Miss McAfee Leads First Chapel Today

College Hears List of Phi Beta Kappa Members and 1942 Honor Students

President Mildred Helen McAfee reminded undergraduates of the Wellesley heritage of "confident assurance in the permanent significance of truth, beauty and goodness" at the opening chapel service, Saturday, Sept. 23. Miss Ruth Lindsay, Associate Professor of Botany and President of Eta of Massachusetts Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa announced the newly elected members from the class of 1940. Freshman honors were announced by Miss Ella Keats Whiting, Dean of Instruction. Miss Lucy Wilson, Dean of Students, read the prayer for time of war set forth in August 1914 by Bishop Lawrence, then President of the Board of Trustees of the College.

As the college enters its 65th session, President McAfee compared the college as it was in 1914 with the Wellesley of 1939 following its many summer improvements. President McAfee reminded undergraduates of the "almost complete set" of tools at their disposal to make a good job of college living in a world that needs such efforts. As in the college of 1914, the college of 1939 is concerned with world problems. Yet in the midst of conflicting opinions, even in our own community, President McAfee reminded undergraduates that "we have our heritage invisible but steadfast."

To each student is given the responsibility to get to work seeking to find and vitalize truth, to create and appreciate beauty, to know and practice goodness. Here in Wellesley "dedicated to the pursuit of truth, beauty and goodness" we may each solve our daily problems in a manner that may perhaps make ourselves and our college contributors to a more effective world.

The members of 1940 elected to the Eta of Massachusetts Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa are: Charlotte Damron, Carolyn Elley, Marilyn Evans, Margaret Gilkey, Natalie Grow, Carol Lewis, Jaannette Lowe, Lucile Sheppard, Susan Swartz, Constance Tuttle and Nancy Waite.

The Katherine Coman Memorial Prize for excellence in economics and social history was awarded to Nancy R. Waite '40. Elizabeth Van Wie '40 received the Davenport Prize in speech.

Three Poets Will Start Fall Series

English, Irish, American Literary Figures Will Read to Students

Mr. Richard Aldington, well known poet, novelist, and critic, will come to Wellesley on October 2 in Pendleton Hall, at 4:45 p. m. Mr. Aldington was one of the original Imagist group, which was founded by Amy Lowell and Ezra Pound. Mr. Aldington is in America to give the annual lecture at Yale on letter writers, once given by T. S. Eliot while he was visiting at Harvard.

Dr. Oliver Gogarty, Irish Free State senator, poet, and wit, will read some of his own poems and speak of his friends, William Butler Yeats and A. E. Housman, on October 9.

Mr. John Holmes of Tufts College, whose Address to the Living received the New England Poetry Club's annual award for the best book of poems published last year, will speak on October 16. The Poet's Work, an unusual anthology with comments by Mr. Holmes, will be out this spring. Two volumes of his poetry will appear shortly. His work has appeared frequently in the Atlantic, New Yorker, Harper's and other periodicals, with poems and book reviews.

Wellesleyites Describe European War Scenes, Tell of Hazardous Flights from Danger Zones

By Elisabeth Green

Wellesley felt the first reverberations from the great blast of the Second World War as students, heads of houses, and faculty members returned this week with vivid accounts of personal experiences in war-torn Europe. Recounting what was probably the closest call of all, Miss Amy Kelly, Head of Claffin Hall, described her flight through closed frontiers after the actual mobilization and declaration of war by France. Hastily abandoning luggage in southwestern France, Miss Kelly managed to reach Paris, where she spent several tense days and tenses, blacked-out nights.

"Paris was deserted as if there had been a plague," Miss Kelly said. She went on to tell of the sausage-barrage, the blue-painted, camouflaged railway stations, the requisitioning of taxis and buses, and many other utilities, including the property of the people. "It was just as if the curtain went down on one chapter in history. Everything you depended upon was gone," Miss Kelly observed.

