SOUTHERN BORN.

LILIAN COTTENS DUNN.

Southwest, within the shadow and silence of our home,

Beguiled away from the noise of the world.

One night at least, we heard the sound of his cornet.

Long ago sunk into oblivion, still lost in.

It is no regard impressed for the race and native brightness,

And yet there can be little doubt that the cornet.

So, though for your sake I am so coldly Northern hard.

Etiquette is the clean-up job on Southern social grace.

SOME AMERICAN STUDIES IN PARIS

MARGARET COWEN, S.N.D.

When I first arrived in Paris I was very, very shy to have an invitation given me to spend an hour in the studio of one of our American painters.

Shall we be far from each other in the beauty of a day?

MARY BISSELL EATON, 15. for a visit in the evening, we did not venture out much on account of the heat, preferring to remain within reach of the river.
Beyond my house, there was another one, which is the home of the Casa de los Artistas, where several of our friends were living.
On every afternoon, we would have our hour or two at Trinidad.
Not only there, in their gentle ways, but also types of the East that I had not encountered before. Here, I could learn how to commit myself to a foreign country in such an extract. These were not continued for a few years, as I became more and more a convert to the French way, so to speak. I became interested in the French culture, the French language, and the French way of life. I still love it to this day.

The fence around the house was a simple one, made of wood, and had a small gate in it. The gate was always locked, but it was not a problem for me to climb over it and enter the house. I once climbed over it and entered the house, and I was able to find myself in the middle of the living room. I was looking around, determined to find something interesting to do, and I found a small book on a table. It was a book by Mme. de Stael, and it was the first book I ever read in French. From then on, I was addicted to reading in French, and I have not looked back since.

I was often invited to visit the house of my friend, the writer Mme. de Stael. She was a very interesting woman, and I always enjoyed her company. She would often invite me to her house for lunch, and I would always go, eager to see what kind of food she would prepare. She was a great cook, and her meals were always delicious. She was also a great conversationalist, and we would often spend hours talking about literature, art, and politics. I was always fascinated by her, and I learned a lot from her.

One day, I was invited to a party at Mme. de Stael's house, and I was very excited. I had never been to a party before, and I was determined to make a good impression. I wore my best clothes, and I went to the party with great enthusiasm. The party was hosted by Mme. de Stael, and she had invited a number of her friends to come. There were a lot of interesting people there, and I was able to meet some very important people. I was very pleased with myself, and I felt that I had made a good impression. I was very lucky to have met Mme. de Stael, and I was very grateful to her for inviting me to her party.

The party was very lively, and there was a lot of music and dancing. I was very impressed by the music, and I danced a lot.
I was very happy, and I felt that I was having a great time.

THE TALE OF A VIOLIN.

JOSIAH WINTHROP YOUNG.

In my early youth, I was often taught, and I have a story to tell you about a violin. It was a violin that I had found in the forest, and I was determined to learn how to play it. I was very interested in music, and I wanted to become a musician. I was very happy when I found the violin, and I was very determined to learn how to play it. I was very
