STUDENT GOVERNMENT ELECTIONS.

President: Rachel Davis, 1915.
Vice-president: Ruth Hoyt, 1915.
Secretary: Edith Jones, 1916.
Treasurer: Rebecca Meaker, 1916.

Joint Committee Members { Calma Howc, 1915.
Dorothy Rhodes, 1917.

Thursday afternoon, April 16, in the Art Lecture Room, the Student Government elections were announced. When at 5 o'clock, Margaret Elliott appeared in the balcony and said, "Your Student Government President for the coming year is Rachel Davis," excited clapping and cheering broke forth from the four assembled classes, and the Juniors took their new officer and marched around the art building, singing their class song. Edith Jones was elected secretary of Student Government, and she and Rachel Davis stood upon the steps of the art building with the four classes literally and figuratively at their feet. A damp snow was falling. "Show your spirit, and lower your umbrellas," was the word passed, so practically the whole College, many of them bareheaded, stood there in the falling snow and again cheered their new officers.

After the cheering, various girls were called upon for speeches. The presidents of the different classes congratulated Student Government upon its splendid choice of officers; the village Seniors pledged the loyalty and service of 1917, and Katharine Duffield, '13, made a short but most characteristic speech. After the speeches the former presidents of Student Government were cheered, then 1915 and 1916 escorted their officers home.

At 5 o'clock on the following afternoon, on the steps of the art building, the other Student Government elections were announced. Ruth Hoyt was elected vice-president, Rebecca Meaker, treasurer, Calma Howc and Dorothy Rhodes, joint committee. Enthusiastic cheering followed these announcements, and speeches were made on the green, where the Juniors formed a ring around Ruth Hoyt, the Sophomores circled around the Juniors, and the Seniors around the Sophomores.

Perhaps the most characteristic bit of all was at cheering the next morning, when the open court of our new Administration building was transformed into "Center." Who can possibly miss College Hall when we have not only "the palms," Harriet the Inscrutable and Niobe, but the added attractions of grass slopes and class trees budding in our midst? It is springtime, and we are all of us ready for the jest and the gay loyalty that will help us through the rest of this year.

RACHEL DAVIS.
President of Student Government, 1914-1915.

RUTH HOYT.
Vice-President Student Government, 1914-1915.

LECTURE BY WALTER RAUSCHENBUSH.

Professor Rauschenbush lectured in Billings Hall on April 20, at 7.30, on "The Old Religious Faith and a New Social Enthusiasm." This subject sets side by side the two greatest spiritual forces in modern life, the old religious faith runs back to the dim ages of the human race; to-day the church is the greatest voluntary institution in the country. The new social enthusiasm is expressed to-day in passion for democracy, in the hunger for social justice, and the hope of a great organized fraternity of men. These are two forces—separate, but overlapping, and, at times, exclusive. The old-fashioned interest in the church often bars out the social interest. Religion, because it is so fine, often pre-empt the minds of people and creates a monopoly of interest. On the other hand, people who are roused to interest in social questions often lose interest in the church. On this account we find the Roman Catholic Church and socialism (the extreme body on each side) in definite opposition.

Professor Rauschenbush draws on his personal experiences to show us how the two forces may be reconciled. He had a long line of Lutheran ministers for his ancestry, and he was trained in a conservative religious family. When he was young he felt an overwhelming desire to serve humanity. He decided upon a life of ministry to German immigrants. He was given a little church in New York City, where his mind was opened to social questions, at the time when social thought was just dawning on America. He felt the clash between the old religious faith and the new social thought, but he determined to amalgamate them; he interpreted the Bible from the social point of view, and threw into social propaganda a religious fervor and a religious spirit. He succeeded in uniting the two noblest inheritances of the race.

This unity should produce a new type of Christian man, the finest of all, and the most like Jesus, and it is a unity which is growing easier to attain. The younger generation may never have to make the choice which confronted their fathers.

The question of what religion could give to the social movement is a topic for a lecture in itself. The main question to be considered is what religion could give if it absorbed the social intelligence; Professor Rauschenbush sees distinct advantages.