After hearing the announcement of war in France, Miss Kelly made her hazardous way through Belgium to Rotterdam via truck, automobile, and, as a last resort, foot. Then followed a night-

President McAfee Offers Welcome to New Students

President Mildred Helen McAfee greeted the class of '43 as they assembled for the first time in Alumnae Hall Wednesday morning, September 20. As individuals and as a group entering into a new environment, Miss McAfee urged the incoming students to adjust themselves to views of their instructors and not be too bewildered by the abstractions of college courses after practical work in high school.

Miss McAfee explained that Wellesley chose her freshmen not so much for their sake, but for what they might contribute to the college and the world in making it happier and more effective. Then she reminded the group that the faculty wear invisible "ask-me" signs and welcome an opportunity to meet their students outside of class hours.

Joining Miss McAfee in an invitation for questions, Beth Bryson '40, President of College Government, described the Senate, the House President's Council, and the court system. She urged careful selection of officers to represent '43.

In closing the assembly, Miss Frances L. Knapp, Dean of Freshman, reminded '43 of their appointments during their first week at Wellesley.

Students to Hear Officers Of Barn

Barnswallows will hold a mass meeting for the entire college Monday night, Sept. 25, at 7:30 p.m. The purpose of the meeting will be to acquaint students with Barn's activities, and there will be an opportunity for them to sign up for tryouts for various committees after the meeting. Committee heads who will explain the details of work in their different branches of dramatic activity are: E. Creswell Blakeney '40, Head of Business Board; Elinor Bancel '40, Publicity; Betty Newman '41, Costumes; Betty Jane Reeves '40, Properties; Doris Bry '41, Scenery; Jean Simpson '40, Design; Betty Snively '40, Lighting; Lee Sachs, '40, Drama; and Barbara Scott '40, Service.

mare journey through the English Channel with constant danger of running into mines. This sea voyage was climaxed when her liner, the Statendam, put in at strongly fortified Southampton to pick up 245 extra passengers, and some of the crew went on strike. The voyage home was a classic, complete with extra cots and the rescue of the crew of a torpedoed steamer, the British Winkleigh. Miss Kelly came back with only one impression of the French people: they are very depressed, but very resolute, and grimly determined to "finish or be finished."

Also caught in France was Elizabeth Wasson '43, who was abroad with the Experiment in International Living, and spent the week before the war broke out with a group of American students in Paris, where conditions limited their activities exclusively to shopping and going to the opera. They sailed September 1 on the Ile de France, taking a zigzag course, and suffered a shortage not only of cabins, but of food. Fortunately, the rough sea which made most of the passengers seasick, at the same time safeguarded them from submarine attack.

Others whose adventures were on the less seamy side, though very picturesque, were Miss Ruth

"They Also Serve—"

Dr. Van Dusen To Give Annual Text On "God Is Love"

In keeping with Wellesley tradition, Dr. Henry P. Van Dusen of the Union Theological Seminary in New York will take the text "God is Love" as the theme of the first Sunday Chapel service, Sunday, September 24 at 11 a. m. When they return to their dormitories for Sunday dinner, Freshmen and Transfers will find the same motif on souvenir place cards.

Sunday evening the class of '43 will assemble in the Chapel for a Vesper Service at 7:30 p.m. Christian Association, which is sponsoring the service, extends a cordial invitation to all upperclassmen to attend. Miss Seal Thompson of the Bible Department will give the principal address following a few words of greeting from Elizabeth Gregory '40, President of C. A. Mary Tiebout '41 will discuss the opportunities which Freshmen have to do C. A. work. The service has been planned by Esther Williams '40.

Clark, Chairman of the Department of French, and Mlle. Francoise Ruet, also of the French Department. Miss Clark returned on the Dutch liner Johan van Oldenbarnevelt, which was especially chartered by the American Embassy, and regularly runs to Java. The boat, Miss Clark reports, was very pleasant, but was staffed largely with "little brown men" who spoke only Malay, wore batik turbans, and ran around barefoot. Mlle. Ruet's claim to fame is that she slept on a cot in the children's playroom of the Washington.

