosyan, ’53; Carolyn Racusin, ’52; Sallie Walter, ’51; Barbara Buschmeyer, ’50

“Soft stillness and the night become the touches of sweet harmony.”
Winter Carousel

Old evolu, you certainly affect everything. The affair that used to be Winter Sports Field Day, for instance—what has become of its distinguishing features?

We call it Carousel now, having learned that February weather is not necessarily winter sports weather. Well do we remember the blizzard that came freshman year with skiing and tobogganning in its wake; we remember, too, the 60-degree temperature sophomore year when the blizzard never came. Instead of skating Friday night, we square-dance; instead of catching up on sleep Sunday morning, we catch the bus for Brattleboro.

But whatever happens to Carousel, we’re pretty sure it’s here to stay; it may change, but it will never go.
Junior Show

Invented by the class of 1938 and patented by all successive junior classes, the institution of Junior Show has flourished through the years. At present it is not only a very popular college entertainment but also, true to its original purpose, a highly successful means of consolidating the junior class in a whirlpool of writing, casting, and rehearsing. The result, despite inevitable opening-night trepidations, is always a musical comedy which out-Broadways Broadway.

This is one week-end when a sophomore won’t accept a date unless he’s over forty! Since the founding of Sophomore Fathers’ Day three years ago, between 150 and 225 fathers have been spirited through classes, luncheons, baseball games, and dinners, with barely enough time to sneak a nap before the dance at Tower Court. They have enjoyed, almost as much as their daughters, this new tradition dedicated to Dad.
To a freshman who gets lost between Founders and the Vil as easily as she does between Park Street and the subway, her big sister is all-wise. She is as well acquainted with the Copley as with the third stack of the libe. With the right combination of insouciance and intelligence, both sophisticated and casual, she is a glimpse into every freshman’s future.

Ah, Tupelo, shady, enchanted spot! And is there any Wellesley Lorelai who has not tried to lure her love out to that sylvan point which spells watery disaster to any male unchivalrous enough to refrain from proposing on his third visit?

“Shades up, windows down, lights on.” The clanging bell calls us from our rooms. Sleepy forms, clutching valubles ranging from his picture to a manguy teddy bear, glide noiselessly to ports of call. We know the drill is important, but why does it invariably come when “I’d just fallen asleep.”

Billings at 3:10, Founders at 9:10, Sage at 10:40; even if we never have time to stop at the El Table, even if we have to dash up four flights of stairs and still miss the bell, classes can be fun.

THE WELL-REMEMBERED things that never can be well-recorded

. . . The Vil, Hathaway's and Central Street stores . . .
Hunnewell's and its weirdly tonsured trees . . . our well-remembered friends, the policemen at the foot of Norumbega Hill and inimitable Jess at the crew house . . .
the Well . . . Josie and her Wellesley Special . . . Alice (as always, behind the cash register!) . . . and the daily philosophizing that goes on over myriad cups of coffee . . .

. . . the first wearing of those rather grim academic robes . . . impromptu costume parties . . . ski weekends . . . the open windows and spring fever that pervades the campus from the first of May on . . . these are as much a part of Wellesley as all its traditions.
The present is more than our sixteen hundred and forty-eight individual lives; it is the community that we have found and made in Wellesley.

The Village

The Washington-Wiswall-Little group may have the longest trek to campus, but its freshmen are always first to get balloons, Good Humors, and the morning mail. Notwithstanding stiff muscles from bicycle-riding (developer of “the Wellesley leg”), past residents of these houses have flattened the lawn of stately Washington through rousing football games between the Little Lizards and the Wiswall Worms, snowbattles, and “Red Light”. Gay and gracious living combine to give the close-knit group of girls from this corner of the Vil a good start on the road to . . . (see pages 64 and 65).
Anyone who has lived on the corner of Washington Street and Weston Road, is already friends with the “big brown barn” that stands calmly there. No one ever spells her name correctly, but everyone knows that Noanett is the mother of a large happy family of freshmen, as well as the center of operations for the renowned triumvirate which includes allies Crofton and Webb. There are no Gothic spires, ivied balconies, or trolleys to the campus, yet no one wants to leave when June comes around.