First, there would be an enlargement of religion in a nobler conception of God. The idea of God among races has followed their social ideals. God was democratized by Jesus, who called him "Our Father"—this conception would be developed by the influence of democratic ideals.

Then, the new social thought would give us a more generous faith in men. Theological doctrine makes us feel that men would rather do evil than good; social study often shows they do evil because they cannot, from the force of circumstances, do good.

But along with our more generous faith in men, social teaching awakens us to a more acute sense of sin. It shows us that, while a good church member may live upon unearned increment, or withheld wages, a good man may not; it shows us the parable of the camel and the needle's eye is the test for the valuation of vices, and points out our responsibility as members of a unified whole.

It might enable us to lead sincerer lives, with one standard in business and in religion, and save us from the mesh of circumstance which binds the individual so that he is forced to countenance things of which he does not approve.

It would give to Christianity the old collective ideal which has been lost, and the new unworldliness which consists, not in withdrawing from the world, but in fighting it.

Finally it would restore the cross to religious life. Suffering is an essential part of the Christian religious experience. Nowadays the Church gives no opportunity for martyrdom, but the social Christian will be liable to suffer for his convictions. Jesus met His death because He came in contact with the great forces of evil of His day. These forces are the same that the social Christian must face to-day, and, in facing them, he cannot escape his share in the burden of the cross.

WELLESLEY GIVING AS WELL AS RECEIVING.

The proceeds of the Nedelka Simeonova concert, given in College Hall Chapel the night before the fire, were $120.76. This sum has been turned over to the Bulgarian Orphans' Fund.

A STEP FORWARD.

When the Student Government Association in its last meeting passed a motion providing that the election of House Presidents should take place in the spring at the same time that other major offices are filled, it finally did justice to one of the most important of all Student Government offices. By this change the position of House President was openly acknowledged as of equal importance with the other spring elections; moreover, the chances of intelligent elections were increased by the enlistment of the votes of the outgoing Seniors who are better qualified to vote than the incoming Sophomores who know little of the qualifications of the various candidates.

There is small danger of over-emphasizing the importance of the office of House President, and it is with the hope of arousing every voter in every house to the gravity of her responsibility that the NEWS improves its last chance to discuss the question. In view of the approach of elections, we shall briefly reconsider the main points of the case.

A House President stands before her house as an accredited representative of the community's chosen head, the President of Student Government. As such a representative she is the embodiment of all of the dignity usually ascribed to the function of self-government. As the first item of her equipment she must have accurate and thorough knowledge of the technicalities underlying the life of the Association; next, she must be so far self-forgetful as to be the initial unifying power in her house, able to work in harmony with the head of the house, and to fuse into one powerful social unit all of the various elements of character and individuality that go to make up the personnel of her house. Finally she must be possessed of that invaluable asset, respect for the dignity of the office she holds, which shall enable her to take unto herself quietly but unmistakably the authority which is her right.

Undoubtedly the houses hold in their hands a great power for the increase of the reality of our self-government and the time is drawing near for them to use that power. If they use it carelessly or hesitatingly they may do harm to and will certainly fail to give impetus to the life of the Association. If they use it intelligently and with due sobriety they will have done a large share toward ennobling the organization.

This change will, we believe, have a far-reaching effect and will reflect itself in an increasing alertness to the demands of Student Government.

GROWING UP.

We wonder whether 1915 is already beginning to feel quite mature and independent on account of her flourishing Senior elections and how 1914 feels about it. Probably it will be a good many years before 1914 will acknowledge that her little friend 1915 is grown up at all or look upon her attainments as those of a truly adult person. We are reminded, sometimes, of that lady who buried her younger sister, who had just passed her seventieth birthday, with the heartfelt remark, "I knew that child would never live to grow up!"