Not yet back from Europe are Suzanne Van Dyke '41, and Cecile Cote '41. Mr. John G. Pilley, an English citizen, first cabled that he would be unable to return but now is expected back the second week in October. Miss Mary L. Coolidge will head the Department of Education until he arrives. Mr. W. Alexander Campbell of the Art Department will not get back from his far eastern wanderings until October 2, while contact has yet to be established with Mlle. Christiane Henry of the French Department. Miss Sirarpie Der Nersessian, head of the Department of Art, will return as soon as possible.

Addresses, Teas, Meetings Comprise Program For Incoming Students

386 Freshmen arrived at Wellesley for the annual Freshman Week on Tuesday, September 19. After registering, some members of '43 settled in their rooms to await the arrival of their roommates while others started off on an hour's search for the gym. Over the tea cups that afternoon the Freshmen got acquainted by indulging in the game, "Do You Know." Tuesday night the Freshmen fortunate enough to have alumnae mothers, went to Tower Court to meet Miss Knapp, the Dean of Freshmen, and Mrs. Ewing, the Dean of Residence, while others arranged banners on their walls or unpacked plaids and more plaids.

The new students assembled in Alumnae Hall on Wednesday morning to hear addresses by President McAfee and Beth Bryson, President of College Government. Following the Assembly was a meeting of the Freshmen by house groups for reading of College Government rules. After a Vocational Interest Test, the 400 balanced tea cups again at a tea given by the Christian Association on Tower Court Green.

The activity of Thursday's program was slightly lessened. Following a brief address by Miss Knapp at an assembly in Pendleton, the Freshmen toured the Library.

After the Personality Tests on Friday morning came the inimitable Wellesley motor tests. The 400 passed the afternoon at the Athletic Association tea in the Recreational Building.

Saturday big sisters greeted little sisters and made arrangements to meet at the Campus Suppers. The Student Vaudeville at 7:30 p. m. climaxed Freshman Week. Twelve Good Men and True, an original skit, introduced the many members of the Freshman Class to Wellesley College at the Freshman Vaudeville, held the evening of September 23 at Alumnae Hall. The scene of the play took place in a jury room. Members of the cast were: Cornelia Jones, Peggy Markham, Jeannette MacDonald, Nancy Dobson, Bethia Curtis-Brown, Julia Schmidt, Georgina Lukert, Mary Elwell, Claire Richter, Lois Jund, Margaret Crone, and Ruth Tremain. The play was directed by Laura Lee MacGillivray. Following the skit the various college organizations gave the audience an inkling of their dramatic ability or lack of it.

Six Months To Live?

Government officials who refused to be quoted have said that the United States will enter the second world war within six months. If what they say is true, the young men of the United States will soon be marching off to face Nazi guns. The generation that leads the government and runs the industries is not the one that will fight in the trenches. We, college students, and graduates just starting careers, will be the first to go. Since we are to suffer, we should make our voices heard in a plea for American neutrality. We must find the way to keep America out of this war. The action Congress takes in this special session to amend the neutrality act will send America either nearer or farther from that war. Our very lives are tied to those decisions. Should we not then decide what we think America should do and impress our opinions on our political leaders?

"Strict neutrality" exists on paper only. Whatever economic measures the United States takes will help one belligerent against the others. If America continues the munitions embargo, she hampers Great Britain and France who have maintained a diversified economic life while Germany was throwing eighty-five per cent of her industrial resources into munitions manufacture. Britain's chief advantage in this war, her navy, is nullified if she cannot use it to ship munitions and materials of war from this country.

Americans must realize that the United States cannot maintain peacefully the present economic and political structure in a world dominated by totalitarian states. Since whatever America does will help one side against the other, the only way to escape war lies in giving material aid to the Allies. But if American ships carry munitions to Britain and France, under international law, German submarines can sink them. Belligerents can seize all contraband goods. A cash and carry system whereby foreign purchasers take title on American shores and assume responsibility for transportation is the only alternative. Since we have the largest stake, our lives, in the United States' foreign policy, we should have a hand in shaping it. We appeal to the Congress of the United States to answer our demands.

