THE ELLEN RICHARDS RESEARCH PRIZE.

The Naples Table Association for Promoting Laboratory Research by Women hereby announces the offer of an eighth prize of one thousand dollars for the best written by a woman, on a scientific subject. This thesis must embody new observations and new conclusions based on independent laboratory research in biological (including psychological), chemical, or physical sciences. The thesis offered in competition are to be presented to the Executive Committee of the Association and must be in the hands of the Chairman of the Committee on the Prize, Dr. Lilian Welsh, Goucher College, Baltimore, Md., before February 25, 1917. The title page of each manuscript must bear an assumed name; and the writer must send with her manuscript, a sealed envelope containing her application blank and superscripted with her assumed name.

The Association reserves the right to withhold the prize, if the theses presented are not, in the judgment of the regularly appointed Board of Examiners, or by such specialists as they may choose, of adequate merit to deserve the award.

The decision will be announced at the annual meeting in April, 1917.

BOARD OF EXAMINERS, 1916-1917.

Psychological Sciences: Dr. William H. Howell, Johns Hopkins Medical School

Chemical Sciences: Dr. Elmer P. Kohler, Harvard University

Biological Sciences: Dr. Elmer P. Kohler, Harvard University

Physical Sciences: Dr. Henry Crew, Northwestern University

In April, 1911, the prize was named the Ellen Richards Research Prize in recognition of the devoted service of Mrs. Richards as Chairman of the Committee on the Prize since its appointment in 1900.

Requests for application blanks should be addressed to the Secretary.

President, Florence M. Cushing, 8 Walnut Street, Boston, Mass.

Secretary, Ada Wing McVay (Mrs. A. D.), 20 Park Avenue, Providence, R. I.
CONCERNING SPRING.

This is a plea for the out-of-doors! It’s an old subject with us, to be sure; but surely it bears re-newing in the springtime. Because the days before us now are the golden days, full of health for us, and full of the right kind of joy, if we know how to take it.

It is unnecessary to elaborate on the springtime beauties of the campus and surrounding countries; we have all heard sufficient about “nature’s hand-iwork.”

We do not aim here to rehearse time-worn phrases of vernal charms; we merely wish to offer some practical suggestions as to when and how to avail ourselves of sensible, healthy spring exercise.

We must admit that there is plenty of time for this. There is the time which we all waste in profitless talking, in unconcentrated, badly-planned study, in aimless reading, in profligate trips to town, when nothing is gained but a momentary tightening-up of our already over-wound spirits. This is a chance to practise some of our hand-built economy. We must plan our work well. We must be willing to jealously squeeze out of our day’s labor every atom of time that we can spend out-of-doors.

And so, when we are free between classes, let’s take a walk in the woods, down to the lake, or near the lake, in the cool of the morning or evening. It may be the means of clearing our minds for a brilliant next recitation! When the talk and gossip in our rooms gets irksome, let us be brave, and suggest a walk! When we study badly, with one eye on our book and the other on the swinging library door, let us be filled with a zealous desire to complete our work (even at the risk of missing some library entrants) and get out doors! And when our friends suggest an evening “bill” to town, let us suggest vigorously and forcefully the beauty and advantages of lake, woods, and tennis-court.

Getting out-of-doors isn’t such a heroic achievement; it’s a labor-saving, health-saving device for sensible people. Winter is over. Spring vacation is over. Two months of fine spring weather lie ahead of us. Let us make the most of it!

ARE WE, OR ARE WE NOT?

We are apt to return to College after vacation with a feeling either of dissatisfaction at our life at College, or of discontent at our home life. Either of these feelings is contrary to the purpose for which we have been sent to college. People are prone to place friendships at the head of a list of advantages of an education, but I would put adaptability first, even before friendships. We should learn not only to adapt ourselves to our surroundings, but to live happily in them, getting the best we can out of that particular type of life. Most of us have learned to live happily at college—we have learned to live happily at the time, outlived the “Freshman’s homesick tear” stage—but what about our home life? Does it sometimes seem narrow and lacking in the college atmosphere—“ready for anything”? Are your friends interested only in local affairs from which you seem to be excluded? Is your sister, perhaps, unaware or neglectful of your rights, she having been an only child so long in your absence? All these things are very likely to be true, in the most harmonious of families, and a dissatisfied girl is often the deplorable result of the advantages of College.