But the helpful older sister attitude is not to be merely smiled upon and passed over; the interrelation of classes and the lack of petty warfare is the surest sign of the fellowship of our fourteen hundred odd girls of varying ages and interests. We were glad indeed that Edith Ryder was able to say with such evident sincerity that the regular Junior-Senior rivalry had developed into a genuine friendship between the classes and we were glad that all of us who crowded around the steps of the Art Building could agree with her so heartily. Yet we like to think that it is a Senior-Junior friendship, not a camaraderie of class and class. When we stop to think of it we realize that 1914 is the little sister of 1915's village Seniors and so stands on the mid-ground between mother and daughter in that delightful station where one is "young enough to understand" and "old enough to advise." The Seniors are really the oldest members of the younger generation and will soon be the very youngest members of the older generation, so we must accord them the title of "grown up," but we doubt if they are quite ready to admit the Juniors to that glory and we imagine that the public shares their reluctance. There is a general predilection in favor of keeping children young and those of us who have passed too quickly out of childhood sadly regret our lost playtime. We rejoice, then, that 1915 is to "grow old along with" 1914, and to come into her seniority gradually under the latter's watchful eye. Growing up is a ticklish business, when you stop to think what you are growing up to do!

RED POWDER.

Once in a Western town, during a local option campaign, the women's clubs rallied their forces and had a parade, with brass bands and transparencies. The streets swarmed with people, and there were red lights and speeches and general excitement. In front of a brightly lighted saloon, which was doing a thriving business under opposition, a battered old individual leaned against a lamp post and, as the procession went by, he winked a bleary but jovial eye, and remarked, "Don't worry, bh'ys, the ladies 'll have their little fling, and when th' r-red pow-ther is burnt up they'll forget all about it."

The words of this skeptical old derelict were certainly not complimentary to the ladies of the town. But they were pertinent in that case, as evidenced by the triumphant victory of the wets at the polls a week later. And the verdict of several equal-suffrage states seems to confirm the old gentleman's title to great perspicacity in judging the weaknesses of ladies everywhere in affairs political. In Colorado, for instance, it was enthusiastically reported that more books in political science and social economy were sold during the short period after the women got the vote than during many years past; but some wag took the trouble to canvass the second-hand book stores of Denver six months afterwards and reported them overstocked with volumes political.

The temptation is strong upon us during the present annual throes of electing major officers, to size ourselves up against the lamp-post philosopher's remark and see if it applies in our case.

Of the quality of our election enthusiasm there can be no doubt—it is splendid. It is the whole-hearted enthusiasm which will make the student body turn out in a sloppy April snow-storm and stand joyously in the wet for three-quarters of an hour to honor Student Government and the girl we had chosen for its presidency. But the feature of our enthusiasm which we would question is its lasting quality, its ability to stand the wear and tear of dull times and annoying duties after the excitement of elections is over and the quick loyalty kindled at the time has died down,—yes, when the red powder is burnt out.

We would question, too, if our enthusiasm is of the calibre to make us give to elections that earnest consideration beforehand which alone will insure best results. We wish that the Wellesley girl's attitude toward the election of officers could be a mature and thinking attitude, and that our "election enthusiasm" could ripen into that more valuable thing called an enthusiasm, which lasts.

And so, now that election times are upon us, let us allow some of our enthusiasm to be distilled beforehand into pre-balloting cogitation, and let us preserve a large measure of it to spread evenly over the long year until another election time. Then we would prove to a skeptical world that we were ready for responsible citizenship, having travelled beyond the stage of red powder enthusiasm.

LIVING OR DEAD.

It has been said that "Delegation of responsibility is sure death to democracy." That is profoundly true and is a good thing for us to remember at this season of the year. We are electing our major officers. We have cause for self-congratulation at the outcome of our Student Government and Christian Association elections. We have cheered ourselves hoarse and have delivered ourselves of our most felicitous expressions of pleasure and good wishes.

When the hurrah is over, however, we shall then be facing a whole long year of steady plodding in which we shall have to act out our enthusiasm. That means that not a single member of the community can delegate her responsibility to anyone else, whether in the way of allowing the long-suffering proctors to maintain quiet by over-working themselves, or permitting the "grinds" to keep up the academic amenities in the class-room. So surely as any of us shrinks by delegating her responsibility, so surely will our community life fall short of its hope of self-government. In so far as each one of us has the courage and persistence to assume our responsibilities, so far will we uphold the hands of our officers and insure to our democracy increase of vigor.

A MESSAGE.