The Broad View

An article in last Sunday's New York Times contained the interesting information that in spite of war in Europe, Wellesley would open this fall with a number of foreign students. We should like, however, to remind Wellesley students that it is because of the war and not in spite of it that this fact is an important one. This fall with a number of foreign students. We should like, however, to remind Wellesley students that it is because of the war and not in spite of it that this fact is an important one. It means that here on the campus during the coming year we will have the opportunity of practicing on a small scale the understanding and interest in each other that we have all been wishing the nations in Europe could exercise.

The fact that we are members of the Wellesley community must never obscure from us the fact that we are also members of the larger world community. But Wellesley can open the doors for us to become the level-headed, well-informed, tolerant citizens that the world has especial need of today. We must be broadminded and unprejudiced in our opinions and willing to listen to those whose experience has given them a more accurate criterion for judgment than our own. We must avail ourselves of our opportunities to understand the temper and point of view of representatives of cultures and countries foreign to us. In so doing we can in some measure learn to understand the larger issue they represent.

It is our duty to make the world we live in our concern. In order to do this today we should not only listen to the opinions of our friends and professors, thus unconsciously narrowing ourselves to the Wellesley view. We must make time for radio broadcasts, follow the international news day by day, and hear and read the opinions and theories of experts in many fields. By sifting and evaluating these we will at least arrive at opinions which we have worked out in our own minds and which have proved plausible and reasonable to us.

Hello, Freshman!

The News is happy to have this opportunity of greeting all the incoming Freshmen in this special Freshman Issue. We will be very happy to feature 1943 in our News not only this week but every issue during the next four years. As we consider the many fields both academic and extra curricular which have been opened to 1943 this first week at Wellesley we are filled with pride to be a part of this community. A carefully selected group of scholars will direct 1943 in its academic life which begins next Monday. These activities are enriched by the talks of outside lecturers during the coming year. A well-rounded education, in our opinion is, however, supplemented by extra curricular activities. The latter can be one of the most valuable or most detrimental elements in a college career. Our advice to the Freshman is to choose her extra curricular activities with care and moderation, concentrating on the organization or organizations in which she is most vitally interested. It is much better to be a valuable member of one organization than a dabbler in all of them.

As an extra curricular activity News offers a varied experience in every branch of college life. For the Freshman who loves the hustle of a newspaper office and who wants to be on the inside of college events News fulfills these wishes. The reporter's duties of interviewing, covering news stories and writing features afford valuable and exciting experience. The work in making up the paper from the writing of headlines in the Dugout to actually setting up the pages at the press keeps the News board in close touch with the changing trends in the newspaper world. Our tryouts will begin the week of Oct. 2, and we are looking forward to meeting news-minded Freshmen at that time.

By C. S. O., '40

Oh give me the wars of the good ages past
When Mars to his silver-tongued trumpet gave blast,
And the legions of Rome in a close-ranked file
Marched over to Gaul for a little while;
With a catapult, lance, or a sling-shot or two.
They managed to scare the barbarians blue,
And when they grew tired and ready to go
They marched back again with a chieftain in tow.

Julius Caesar would have found reprehensive
Our bristling mole-holes of front-line defensive;
Gone is attack in the form of a phalanx,—
Replaced by flotillas of lumbering tanks:
And today if the Horseman of War and his cronies
Rode in the skies on the fire-hoofed ponies
They'd have to wear bullet-proof vests
And horses be spiked against air-plane pests.

How I long for an honour-fought hand-to-hand battle
And the best we produce is machine-gun rattle:
Yet when thoughts of the heroes death demobilized
Weighs me down, I remember, we're more civilized!