The New England frame exteriors of these sister dormitories give no indication of the life teeming within. Eliot, with its rooms as large as a barn or as small as a mouse-hole, is noted for its past existence as a shoe factory. Joslin is notorious for the spaciousness of its third floor rooms, while Elms is famous for a legendary maid, remembered only by the class of ’50, who had a heart of gold, and whose name was Mrs. O’Brien. The entire group is known for those large-scale song fests and sunbathing seiges which create the incomparably casual atmosphere of this corner of the Vil.
Stone-Davis

A true Stone-Davis-ite will never claim beauty for the living rooms or efficiency for the washing machines, but just ask her about her view of the lake, the red leaves on the walk in the fall, or the "good gals" she has met there. Coke parties in the court in springtime, "Oliver Davis Day" — a combination of birthdays, Halloween, and April Fool's Day rolled into one — and a love of group singing keep the inhabitants happy in their non-academic hours. Reliable reports have it that past Wellesley presidents have known Stone and Davis girls best due to meetings on the way to chapel.

Navy-Dower Homestead

The freshman group of Navy-Dower-Homestead is unique for its combination of Mr. Durant's original homestead and barn (now Dower) with a three-year-old former Wave barracks. One of the most scenic spots on campus, the location of these dorms is ideal for athletic pursuits such as skating, golfing, and tennis — yet even the non-athletes advocate the good life as lived there.
Munger—Norumbega

To an art major Munger represents Dutch architecture—to an alumni it represents what every house should be: conveniently located, and equipped with depot, basement dining room, and a fireplace.

Mungerites themselves feel no need to go into the details of their co-op dorm; their theme song is “It's Munger makes the world go round”—no details necessary. Who else has a linzer system that is infallible even when the elevator breaks down, or, for that matter, who else has less need to worry about elevator troubles? Who else has spring square dances in the courtyard, annual visits from this Munger, or a house birthday party?

But Munger has its freshman counterpart. Externally, perhaps, the only similarity is the lack of elevator problems, but there's the similarity of cooperative living that gives a feeling of solidarity and personal responsibility. It's Munger makes the world go round, but it's Norumbega that gives the initial impetus.
The Hazard Quadrangle
Bebee, Cazenove, Pomeroy, Shafer

Born in the early 1900's, rocked to sleep by rollicking trains, modestly hiding its form behind pseudo-Gothic fultubow, cloaked in ivy and sporting onion-top hats, stands The Quad, temporary mother of six hundred students. Behind each shining window-eye is a feeling, knowing soul—migrating souls, who travel to classes for improvement and to Harvard for recreation, but who always wander back for food, sleep, and companionship.

There is something unique about The Quad, make no mistake. From the elevators which habitually stop between floors and the would-be Harvard football stars who play their Sunday afternoon games on the green to the driveway appropriated by the seniors as spring training ground for the hoop race, it has a lovable personality all its own. The Quad clings to her plot of Wellesley soil and finds unity in a college spirit compounded equally of informality and friendliness.
Tower Court

Tower Court stands in Gothic grandeur, commanding both the campus and Lake Waban from its hill. Composed of the three dormitories, Claffin, Severance, and Tower, it surrounds a grassy court marking the site of old College Hall. In the spring and fall this court becomes a pastoral study hall, and in the fall it is also the scene of the annual dance which transforms it into a New Orleans Mardi Gras or a Swiss Village. During 1949-50 for the first time the three houses held Sunday-night step-singing on the steps leading from the court to the Lake; in the winter the singing continued inside Tower.

Visiting dignitaries and concert artists who come to Wellesley invariably spend the night in Tower Court. Girls entering the lofty portals to see a friend are likely not to run into a Hu Shih or a Dorothy Maynor. In lieu of these, she will certainly find a multitude of Harvard and Tech men; for certainly the Tower Court group is widely known and appreciated by college casanovas, as well as by more illustrious souls.
AGORA

Betty Wise, President; Marjorie Wreching, Vice-President; Anne Vickery, Treasurer; Elaine Kittle, Secretary; Terry Harris, Central Committee Member; Nancy Aitken and Shirley Houser, Purveyors; Barbara McMaster, Housekeeper

Founded in 1890 as the "Cottage Street Political Club", Agora is now known as the lakeside society with the political bent; its twice-yearly program meetings on current events in their house, which boasts a gold helmet of Athena and General Pershing’s World War I flag, are themselves current events at Wellesley.

ALPHA KAPPA CHI

Hope Lewis, President; Day Brumball, Vice-President; Anne Johns, Secretary; Hyla Ames, Treasurer; Storrier Cassin, Central Committee Member; Sarah Butts, Housekeeper

Alpha Kappa Chi, the small, classic-looking structure behind the library, is the society devoted to furthering interest in the classics at Wellesley. Adopting a new line of attack this year, it invited faculty to speak on history, art, and philosophy of the fifth century B.C., with these lectures as background, AKX successfully produced a Greek play.