Miss Balch wishes to share with those who helped with the Yiddish play at the Barn, the following message from Mr. Henry Copley Greene:

"I have been reading your calamitous NEWS. I trust you are thoroughly insured. Money doesn't recall from destruction, but it does mightily encourage our will to create again. I imagine three new buildings, where the old one stood; three, connected perhaps by pillared walks. If any helpers of the other day haven't already taken wing, please tell them how I appreciate their working welcome. It was full of what I shall be glad to imagine is the Wellesley spirit, gallant, serviceable, kind."

THE WELLESLEY NATIONAL BANK

Believes it can offer you the most satisfactory service in letters of credit, as it is in a position to give you practically any letter of credit you prefer, and you are able to deal with people you know. We shall be glad to talk with you in case you are thinking of going abroad this summer.

THE BULLETIN BOARD.

AFTERMATH.

The ruins of College Hall stand to-day as on the morning of March 17, except for some excavating that has been done in search of valuables in certain parts of the debris, particularly in the vicinity of the post-office, where a hunt for a registered mail pouch key brought to light a watch so little damaged that the crystal was unbroken, a necklace and a brooch. The ashes are still smouldering, for when the walls fell in upon the burning hardwood, they made huge charcoal-ovens over an almost eternal fire. Mr. Monahan says that when the statue of Elaine was removed from the Faculty parlor, over two weeks after the fire, it was still too hot to touch with one's bare hands.

Mr. Monahan reached College Hall after the girls had left for the other dormitories, and before the spectators arrived, and he describes with great realism his horror at finding the building doomed with everyone, apparently, still asleep inside. While Mr. George and his brother worked with him to bring out "Old Blackie," the desk from Miss Smith's office, the ceiling of that room fell, the fire which had traveled down the elevator shaft and through the basement, burned up through the floor, and the desk itself, wedged in the doorway, commenced to blaze. The roar of the flames, sweeping through the whole west end, the thunder of falling walls and splintering wood dwarfed into petty insignificance all other sounds, when suddenly above the fury of the fire, the three men, still inside of the building, heard distinctly the voice of the Japanese temple bell. It rang once,—a single deep, swelling tone,—a splendid swan song, it would seem, for so far, there is not a trace of the gong to be found. The statue of Harriet Martineau sat little harmed, until the floor gave way beneath her weight, and many of her fragments have been exhumed, including most of the pieces bearing the letters of her name. It is said that a would-be rescuer of the Reading Girl from the Browning Room met with small success in his attempt to carry her bodily from the building.

The men who entered College Hall by the chapel fire escape to rescue property from the east end of the second floor, were able to save something from Miss Tufts' room and from 205 and 206, but, once past center, the fire swept over the entire eastern half of College Hall with amazing rapidity, and flames licked out so suddenly and in such unexpected places that practically nothing was recovered from above the first floor.

It seems strange that the double, fire-proof doors, built by Mr. Durant, to protect College Hall in case of fire in the annex, should have been the means of saving the annex when the larger building was completely destroyed. How absolute is the loss, one cannot understand, until one has seen our ruin-crowned hill. A single glance is sufficient to prove that College Hall, as we knew it, is distinctly of the past.

DEPARTMENT LOSSES.

PATRIOTS' DAY VESPERS.

On the night of April 19, President William De Witt Hyde of Bowdoin College talked to us at vesper service. His text was the familiar, always stirring story of David and his men at the cave of Adullam—how the chivalry of the rough outlaws procured for their leader, at cost of their own lives, the long-led-for water from the well at Bethlehem, and how that leader, in still greater nobility, refused to drink the water bought at such a price. In our every-day life, are we too content to drink worthily or not at all of the waters of Bethlehem? To be worthy economically is to better the conditions of those who labor that we may enjoy; politically, it is to rid ourselves of graft and corruption, to be intelligently concerned with the conditions and laws of our country. As to our spiritual heritage, to be worthy there we must lend our lives to building up the kingdom of peace, of kindness, of purity, and of good will. Whether we work through individualism or through socialism, through the suffrage of one sex or of two, through one denomination or another, matters not at all, so long as we are loyal to the trust of our patriots.

KIPLING RECITAL.