Societies

To the Wellesley College News:

It seems fitting that there should appear in this first issue of News for the benefit of Juniors and Seniors who are interested, some word about the systems of application for, and placing in societies. A central committee, composed of one member from each society and a faculty or staff chairman, receives the applications of prospective members and the votes of the societies. There is an absolute academic standard for eligibility approved by a committee of the faculty and a standard of good citizenship as well.

No applicant is placed in a society which does not vote for her, or in a society for which she does not apply. An applicant may enumerate as many societies as she pleases in the order of her choice, but she should be very careful to include in her list only those societies in which she feels she will find satisfaction. Since the Central Committee members are pledged to absolute secrecy, any applicant may feel free to state fully and frankly the reasons for her choice.

Application cards and pledges will be found in the Information Bureau; white cards for 1940, orange cards for 1941. The pledge should be read and marked and inwardly digested before being copied and signed.

Last year's applications still hold for 1940 unless new ones are filed or cancellations are sent to the Chairman of the Central Committee.

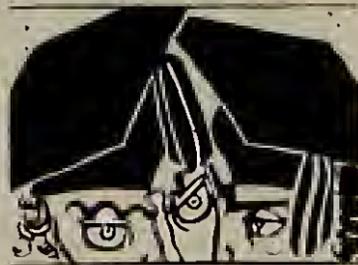

All applications must be received before noon on Monday, October 9. They may be left at the Bureau of Information, or sent to Mrs. Carolyn N. Britton, Chairman of Central Committee, Severance Hall.

Guest Night

To the Wellesley College News:

Because of the crowded dining halls last year, we were forced to resort to using tickets on "guest night," Tuesday and Friday. Even then several of the houses relieved the situation by allowing guests

Caps and Frowns

Thirst No More

"Let's stop in at 'Alum' and initiate the new soda fountain," is going to be the Wellesley pass word in the very near future, for starving freshman and thirsty upperclassmen have a new hang-out. Behind the mirrored panels at the west end of the ballroom lies the mystery room that will soon be filled with a chromium soda fountain, beige and turquoise tables and maple chairs. Here weary Wellesleyites can refresh themselves with coca-colas, sodas, hamburgers, and various kinds of sandwiches. The sponsors, Mrs. T. R. Covey and Miss Bertha Hill, have left no stone unturned in making it the glamour corner of the college. Even a nickelodion will furnish smooth rhythms for dancing.

That's What Yale Thinks

Yale's Frank Andrus, '39, puts his masculine opinion of Wellesley in print in the August issue of Mademoiselle magazine. According to him "Wellesley girls, as a group, are pleasant company, not at all the horn-rimmed glasses type one hears rumors of. As a group they are seemingly the least party-seeking of the female species, content at most times with a hamburger in one hand and a pickle in the other. . . Loyalty to Wellesley sometimes becomes an obsession. This is tiresome. Hint: never let the conversation turn Wellesleywards. That's fatal."

Freshman Charm

Amherst's advice to incoming Freshmen on that illusive quality, "fatal charm," with which to bowl over upper class rushers seems sound if a little novel. First item to be acquired is skill at the ancient game of "Do you know?" with no conscience about inventing a few good names just to keep the ball rolling. Other ingredients of Amherst charm are kidding, horse laughs, and a spice of strong swear words because "Amherst men are a worldly lot."

New Magazine

Competition will shortly be felt in the publishing world as a potent combine of literary lights from Harvard, Princeton, and Yale gets to work on a new magazine which they claim is to be a modest blend of Times, the New Yorker, and Collier's. The bombshell will be christened Harpy (Harvard, Princeton, Yale—get it?) in honor of its Big Three parents.

Obituary

Funeral services were held this week for "Kennesaw," a member of the college, who died quietly at the residence of Ruth Anderson '42 of Tower Court. Reliable sources give acute indignation as the cause of the death which took place following a tea party on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Malcolm Holmes, orchestra director and friend of the deceased, pronounced an elaborate eulogy, followed by interment in the garden directly behind Green Hall. Mr. Holmes pointed out the moral to members of Press Board who had assembled for the service. He said, "with all due respect for my late friend, I firmly believe that if his eyes had not been bigger than his stomach, he would be alive today."

