Clara Emerson, '91, is teaching in the New Haven High School. She is also studying at Yale.

Katharine Fuller, 1900, has been appointed Secretary of the Philippine Information Bureau in Boston.

It will be of deep interest to all Alumnae, in the class of 1900, to know that the far-famed "Tombstone Society" has awakened from its long sleep. Most of its members, having lost their old pins, have secured new ones, and the children are happy once more.

Edith Gordon Walker, 1900, has been making an extended trip through the West.

Mrs. Bertha Morrill Ames, '95, spent the day in Wellesley last week, the guest of Ethel Louise Sanborn.

Virginia Sherwood, '96, is teaching in one of the Normal Schools in New York City.

Helen R. Stahr, '94, has started a day school in Lancaster, Pa.

Josephine Batchelder, '95, is teaching in the Normal School in San Diego, Cal.

Susan Hawley, '94, has announced her marriage to Mr. Knight of Brattleboro, Vt.

Mrs. Florence Newman Peirson spent a few days with her mother, Mrs. Newman, at Norumbega last week.

Emily Foley, '93, is working for her Ph. D. degree at Yale.

Carlotta Swett received her M. D. degree from Johns Hopkins last June. She is now working in a Hospital in Roxbury.

COLLEGE NOTES.

The Seniors have promised the Legenda before the Christmas holidays. The publication is awaited with great interest as it bids fair to excel even the far-famed one issued by 1900.

If possible the Junior play this year will be given just before the Christmas holidays, instead of the week preceding the Easter vacation, as has hitherto been the custom. This change of date is made because of over-crowding the spring term with the various social functions always given, and is appreciated by the public as well as the actors.

Professor Santayana, of Harvard University, (in connection with the Wellesley College philosophy department), is giving a series of lectures on Plato's Republic. These lectures, which occur every Thursday afternoon at 1.30 in Lecture room III, are well attended by both faculty and students.

On Sunday, November 3rd, the Rev. F. Mason North, D. D. of New York City, will preach in Houghton Memorial Chapel. It is hoped that Mrs. North, who belongs to the historic class of '79, will come with Dr. North.

On Monday, November 4th, Mr. C. Howard Walker will give a lecture, in the College Hall Chapel, on the history of ornament.

On Saturday evening, November 2nd, the entertainment given by the Barn-swallows will be a play entitled "A Box of Monkeys."

The following is the cast of characters:—

Edward Ralston, a promising young American, half owner of the Sierra Gold Mine

Sibyl Baker, Chauncey Oglethorpe, his partner, second son of Lord Doncaster

Mary Storm, Mrs. Ondego Jhones, an admirer of rank

Bessie Manwaring, Sierra Bengaline, her niece, a prairie rose

Elizabeth McCrellish, Lady Genevieve Llandpare, an English primrose, daughter of the earl of Paynaught

Anna Vail, Scene:— Drawing room of Mrs. Ondego Jhones' residence on Fifth Avenue.

Time:— To-day.

A new organization has been founded in the college under the elusive sobriquet, F. F. F. F. The club held its opening meeting at a theatre party October 21st. Inquiring friends may find the headquarters at Wood.

The officers for the year 1901-1902 are as follows:— President, Myra M. Sawhill, 1902, Vice-president, Lizzie M. Turney, 1903, Sec'y and Treas., Julia G. Tyler 1904.

Hallowe'en plans are more or less a secret but a few stray facts have leaked out. Stone Hall and the cottages entertain students from the village with plays or operettas. At College Hall there will be a dance in the gymnasium followed by a burlesque and various Hallowe'en stunts.

ALUMNÆ NOTES.

Saturday morning, Oct. 26, at the chapel service, President Hazard gave the students a brief but most graphic account of the Yale bicentennial exercises. After naming over the events of the formal program, Miss Hazard said, "Out of it all, I think two things stand forth in one's mind,— the student celebration on Tuesday evening, and the conferring of degrees, Wednesday.

In the student celebration, held in the new quadrangle, the first and last scenes seemed the most impressive. The first scene represented the small group of ministers gathered in 1701, in the study of Rev. Mr. Russell,— each bringing his contribution of books,—ten ministers and forty books; and this represented the foundation of Yale College." Miss Hazard then described the five or six intervening historical scenes, until the last, when the ten thousand men assembled rose, and sang the doxology: "the foundation in hope and faith and prayer, and at the end, ten thousand graduates singing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow."