A varied program from Kipling was presented by Mrs. Christabel Kidder in the Barn on Monday evening, April 13, as the last of the series of three recitals offered by the Department of Elocution. Her children and stories for children pleased the audience best. "Wee Willie Winkie" was well done; and the two "Just So Stories" were even better. "His Wedded Wife," "Gunga Don," "The Bell Buoy," "The Ballad of East and West," and "L'Envoi," were read with power and sympathy of voice and bearing. Mrs. Kidder impersonated the child, the soldier, the inanimate object and the ridiculous "Just So" animals with almost equal success, but we were particularly impressed by her sympathetic understanding of children. The reading was a satisfactory ending to a series which has been both profitable and delightful.

MR. RUSSELL'S LECTURE.

Mr. Bertram Russell of Trinity College, Cambridge, lectured at Billings Hall Tuesday evening, April 14, on "Mysticism and Logic," or the mystic impulse versus the scientific. He defined mysticism as "little more than a certain intensity and depth of feeling about things," and based his lecture on the statement and criticism of its four great doctrines—the belief in revelation or insight, the belief in absolute unity, the denial of the reality of time, and the belief that evil is only appearance, is not real. His conclusion was, that while these doctrines cannot be accepted as a whole, there is a large element of wisdom to be learned from the mysticists.

SOCIETY OPEN HOUSE.

Strings of Japanese lanterns and strains of dance-music in certain regions about Trupee and the Meadow, on Saturday evening, April 18, bore witness to a new event: evening "open house," through which the societies who do not appear before the public eye in plays this year, sought to satisfy their instincts of hospitality. Adventurous groups of Seniors, Juniors and Sophomores moved from T. Z. E. to Z. A. and Agora, to dance and talk and sample ice-cream about the festive hearths. The idea was a new one, and proved entirely delightful and worthy of repetition next year.

NOTICE.

Since all the records of the missionary pledges for the year 1913-1914 were lost the General Secretary and the Missionary Committee find themselves at a loss in collecting the remainder of the money that has been pledged. It will greatly assist them if everyone writes her name plainly on the collection envelopes and endeavors to estimate by the number of envelopes still in her possession the amount of her pledge which still remains unpaid. Those who have lost their envelopes may, perhaps, be able to form an approximate idea of the amount.

May we urge everyone to be both prompt and thoughtful about accepting her share of this responsibility. Otherwise the committee will not be able to meet its obligations at the end of the year. There will be no collection on Baccalaureate Sunday; all money pledged should, therefore, be in the hands of the General Secretary before that date.

GYMNASTIC DEMONSTRATION.

On Friday night, April 17th, the girls in the Department of Hygiene demonstrated both their physical prowess and their loyalty to the college, by giving an exhibition of their work for the benefit of the Rebuilding Fund. Tickets were sold for fifty cents to outsiders and thirty-five cents to members of the College (but we have heard that this latter deficit was generously made up by the members of the department themselves). The gallery was crowded with an audience from both College and village, who were impressed by the perfect discipline and skill of the trained gymnasts on the floor. Receipts came to over $200. The event was particularly significant in showing the real partnership in College affairs of the special students in this department.

SPRING SONG.

Somewhat in Forensic form, with a footnote or two; designed especially as taker-up-of-space on this page.

INTRODUCTION.

I. History and origin of Spring Songs intermingled in harmonious proportions.¹

Oh Spring is the thing
For a poet to sing,
So here goes my fling.

II. Definition of terms by process of exclusion.²

Spring's the time of the year
When the winter's not here;
When the summer sun's not
Shining horribly hot;
When no autumn leaves lie
Curled up, ready to die.
—When you find none of these
Then it's Spring, if you please!

III. Admitted Matter.³

Since the poet right here
Is not dreadfully clear
As to what's to be said
In the lines just ahead,—
In fact, in the next,—
She admits she's perplexed.

IV. Extraneous Matter.⁴

In this document rare.
(Here the poet tears hair,
Both to take up your time
And to make a good rhyme),
In this little brief thing
On the subject of Spring,
(We remention the title
Because it is vital
That you don't forget
For a little while yet
What it all is about,
—Though you may be in doubt),
In this brief on the Spring.
It would seem a good thing
To exclude, to omit,
To extrane, quite, from it,
What often in such
Things as this take up much
Too much space.
Let's omit
All contentions from it!⁵

¹The poet is here perhaps attempting to show her knowledge of higher mathematics, and confuses the term used with "harmonic progression." Ex. X. Y. Z. Algebra, pp. 72.