Twin transfers from the University of Texas acted as pall bearers, and warbled appropriate dirges at the afternoon services. "Kennesaw" was well known as a gold pin-cis.

THE PEREGRINATING PRESS

PERRY was in his glory over-hearing scraps of conversation in the mad rush of Barn try-outs.

"Write down your name, house, desires and experiences," asked the Head of Costumes.

"Oh-h but I couldn't possibly get all my experience on one page," pleaded the anxious Freshman.

One Freshman was more agreeable at a house tea in Perry's dormitory. When the Head of House asked her how she liked her tea, the member of 1943 replied: "I like it fine."

EVEN now Perry ponders over the mother who accosted him with a shy and shambling Freshman daughter in tow, asking how to get to the Student Exchange.

RESORTING to another tale of the Freshmen, Perry tells of the visit of two Juniors to Elms to hunt out their little sisters. They were greeted by Freshmen who inquired if they were upperclassmen. Upon being assured that the guests were members of 1941, the little sisters gasped reverently: "Oh, should we stand up?"

RETURNING as Juniors and Seniors, a group of Perry's friends felt that the photographer was making a mistake. "Don't you want pictures of Freshmen?" they asked him. "Oh, no," he replied to the horror of nearby new students, "I want some cute girls."

"YOU turn right at the next corner, right at the next and right two blocks after that," was the Ask-Me's direction to a mother seeking her daughter's dorm. "That leads her right back here!" exclaimed Perry. "I know," sagely responded his friend, "but by that time another Ask-Me will be stationed here and maybe she knows how to get there."

any night, as long as there was a space for them. If all the houses were allowed to exchange guests on any night, the Tuesday and Friday night crowd would be avoided.

Now, at the very beginning of the year, we can try to find such a solution. 1940

Barnswallows' Policy

To the Wellesley College News:

Barnswallows is trying, this year, to "put its house in order." Instead of keeping up large committees, whose member except for two or three times a year are inactive, we will try by expanding our schedule to give each member more to do. Of course, as long as there is enough interest in Barn to support large committees, we will certainly have them; but our effort this year will be toward greater activity for every member of Barn.

It is to this end that we have enlarged our plans to include three formal productions: a comedy on October 28, a more serious play on December 15 and 16, and a third play on March 23, which will be comic, tragic, socially significant or fantastic, depending on the reaction of the college to the first two plays. In addition to these formal plays we are planning to put more emphasis on experimental work. The acting committee will be divided into groups of ten or twelve and will present informally in January what they consider to be their best and most interesting work. Freshmen will work in these groups after they have presented their own plays on Saturday, October fourteenth.

We feel that a college theatre should be primarily an experimental theatre in which the productions are as valuable to those connected with them as they are interesting to the audience. Barnswallows wants the college to learn something from each production. This year we are striving for

A. S. U. Members Plan for American Peace Program

The National Executive Committee at the American Student Union recently met to formulate a program to keep America out of war.

The program calls for: amendment of the neutrality act to allow aid to forces opposing Hitler; an embargo on Japan; increased neighborly relations in the western hemisphere; America influence for a just and lasting peace; and national unity, in line with President Roosevelt's plea based upon increased social security for all the people.

East Meets West On College Campus

Despite the vicissitudes of the international situation, which has caused the absence of several members of the faculty, Wellesley will continue to be a miniature league of nations. Students who come from Canada, France, China, Manchukuo, Korea, the Bahamas, Switzerland, Spain, Argentina, the former Czecho-Slovakia and the United States will attend classes and lectures conducted by professors who come from France, England, Germany and Italy, not to mention our own United States. The American Freshmen represent thirty-four states and the District of Columbia, with New York taking the lead and Massachusetts running a close second. His pac regnit.

not all that was disturbed by recent events. Word came from Mrs. Elizabeth Martin, able pastry-cook of Tower Court and Severance, that she had been on the torpedoed Athenia, had been badly bruised, and had lost all her money and possessions, including her passport. Somewhat recovered from this harrowing adventure, she sailed September 20 from Galway, Ireland, and will soon be back at her post, turning out the pecan rolls that have earned her such acclaim.

greater unity within Barn, and our first step in this direction has been to engage Martin Manulis as our director for the year, who will act in the double capacity of technical adviser and director.