But there is no reason for our bad product to be yearly so large if we look at the subject squarely and think out just what the situation is. You say your family and friends are interested only in small local matters, whereas you would prefer to talk of the larger topics of college interest. May not your eternal “talking college” bore the family as much as their interest in the “home and School Association” bores you? You and your family have been living in two different worlds and yours particularly is a very aimless, aimless existence as well as being self-absorbed to an extreme. There must be an equal balance on both sides, a balance of interest in the interests of others, and an interest of others in your affairs; an even give and take. Only so can you be truly said to have adaptability, and only when you have learned that can you get your share of the pleasure of every situation.

There is also the possibility that some are still unacquainted to college life. Nothing in Boston seems as good to them as the joys they left behind in New York, or Chicago, or Springfield. A certain local pride in jest is, of course, excusable, but a constant serious comparison between Boston and any “home town,” to poor old Boston’s disadvantage, blunts the senses of anyone to the real good there is in Boston. If, for a year, you have to live in Boston, whether against your wish or not, why on earth don’t you get what good you can out of that year, and not let it slip away without standing a thing in your life to come? Time is precious enough in itself. But for her, perhaps, more than an eternal round of good times, why waste a whole year in grumbling and complaining and making yourself miserable?

LETTER FROM MRS. IRVINE.

The following very interesting letter has been received from Mrs. Irvine:

Ganse, 8th March, 1916.

DEAR MISS PORTER—On February 28th, I cabled you that the boxes were all here, and the letter of the previous day must now be on its way to you with the same news. The first boxes came at a time when it was easy to send about all their contents straight to the present as groups of Chas- scours Alpines from the depot was leaving almost daily. It was particularly good that just those men could be supplied with warm socks, for they are all men going back to their regiments after being ill or wounded. At the Petits Soeurs de Pauvres is a ward of twenty beds for a group of young invalids, tuberculous patients, that are expected to recover in this good climate and with good care.

The hospice is out of town, in a beautiful retired valley, very lovely when you are there but quite out of the way. I fell upon this place, via the skies, and immediately when they wanted woolen socks. I have been up before old hands and cried out, “Moi qui pri a Saint Joseph depuis vingt jours qui il nourir envoie des lainages pour ces pauvres petits!” They are all “petits,” you know, from the moment they are put to bed in a hospital. The Mother Superior (who is quite young) came running at the sound of her bell, for she, it seems, remembered that I had been there before. Tout cela pour nous! Et ces belles maisons de chenets bien chaudes (the bath wraps) aussi! Mais c’est la Providence qui nous amène. Ces enfants ont si froid; et souvent nous ne trouvons pas de quoi les envelopper.”

And when I explained that I had nothing to do with it but to pass your gifts along—was it possible that young ladies in America, so far, so far, were thinking about the French soldiers that they would be cold, and were sending all these beautiful things to help? and the old sister constantly interrupting to remind me that Superieure (who is young) and Superieure (who is young) are the poor souls who have been praying for these very things. I left them both radiant, the case was so plainly an answer to prayer.

A most interesting visit to the convalescents. They have two large villas that the city has furnished to the men themselves organize and carry on the houses, for there are neither nurses nor doctors there. These men are without homes where they can spend their convalescent leave, or their homes are in places where the men would not be allowed to go. Some go in and mend up for these men occasionally just for the most part they take care of themselves. It is there that the case of sewing materials goes. It is a real treasure and contains what will serve the whole party. I suggest that your Guild put one such case in every box they send off. Such splendid needles! and add a ball of stout tape suitable to run in casings, for all the military drawers have tapes in casings at the ankles and at the back of the waist—lits anybody! Warm socks for these convalescents—there are no fires in those villas, and are glad to become. At the city work room where women have been sewing ever since the war began they were hemming what scraps they could find to serve as handkerchiefs—pieces mostly of old cotton (flowered white) is on a rail in the old linen is kept for hospital use. The handkerchiefs from Philadelphia were welcomed everywhere and more, which I suspect are at this moment down at the station, from Mt. Holyoke, will be instantly utilized. The strongest ones go to the front, for they are often the only piece of stuff a man has, and serve for towel, napkin, sling bandage or travelling bag, when the haversack has disappeared.