⁵Argument from authority. We would suggest that the poet seems to have forgotten that all contentions were to be excluded.

SONG PROPER, OR BODY OF BRIEF.

The Spring, the Spring,
Is a jolly old thing.
For so say I!
It's the time of the year
When the birdies appear
In the sky,
And fly, and fly.
Every Botany bud,
Every puddle of mud
Says the "Spring is here.
My, My!"

II. Now you've had quite enough
Of this foolish old stuff;
If you want any more
There are poems galore
On the subject of Spring.
Help yourself, readerling
From the library shelf,
Help yourself, help yourself!
And cheer up, reader dear,
For the end draweth near.

CONCLUSION.

What's below is conclusion.
To save you confusion.
However, we won't
Sum up much. So we don't
For there's not much to sum,
And before we succumb
We admit it, although
There's a chance that you know
It already, forsooth.
Now, fair reader, in truth,
In this charming postlude
We conclude to conclude.

Finis.

COLLEGE IN SPAIN PLEDGES.

Many of the College in Spain pledges were destroyed in the fire and there is, therefore, no way of determining what people have not paid their pledges. Will all those who have not fulfilled their pledges please send the money or give it to M. S. McLouth, 74 Pomeroy, immediately?

Two hundred dollars, the amount annually pledged by Wellesley, must be paid this year the same as usual.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

Desiring to do its share toward the rebuilding of our "new Wellesley," and recognizing the ethical value of sports and right living, the Athletic Association has arranged to expend four hundred dollars on the remodeling of the golf links, four hundred dollars on the making of new tennis courts down by the Waban Laundry, and three hundred dollars on repairing and putting the boat-house in good condition, in order that, with increased facilities more students may be induced to partake of life in the open.

We note in the recent program of the Boston performance of "Beau Brummel" the following paragraph,—“The chief undergraduate organizations are the Student Government Association, the Christian Association, and the Barnswallows.” Is this a true statement, and if so, should it be? Considering how much the Athletic Association is doing, and that it comprises among its members some twelve hundred out of the fourteen hundred students of the College, should we be so bound by tradition and blinded to progress as to overlook it completely and refer again and again at a Student Government meeting, to the Student Government Association and the Christian Association as the two great organizations of the College?

The Athletic Association is not an organization solely for the acquirement and display of physical prowess, as it is so easy to suppose, but it has higher ideals—self-control; self-restraint; and "fair play." All of us pursue these more or less consciously, but more of us should recognize that the methods advocated by the Athletic Association are among the most efficient means to this end.

In our struggle for a complete and coherent plan of development of our "new Wellesley," can we not realize more fully the necessity of a foundation of good health for the attainment of our ideals?

KATHRYN C. SCHMIDT, 1914.

EQUAL SUFFRAGE NOTICES.

PARADE.

The Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Parade will be on Saturday afternoon, May 2, the line forming at 4.30.

A number of members of the Faculty and students are to march, taking their places as individuals in the general College section. The Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association will mail complete instructions to those who agree to march. Those planning to do so are therefore asked to sign pledges (which may be obtained from and returned to the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association, 585 Boylston Street, Boston).

SPECIAL SALE.

A limited number of copies of the College Number of the "Woman's Journal" will be on sale, Friday, April 24. Come early and buy them at the outdoor table between the Library and the Administration Building. The price is five cents the single copy and a commission will be given to the Building Fund. This is a valuable copy of the magazine and will be of especial interest to Wellesley readers because of our representation among the writers.

Special features to which your attention is specially called are contributions by: President

LENTEN EXPENSES.

A few people volunteered to help meet the expense of printing the Lenten prayer-slips. Of a rather large bill only a portion, however, has been contributed. The Christian Association should not be held responsible for this expense in view of the previous statement in the News that it would not be. An appeal is thereby made to those who found help in the quiet afternoons in the Chapel. If there are any such people who feel able to contribute any sum, large or small, toward the printer's bill, they may notify Isadore Douglass.