PHI SIGMA

Nancy Thornton, President; Margo Philbrick, Vice-President; Helen Bahrbeck, Secretary; Ellen Brumbek, Treasurer; Patricia Stapleton, Head of Production; Elizabeth Gray, Central Committee Member; Eleanor Helm, Housekeeper; Anne Beezer and Katherine Bykes, Marshal

Phi Sigma’s comfortable atmosphere encourages juniors and seniors to come relax by its fireside, study or entertain friends. Discussions of modern literature, interspersed with sprees of cleaning and painting, go on under the watchful eye of the mascot owl, symbol of the literary wisdom aimed at by the founders in 1876.
TAU ZETA EPSILON

Ann Wilmore, President; Margaret Bowes, Vice-President; Joan Gradel, Treasurer; Janet Wood, Secretary; Mary Zoe Hadley, Central Committee Member; Deborah Killip, Housekeeper; Beverly Bonelli, Head of Art; Jenee Hare, Head of Music; Gwain Williams, Editor of 'Ta'

Tau Zeta Epsilon, "the house by the side of the lake," is in an especially aesthetic location, one well-favored for the pursuit of art and music. Its popular program meetings illustrate the art and music of a particular period through talks, musical examples, movies, and life portraits. TZE's less organized activities also make it a very pleasant place to go.

ZETA ALPHA

Sallie Merritt, President; Mary Lou Ensign, Vice-President; Patricia Ellis, Treasurer; Carol Ray, Secretary; Patricia Henry, Housekeeper; Jo Anne Norman and Katherine King, Co-Heads of Production; Emily Robertson, Central Committee Member; Margaret Christian and Rose Bergunder, Marshals

Founded shortly after the college, Zeta Alpha shares with Phi Sig the title of oldest society on campus. Its focus of interest, modern drama, is sharpened by the members' production of a contemporary play each semester. "The first white house on the right," whose membership includes none other than Miss Margaret Clapp, '30, harbors a spirit of creativity and comradeship.

SHAKESPEARE

Alice Hitchcock, President; Augusta George, Vice-President; Judith Anderson, Secretary; Patty Cochran, Treasurer; Gail McMaster, Central Committee Member; Patricia Keeland, Housekeeper; Alice Aitken, Clerk

Shakespeare Society incorporates an interest in Shakespeare himself, reflected in its spirited yearly productions of Shakespearean plays, and a more general social interest which makes the house, a replica of his birthplace, a popular one for teas and meetings of all sorts. Its annual Elizabethan Christmas dinner is always a campus event.
The future is more than probability; it is a certainty already existing in dormitory blueprints, in funds set aside for scholarships, and in many other concrete plans of resolute idealists.

WAF or the "Seventy-fifth", as it was popularly known, concentrated most of its campus activities this year on special projects in order to reach its $75,000 college quota. Students returned to Wellesley in the fall to discover that perhaps a whole treasure chest of prizes was to be theirs if they could guess the identity of "Miss Hush", as she was described in News and on WBS. November found girls trying their wits, their luck, and their partner's patience in the Seventy-fifth Bridge-Canasta Tournament. December took everyone to hear Alec Templeton, the Seventy-fifth movies, and perhaps stocked them up on sweaters, belts, or any number of Christmas presents.
In January, under the auspices of the Fund, the college played hostess to the double quartets of four men’s colleges, and eleven larks from Smith. During February the students witnessed the final drive as Seventy-fifth pledged the class of ’53. They watched in March while Seventy-fifth and other major organizations held the first Big Seven College Activities Conference, which was the culmination of the year’s extracurricular activities. And throughout the whole year girls grew fat on Seventy-fifth fudge, went broke on Seventy-fifth Sunday breakfasts, and cheerfully contributed their best efforts to make Wellesley’s Seventy-fifth anniversary not only a memorable but also a financially successful occasion.

“Miss Hush” winner: Gloria Swope
SO HERE we are, the grand old seniors, and most of us feeling like anything but. The caricatures and candid shots have caught the part of our college years we'll cherish most—the carefree unpretentious individuality of spirit, the friendship and the fun. Yet the formal portraits indicate that with independence and dignity we have learned to conform at important times. As we go forth to create the various patterns of our lives we hope above all that these memories of Wellesley will impel us to take ourselves seriously, but not too seriously. What we have had here can make that which is to come the best.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The greater part of editing a yearbook is based on faith—faith that miracles can happen as far as engraver’s deadlines, photographer’s appointments, and printer’s pica requirements are concerned; and faith that a few inexperienced collegians can become creators and compilers of a yearbook. But far more important to us has been the faith we had in the people with whom we worked, for without their constant reliability we could have done very little.