And I found the Shetland gloves so good for cold fingers—you will think this is a very cold country. I say so much about it—and I wear them when I go in a cab. By the way, cabs have not counted up to many francs and there is money still left after buying the cablegram. It is only the Grand Hotel, the Victoria and the Petits Soeurs that are inaccessible. The others can be easily reached by using the new electric line from Cannes, which passes (Continued on page 4)

I. A Comedy in Five Acts.
Place. College Settlement Kitchen. Domestic Science Class for Boys.
Time. Evening.
Act I. Teacher (To Tony who is getting down a dish from pantry shelf): "You didn't touch the jelly, did you, Tony?"
Tony (Up to that time ignorant of the whereabouts of the jelly, glances about, locates it, climbs down and replies): "No, teacher." Act II. Tony: "Teacher, this plate won't hold all the biscuits."
Teacher: "Very well, get a larger one." (Tony climbs up to the pantry shelf, gets plate and two glasses of jelly, puts glasses in pocket, climbs down and goes on with class work.) Act III. Half Hour Later.
Tony: "Teacher, is it 9 o'clock yet? My mother told me to come home at 9.
Teacher (Looking at watch): "It is quarter past now. You had better run right along." (Exit Tony.)
Act IV. Tony (On street corner to gang of small boys): "Hi there!" (Exhibiting jelly) "Want some?"
Gang (in chorus) "Yes, yes!"
Tony (As they are about to dive in): "Hold on! Do you think I crooked this for nothing? I guess not. Two fingers for a cent this costs—eh?
(Gang leader, temporarily rich after a successful crap game, hands over 10 cents.)
Tony: "All right, fellows, dive in." (Successive pairs of grimy fingers, each grimmer than the one before, go down into the jelly and come up dripping to watering mouths. Tony, crying, "Cheese it," disappears with his profits, as he sees the cooking class emerge from the Settlement.)
Act V. Five Minutes later, on Settlement Door-step.
Cooking Class (Dragnnig one jelly gommander by the collar and holding up empty jelly glasses to astonished residents): "Teacher look." Tony crooked 'em. Sold it, he did. This guy bought some.
Resident: "And where is Tony?"
Cooking Class (Indignantly): "Gone to the Movies! Say, Teacher, put him out. He don't deserve to belong. He's a regular crook. We ain't, and we don't want nothin to do with him." (Exeunt all with heads up and chests high.)

II. An Intercollegiate "Round Robin."
A "Round Robin," bursting with ideas for advancing the College Settlements chapters, makes its rounds each month between Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Wellesley and Barnard. The "Robin" is the candidature of the four Electors, and sets forth the troubles, as well as the successes of the chapters. Each Elector gives an account monthly of what her chapter has done, often calling upon the others to give advice in solving each problem as how to raise money, increase the membership, distribute Quarterlys, and devise some unusual form of entertainment. The "Robin" recently carried a suggestion pertinent at this time of year when the feelings of most people have become dulled from an unending number of appeals. The suggestion ran thus:
"Our chapter is devoting itself mainly now to educating the public. We have been called on for so many things—war relief, French babies, a thousand other things—we don't feel that we can do anything more, but we hope to arouse interest which will tell another year. In two weeks we are going to have an informal open meeting in which everyone is going to swap yarns about settlement experiences. We thought that might make people quit saying that we do nothing except ask for money and a few class leaders."
Immediately after the spring vacation will be a capital time for such a "talk-fest," for the girls who have spent their vacation at the Settlement houses in Boston, New York and Philadelphia will be returning with a fresh store of amusing incidents and heart-throbs.
The annual meeting of the College Settlements Association will be held at Mt. Ivy, near New York, Saturday and Sunday, May 8 and 7.