A NEW DAY.

Next Monday, April 27, is Legenda Day. You never heard of Legenda Day before. It is new. The really new part is that this year we trusted people for copies. Monday is Legenda pay day. Think how glad you were to see the book at once, then think how small you would feel to make some one come to your room for the money.

Legenda Day, Monday.

CAMPUS NOTES.

GENEROSITY AND THE GENERAL SECRETARY'S SALARY.

Everybody is being so generous now, in giving to the fire fund, that we are reluctant in reminding them that the rest of the College needs money to keep on running. We are going to have a General Secretary, next year, and she has to have a salary. About two hundred dollars of it still has to be paid. It has been pledged, so, of course, it will be paid, but every girl must remember what she pledged and must pay it. The committee has to have all the money before May 1. Please accept your individual responsibility and pay your pledge at once.

ALUMNÆ DEPARTMENT.

THE WELLESLEY CLUB OF ST. LOUIS.

Professor George Herbert Palmer and Mr. Lewis Kennedy Morse, Treasurer of the College, were guests of the Wellesley Club of St. Louis early in February. On Tuesday, February 3, they were entertained at luncheon by the President, Mrs. John Hornbrook. On Wednesday they were guests of honor at a luncheon at the Washington Hotel. Professor Palmer and Mr. Morse spoke after luncheon, to the forty members present. Mr. Fred W. Lehmann entertained them at dinner that evening, the other guests being twenty prominent citizens of St. Louis. The entire club gave a tea in their honor on Thursday afternoon, February 5, at the Artist's Guild. To this tea over three hundred people were invited, yet the affair was so informal that Professor Palmer was given an opportunity to talk individually with his many friends. The club was glad to have the privilege of entertaining such illustrious guests, partly because of the great pleasure it afforded the members and still more because of our eagerness to make Wellesley better known to St. Louis.

NOTICE.

Professor C. D. Perrine, director of the Observatorio Astronomico de la Nacion Argentina, Cordoba, Argentina, is looking for a young woman computer. The work to do is of a general nature, principally reductions of photographic star plates for the Astrographic Catalog. Any candidate should communicate directly with Professor Perrine, giving experiences, etc. Anna E. Glancy, 1905, is a member of the force.

NEWS NOTES.

'80.—Clementine Bachelor expects to sail the last of May for Europe, where she will chaperone a party of girls for the summer.

'90.—Mabel Curtis is doing field work under Miss Florence Jackson, director of the Appointment Bureau of the Woman's Educational and Industrial Union of Boston, in addition to her regular teaching in the Somerville High School.

'93.—Mrs. Louise Macdonald Holmes was moved from Westerly, Rhode Island, to Mr. Vernon, New York, where her husband is the superintendent of schools.

'95.—Mabel Davison Bentley, with her husband and son, has been in California for over a year. She has been at home this winter at Glen Ridge, New Jersey.

'96.—Anna Witherle is teaching in the High School at Concord, Massachusetts.

'96.—Mrs. Julia Lyman Day is taking a trip around the world with her husband, who has leave of absence from his parish for a year. At Christmas time she was in Honolulu, went from there to Japan and is now in Egypt.

'96.—"The Pageant of the Trees," given on the evening of January 22, in Maugus Hall, Wellesley Hills, was a production of great beauty. There were four episodes, each centered about a tree typical of a period in the history of the town. The oak typified the mythological era. Upon the scene appeared nymphs, fawns, dryads and Pan, god of nature. The pine typified the time of the Aborigines, with the Indian chieftains, Maugus, Waban and Nehoiden, and the Indian apostle, John Eliot. There was a picturesque Indian dance in this scene. The elm represented the period of colonization and the planting of the homestead. From the colonial scenes, with Washington and his officers, and the dancing of the stately minuet, the time changes to the Civil War period. The last episode introduced the local history of the town and club. The lines and order of episodes of the pageant are by Mrs. Isabella Fiske Conant, '96. There was a cast of nearly one hundred, members of the club, their husbands or their children. The part of the Spirit of the Club was taken by its president, Mrs. Sara Emery Gilson, '98. Orchestral music was furnished under the direction of Kanich. Mrs. Anna Eastman Frost of Waltham originated and directed all the dances and tableaux. Mrs. Frost is working in pageantry, and is known as an interpretative dancer in many places; she is a pupil of Professor Raymond of Paris and has given recitals there. The pageant was given in the new hall of the Maugus Club, where the stage, and particularly the electric lighting effects are as complete and up-to-date as in many professional theatres.