We extend our most heartfelt thanks to “Pete” Gurwit for his enthusiasm over our better ideas and his tact concerning our lesser ones, for his unfailing sense of good layout, and his everlasting patience. Our thanks too, to Mrs. Carolyn Gurwit for continually keeping her eye on our budget.

We send our appreciation to Mr. Robert Ihrig of the Jahn and Ollier Engraving Company, to Mr. Thomas McConnell and Mr. David L. McConnell of the Benton Review Publishing Company, and to Mr. James Carney of the S. K. Smith Company, who cared for our book, once it was out of our hands, with as much consideration as we ourselves could have taken.

To Mr. Irving Green and Sargent Studios we owe our thanks for over two hundred candid and myriad trips to the Wellesley campus on special occasions.

To Miss Rene MacLaurin of the Wellesley Publicity Office our special thanks for her invaluable photography in our first deadline pinch. To Miss Jean Glasscock of the Publicity Office, Mrs. Barbara Twombly of the Information Bureau, Miss Mary Lyons of the Wellesley Alumnae Magazine, Miss Helen M. Laws of the Library, and Mrs. Helen S. Mansfield of the Alumnae Association, we extend our grateful appreciation not only for the materials and information with which they supplied us, but also for their imaginative efforts to help us in every way.

In this Legenda there is much more of the spirit of Wellesley students than mere pictures and write-ups. There is the willing cooperation of those students who sent in candid; the enthusiastic effort of those underclassmen and senior committee members who diligently accomplished all sorts of tasks; and the talents of the staff, who stuck by their jobs in spite of quizzes, papers, and other academic crises. To Ann Webster, without whose good humor and determination the editorial wheels would not have turned so smoothly; and to Pat Stapleton, without whose buoyant spirit we would have lost our enthusiasm and without whose art this issue never could have existed, we extend our very deep gratitude. Our thanks to Eve Willard and Jean Rose for scheduling endless pictures, to Barbara Loomis for compiling our senior section and doing odd jobs so cheerfully, and to Beverly Bonelli for gathering innumerable lists, to Carol Ray and Ann Haggerty for their unique ability to turn a neat phrase, to Mary Ann Shands for her numerous distinctive posters, to Cathy Infanger for her unfailingly neat copy work, and to Sara Crowell for being a willing Jack of all Trades as well as organizing a new underclass staff. And our grateful appreciation to those on the business staff, who kept us successfully out of the red; to Marilyn Wyard and Jo Ann Simmons for soliciting so many profitable ads, and to Flodie Van Dyke for selling Legenda sight unseen.

To everyone who worked on Legenda, our many thanks for your enthusiasm as well as your diligence.

WHEN ... we first arrived at Wellesley we didn't know Dieges from Clust. We thought Hathaway was strictly from Shakespeare. LeBlanc drew a blank. What were Jays, Ken's and Stevens, and who the Connecticut General? But now we are wise in the ways of the world. We know.

“Swing Your Partner”

It’s a lot of fun to square dance, but it’s rugged. You can relax in your mind while you’re dancing, though, if you have Connecticut General Students Reimbursement Insurance. Then if you swing a little too hard and end up with a sprained ankle, at least you will have financial assistance. Whether or not you do go in for square dancing, you should have this valuable insurance. It protects you in event of either accident or illness.

You can continue to have protection after graduation, too, with individual contracts through a Connecticut General representative in your community.

SOME... of us have a special gleam in our collective eye. It is a reflection, perhaps, of a set of Monogram glasses. Or maybe it's our dream of Bermuda by moonlight (courtesy of Wellesley Travel Service). Or maybe the satisfying thought that thanks to Simon the mortgage will never come due on our little Palm Beach cottage. Nuts to all this. It's just us. We're in love!

bring Wellesley beauties to Paine's

... all hail from Duluth,
Minnesota.

Future needs for future homes is the discussion of this pert foursome from Wellesley College. And they all agree that rugs and carpets are the foundation for beauty in every home.

For example, the carpeting illustrated is a rich Brocaded Linen by KLEARFLAX with a colorful tufted wool design. Like the many KLEARFLAX weaves in long-wearing virgin flax, it meets the specifications of homemakers everywhere.

The great variety of KLEARFLAX color schemes and patterns make it easy to select a distinctive floor covering for every room -- traditional or modern. And the reversible, easy-to-clean features keep KLEARFLAX Linen Brocades in practical good taste in any home.

No wonder the Wellesley girls are making plans for the future on a KLEARFLAX rug!