"The procession the next day was perhaps the greatest procession ever witnessed in this country," continued Miss Hazard; "there were delegates from twenty or thirty foreign universities,—from Japan, Scotland, St. Petersburg, and of course from Oxford and Cambridge, and from the parish of Wrexham, where Eli Yale came from, and is buried,—and a great number of delegates from our own country. Miss Hazard then told of the extreme courtesy shown by Mr. Anson Phelps Stokes,—known to the Wellesley world as one of the college trustees,— who, when he began to marshal the great procession of three or four hundred men and only eight women, addressed them as "Ladies and Gentlemen," and she also made mention of the dramatic moment when as the delegates were all in line, Mr. Stokes announced "The President of the United States!" and Mr. Roosevelt joined the procession. Referring to the march of the procession through the splendidly decorated streets, Miss Hazard said, "It was very pleasant to hear Wellesley whispered as I went by." After telling about the conferring of degrees, and various incidents connected with that part of the ceremonies, Miss Hazard concluded her interesting summary of the occasion by saying, "All of us New Englanders may well be proud of Yale. From the small beginning, the little grain of mustard seed, it has grown to be a shade under which we, in this wide land, can rest." The hymns sung at this morning's chapel service were those two so closely associated with Yale,— "I love thy kingdom, Lord!" written by Timothy Dwight, and "Forefathers' Day," by Leonard Bacon.

To the Editor of College News,—Your article, concerning athletics in last Week's issue of College News, seems to many of us to put a decidedly unfair light on the case, and to give no credit whatever to many who have been doing earnest work, in the different departments of athletics. You say "There are different sports, each boasting of some members." There are in fact, as many as twenty-two sports, offered by the Department of Physical Training, more than are offered by any other woman's college, and boasting of an aggregate, membership, larger than at any other college.

Swimming, riding, advanced fencing, and social dancing are at the expense of the student, but even then the following list, with instruction free of charge, shows a well developed department; rowing, basket-ball, tennis, golf, cycling, cross-country walking and running (hare and hounds), base-ball, hockey, lacrosse, tether-ball, bowling-on-the-green, discs throwing, hurdling, novice fencing, dancing (natural), skating, ice-polo and snow-shoeing.

It would seem, then, that there must be some athletic spirit "more than a name," amongst us. Because Field Day failed to materialize, those in charge should not be discouraged. Four weeks notice, at the opening of the year when all are busy getting settled, and acquainted with their work, is short notice for so elaborate an event, and a certain becoming, though perhaps unappreciated modesty among the freshmen made the entries rather smaller.

The present plans for November 11, seem in much better taste for this early season, than a formal Field Day, and will certainly be entered into with more enthusiasm, when there is not so much at stake.

If those who criticize the 'athletic spirit' of people who fail to enter events on a formal Field Day, would consider the feeling that they might have in putting themselves so much responsible for their class, when they felt conscientiously out of practice in their line, they might better appreciate the situation.

COLLEGE NOTES.

Mrs. Tsilka, Mrs. Stone's companion in captivity among the brigands, will be remembered by many as Miss Stefanova, who spoke at Wellesley several years ago. Mrs. Tsilka studied at Northfield, and later at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York, where she was graduated as a trained nurse.

The Wellesley Chapter of the College Settlements Association held its elections on Wednesday, October 23rd. The result of the elections was as follows:—Vice-presidents:—faculty, Miss Balch; senior, Charlotte Faber; junior, Henrietta Page; sophomore, Sophie Brown; freshman, Blanche Wenner; Secretary and Treasurer, Mary D. Snyder; Librarian, Mary Crombie; Advisory Board, Constance Draper, Annie B. McClure.

On Thursday evening October 24th, Miss Bowers, Mrs. Sheble and Mr. Morse, of the Biology department, entertained Miss Wilcox and the new members of the department, Dr. Thompson, Dr. de Lue and Miss Foote. The refreshments consisted of cider, drawn from a large distilled water bottle, into beakers; doughnuts, served on glass dissecting trays; crackers and cheese, served on chrysalization glass.

At the King Alfred Millennial Celebration on Sunday evening, October 27th, the following programme was given:—Service Prelude, Processional, Invocation, Hymn (948), King Alfred's Hymn (choir), Scripture Lesson, Prayer (King Alfred's) Response (choir), Address, Rev. Floyd Tomkins; Organ, (Chaconne, Pachelbel; Prelude and Fugue in G Minor, J. S. Bach); Prayer (King Alfred's), Recessional. Dr. Tomkins spoke, in a most impressive way, of the life of King Alfred: his great mental qualities and his tremendous power for good in the world. Dr. Tomkins said, "King Alfred walked with God and the world is the better for his having lived in it. Let his life be an example for us."