'96.—Alice G. Beebe is on a trip around the world. She has been in Russia, North China and Korea, has spent a month in Japan and expected to be in India during January, Egypt in February, and to return in May.

'96.—Maude E. Capron studied at Columbia University during the summer of 1913.

'96.—Helen F. Cooke is to conduct a small home school for girls at her new home in North Brookfield, Massachusetts.

'96.—Helena DeCou is doing social and settlement work among children. She investigates the possibilities for children, who by reason of truancy, incorrigibility, sickness or death of parents or sickness of themselves must leave home temporarily or permanently. Institutions report applications and vacancies so that she has a general view of the child placing situation.

'96.—Mrs. Constance Emerson Ceil is traveling in Palestine.

'96.—Jessie Evans is doing graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania and working on a committee of the N. E. A. to revise high school courses in social sciences.

'96.—Mrs. Isabella Fiske Conant is working daily as a volunteer in the Social Service Department of the Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

'96.—Helen E. Greenwood does photography for book illustrations and lecture work for the Worcester Natural History Society. She has published a piece of research work in the "Bryologist," entitled "Some Stages in Development of Pellia Epiphylla." Miss Greenwood is Recording Secretary of the Worcester Wellesley Club and Chairman of the Conservation Department of the Woman's Club.

'96.—Eva Loudon is Head Worker at the Baltimore College Settlement.

'96.—Mrs. Frances Pullen Chapman does laboratory diagnoses and is Health Officer for Oak Park, with an office in the municipal building.

'96.—Mrs. Constance D. Rothschild Morris is abroad with her husband, who is United States Commissioner General to Italy for the Panama Pacific Exposition.

'96.—Dora M. Rounds has recently taken a course of lectures at Cambridge University, England.

'96.—Clara L. Willis is studying portrait sketching and painting. She is interested in the Boston Equal Suffrage Association for Good Government, and has done some campaigning for good legislation.

'96.—Annie F. Wilson holds a position with the Boston Provident Association.

'96.—Anna C. Witherle spent the winter and early spring of last year in Honolulu.

1900.—Florence Halsey has been traveling in Egypt, Greece and Italy with Blanche Wenner, 1905.

1902.—For the past two years at the Allegheny High School unusually interesting Christmas Masques have been given under the direction of Lucy Moody. All the different departments of the school contribute to this. The commercial department makes the programs, the teachers of physical training direct the dances, the manual training department has charge of the properties, and the teacher of sewing superintends the costumes, which the girls make at home. The "Masques," poetic morality plays, are written by Miss Moody.

1902.—Emily Pitkin is at Asheville, North Carolina, for a year of enforced rest, having overworked and played, during a two years' European trip. She hopes to return to Chicago in May.

1902.—Julia Wells is acting as Social Service Assistant, under the Committee on Mental Hygiene of the State Charities Aid Association, New York City. She assists in a mental clinic, held four times a week, on the lower East Side, and visits the people in their homes. The aim of the committee is the prevention of insanity and also the education of the public in regard to the proper care of it.

1903.—Theodora McCutcheon spent two weeks in January, in Bermuda.

1905.—Julia Holder, a former member of 1905, who returned, last year, and took her degree with 1913, is now secretary to the Fifth Avenue Agency, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York. Readers of the News will remember that this is the agency for private schools and colleges, of which Helen M. Kelsey, '95, is founder and manager.

1908.—Pauline Durfee sailed on the Adriatic on January 10, for Genoa. She is to visit her brother there for about six months. Her address will be Clemenstrasse 38¹, Munich, Bavaria.

1909.—Muriel M. Watt received the degree of Master of Arts from Wellesley, last June.