We feel also that a college theatre should be the place where imagination and originality have free expression. And it is with these aims in mind that Barnswallows enters upon its 1939-1940 season.

Out from Dreams and Theories

Junior Month

"It was the most fascinating, interesting experience I ever had" commented Eleanor Beane, Wellesley's representative to New England Junior Month. Eleanor found her enthusiasm for a profession of social service had been increased by her experience.

"Junior Month is new," she explained. Financed jointly by the Family Welfare Society and the colleges, eight girls are given the opportunity to observe social work closely, and to serve as apprentices to the Family Welfare workers from June 15-July 15 with the object of interpreting what they see to their colleges in the fall.

The weeks of Junior Month are apportioned to include three days observation of Social Legislation, Crime and Crime Prevention, Medicine, and Community Planning and Financing. "We visited such institutions as the Courts, the New England Reformatory for Women, the Massachusetts General Hospital, and the New England Home for Little Wanderers," Eleanor stated, "and watched social work in action."

Three days of each week are devoted to case work, and the girls go out in pairs to handle some of the less complicated cases helping families to budget their incomes so as to include more healthful food, and interesting parents in sending children to Welfare camps.

Many of the families will not take advantage of the services offered by the Society because they object to the word "welfare" in its title. To offset this difficulty the organization may become the Family Service Society. "You see," she explained, "what they really do is offer a service. They never visit people in their homes, and claim that lives are being managed badly unless they are asked to do so, carrying on their work through a clinic instead where the people come voluntarily to them. Then they offer advice about straightening out emotional, financial, and physical difficulties."

What's in a Name?

The Special Committee for the Enlightenment of Freshmen offers its yearly report on "Freshmen Names and How They Grew."

We find that the Class of 1943 is an extremely versatile group. It boasts of several well known figures; to wit, Crosby, Dewey, Hoover, Shaw, and Jeannette MacDonald. The musical world is represented by two Bells, two Horners, and a Trilling. Among the athletes we find two Falconers and a Fast, while in the world of industry there are a Miller and two Mills.

That the members of '43 are going to take their academic work seriously is also indicated by their names. Early preparation for that sophomore Bible course is no doubt responsible for the Biblical trend found in two Moses and a Solomon.

Our statistics department submits the usual list of duplicate names; there are three Adamises but only one Dachnhardt, three Smiths but only one Diefendorf, three Harrises but only one Kulakofsky, and finally four Joneses, but only one Schneckenberger.

C. G. Comment

Along about the first of next month, one of the most exciting events of the college year will occur when the new soda fountain in Alumnae Hall will be open to students and ready for use. Along with the pleasure that comes with the new addition there are some problems from C. G.'s point of view. Questions will naturally arise as to the hours and the use of the room. Students will want to be as free as possible in the use of it and will want it available at various times. Just when those convenient times will come is, at present, a bit difficult to figure out.

At its first meeting Senate will discuss the hours and the regulations regarding the use of the room, and so student opinion must be forthcoming quickly. How late at night should it be open? Should we have waitresses at all hours or self-help? How should it be arranged for students to go up to Alumnae after ten? There are other questions too.

Let C. G. know how you feel about this problem.

Author Discloses New Aspects of U. S. Life
The Strangest Places by Leonard J. Ross, Harcourt, Brace and Company, New York, 1939. $2.00.