Miss Reppert, 1902, gave a dinner at the Tea Room on Saturday evening to welcome Miss Cushman, 1901. Covers were laid for seven.

Mrs. Maude Nias West has organized a Social Dancing Class, to meet every Monday afternoon from three to half after four in the Wellesley Town Hall.

Charlotte Faber, '02, took a party of fifteen to Denison House, The Boston College Settlement, on Oct. 28th, to meet Miss Dudley, the head worker, and to get a glimpse of the house and the work.

On November 11th, Mrs. Sherwood, of Wellesley Hills, will give a concert in Maugus Hall.

Vol. X, No. 1, of the Wellesley Magazine appeared Monday, Oct. 28. It is a creditable issue, broad in scope, with its matter well handled. Much praise is due to its Editors.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

On last Tuesday, October 22, a short meeting of Presidents of sports, Chairman of Field Day committee and Miss Hill, was held in Music Hall to consider the wisdom of a "Tournament Day." It was decided to have such an event, occurring probably on November 11, the date formerly chosen for Field Day. The heads of the clubs will pick out the best representatives of their respective sports and have competitive play; the whole scheme is to show the college at large what is really being done in athletics.

The entries for the golf club cup play are as follows:—Miss McClure, Miss Snyder, Miss MacDonald, Miss Foote, Miss Abbott, Miss Edwards, Mrs. Sheble.

That debatable 'Athletic Spirit,' seems extremely evident in the tennis world at present. Miss Marvin, '04, business manager of the club, has with characteristic energy arranged a series of games, beginning next Tuesday, with finals November 11. There are many entries, and some extremely interesting games may be looked for. It is hoped that those who have been clamoring for something in the line of competitive athletics, will turn out in full numbers and cheer for the champions.

In the practice game of basket-ball on Thursday afternoon, October 24, the sophomores won from the juniors by a score of 6 to 5. This week there will be a game between the sophomores and freshmen, and in the near future the juniors and seniors will oppose each other. For the finals, the two winners will play for championship.

At the golf tournament played off on Monday fore-noon and afternoon, October 28, the cup offered by Mr. Sanborn, the president of the club was won by Miss Cowing from Dana Hall. There was nothing phenomenal or unexpected in the scores made by the other contestants with the exception of that made by Miss Marie Louise Abbott of the class of 1905, who easily excelled all the other college players. Miss Abbott's score was the more remarkable inasmuch as she has never before played upon the Wellesley links. Following is the score made by the different players:

	Total
Miss Cowing	56 49 52 157
Miss Abbott	54 52 57 163
Miss Hartwell of So. Natick	53 55 56 164
Mrs. Sheble	59 56 56 171
Miss Edwards	56 60 58 174
Miss McClure	61 55 59 175
Miss McDonald	61 60 56 177
Miss Snyder	60 59 64 183
Miss Wells	76 66 80 222
Miss Foote	72 88 64 224

"Mr. Richard Mansfield, as Beaucaire, is not adding to his popularity in the minds and hearts of the majority of the College Students. The play itself is distinctly unsatisfactory, being dramatically effective in parts only. The dramatization is wordy. Mr. Mansfield's artistic ability is, of course, evident in his interpretation of Beaucaire, but in temperament he seems unfitted for the task he has undertaken. The French spirit cannot be conveyed by mere external mannerisms and an occasional well pronounced sentence. It is surprising that an actor of Mansfield's artistic sensibility, can permit himself to so nearly approach the grotesque, as he does in his effort to reproduce the vivacious buoyancy of the French." 1902.

"Whatever may be said (and much may be justly said) of the defects in the presentation of Beaucaire by Mr. Mansfield's company, the criticism cannot make us forget that Mr. Mansfield has given us a chance to listen to a play at once pure and clean, and to add to our friendships a character, that Robbie Burns himself might have loved. Whether the flashing of white hands in exaggerated gestures, the light leap that is meant to be youthful, and the broken English, please or disgust us, we must see a pathetic faith in love expressed simply and without ranting, and a naive belief in humanity that is better than a sermon. Defects in leading ladies, or even an undue rotundity in the star, can hardly defeat the purpose of a play and a player that recognize the worth of man and the reality of love." 1901.