Leonard Q. Ross, creator of H*Y*M*A*N K*A*P*L*A*N, makes a new bid for the palms of literary humorist with a set of fiction sketches. The "places" he describes and their inhabitants are unknown to most Americans except by hearsay. Which of us, for example, has ever visited St. Louis Cemetery No. 1 where the dead are buried in tiered walls filing-cabinet fashion, or watched the judges in New York's Family Court mend marital breaks?

Mr. Ross has a keen eye; no slightest oddity of detail escapes him. His humour ranges from subtle, understanding satire through the hilarious to the ridiculous. He includes a delicious sketch of Washington society's dilemma when, at their first opera in four years, the musicians refused to play to them unless paid in cash! For those who would "see America first" in some of its less prosaic aspects, the book will prove an infallible guide. Those who prefer reading about "atmosphere" rather than experiencing it first-hand will be thoroughly amused.

Hathaway Shows Large Collection of Prints

A wide variety of artists are represented in the Rental Collection of Prints on display in the Farnsworth Art Museum under the auspices of Hathaway House Bookshop. The collection will be on exhibition until October.

Among the French prints are several by Degas, notably his Two Dancers, Repetition, and The Dancer. The tropical landscapes for which Gauguin is well known are represented by his Mountains and Martinique. French modern art finds its champions in the strong contrasts of Derain's Blue Oak and the more delicate treatments of Cezanne. There are one or two reproductions by Monet and Renoir.

Among the works of the older masters are included Botticelli's Flora, Titian's Duke of Norfolk, and Leonardo's austere St. Anne and the Virgin.

El Greco's superb storm scene entitled Toledo is one of the most impressive in the collection. Among the Dutch masterpieces are Breughal's famous Winter, Vermeer's Delft, and four sprightly prints by Van Gogh.

Rockwell Kent's Mt. Equinox looms large among the American pieces, exquisite in its sharpness and fine attention to detail. Diego Rivera is represented by the vigorous, patterned modern work, Lettuce Field.

G. B. Shaw Brings War Issues to Footlights

Geneva, a fancied page of history in three acts, by Bernard Shaw. Constable & Company, Ltd. London, 1939. $2.00.

Geneva, in all its satirical splendour and Shavian aptness of phrase, accomplishes three things in the course of its fanciful unfolding. It effects a revealing characterization of certain world leaders prominent in the European crisis. It points up in ironical relief the impossibility of reconciling the interests of the countries involved. Lastly it manages to give an idea of what the League of Nations and World Court could do, with a little cooperation, while showing at the same time the utter helplessness of the present institutions.

Through a curious chain of circumstances a young English girl sets the wheels of international law in action and causes a certain Signor Bombardone, a General Flanco, a Herr Battler, and one British Sir Midlander to appear in court on charges of starting war. The judge holds war to be murder and its incipients to be worthy of capital punishment. Bombardone protests that war makes men; Battler says he is "a man of peace" but adds that his peace must be "voluntary," not "intimidated." "Not until I am armed to the teeth and ready to face all the world in arms is my Pacifism worth anything." The Englishman agrees. "Admirable," he says, "Precisely our British opinion."

Bernard Shaw wrote Geneva over a year ago. For all its ironical humor, the despair and hopelessness for the future which the playwright foresaw at its writing are more real for us today. But its greatest significance lies in the clarity with which the points of conflict, the roots of the present crisis, are stated. Mr. Shaw seemed to believe then that the struggle would not be solely one of democracy against the "isms," but, once again, of empire against empire. One wonders whether future histories will bear out his prophecy.

Miss 1943 is getting a head start on her upper class sisters for those inevitable questions asking "What are you going to do after college?" The Strong Vocational Interest test given this year by the Personnel Bureau is an effort to help Freshmen realize their abilities and interests early in their college careers. Norms for this test were determined by consulting the interests of many professional and business women, and determining which were typical of the various occupations. Now when Freshmen check their hobbies, favorite subjects, vocational likes and dislikes, and special bits of knowledge, they will indicate to the Personnel Bureau along just what lines their interests probably lie.