LETTER FROM MRS. IRVINE.

this house and takes me all the way up into the town. The octopus-man knows me and only glances at my bundles with a friendly eye. The green pencils are evergreen, not to say true blue, and the black leather bag is my chief reliance. It replaces one bought after the Wellesley fire and now separating into its original parts, and is just the right size to hold my tools, when I go to sew, or my documents when visiting hospitals. No prudent person sits from home without having at hand what will account for her. Passport permis de sejour, laissez-passer, rent receipt and tax receipt, letters addressed to oneself and from persons interested in what one is doing. Just now we may add the ornamental certificate of having taken part in the Emprunt National de la Victoire! How would you like to carry all that in your pocket? But one soon grows used to these formalities. All the same, one prefers to be where known, not to wander off in out of the way places, especially here in a frontier department.

Did I mention the pocket light? No, and that would be the last thing to omit. I don't very often come home after dark, but sometimes it happens, and there the little spark is all ready to see for me, and in that same good bag.

This is a very informal reply or report to such a shipment as you sent. At all events, it is a message of sincere gratitude for the best Christmas present imaginable and of deep admiration for the spirit of the Wellesley girls. The old motto is a very proud one, as it has always seemed to me; we are still those whose privilege it is to minister to others. If, in our time, we have to be helped—may we be as worthy of it.

Thank all the friends not for me alone, or first, but for the courage they are giving to those fighting here. "To think there are people we never saw, who yet remember and help us!" said one man. Affectionately yours.

JULIA J. IRVINE.

PARLIAMENT OF FOOLS.

A BALLAD OF SPRING VACATION.

Wellesley College,
Hardened with books,
Silences, boxes, un-
Breath and bundles,
Left for vacation,
Left on the Special,
Lunchless and breathless,
Wildly arriving.

Skelp loads, machine loads,
Legs, arms, and suitcases all in a jumble.

Some arrived safe to
Ten days of gaiety,
Days spent in purchasing
Checked suits and sailor hats;
Dressmakers, milliners,
Bridge parties, theaters
Razors for charities;

Nights spent in dancing with The man they hated most,
Social frivolities pleasant and dull.
Some of the heroes,
(Don't misinterpret theirs!)
Joyously speeding
Swift toward the sunset
Fell in a train wreck.

Thers was the courage of Band A. Travelling,
Thers was the calm got
In long months at Wellesley

Dizzily dashing from
Depot to Ad Building,
Clinging to vehicles
Weak 'neath the load.

Dauntless, undamaged
They crawled from the debris,
Calling the roll as of
Old time in fire drill,
Marching in line in kimono and suit coats.

Others, courageous,
Went to the seashore,
Freckled their noses and
Even got sunburned
Reading new novels on cliffs by the ocean.

Here first the daring ones
Rode over snow drifts,
Seeking for shelter from
New England weather.
Here then they settled, collecting about them
Steamer-rugs, sweaters, fur-
Coats and hot water bags,
Cheerful of comforts,
Dearest companions.

All they dared plan for their Easter vacation
To curl in a shivering ball in the corner,
Piling fresh logs on an unfeeling fireplace
And using up ink on their friends long neglected.

Thus for the first day,
But with the morning,
Sunlight and seashore,
Thawed out their feelings,
Upsetting their plans.

Never a blizzard
Repaid their precautions,
Never a rain-storm

 Came to console them,
Brilliant the sky over
Whispering water,
Balmy the breezes through
Brittle pine trees;

Mild their vacation.

Swift speed vacation for
All fifteen hundred,
Happy and busy
Each in her measure.

Restful? Well, hardly!

Back came the girls again
Praising the weather.
Back from Chicago, New York and Virginia,

Rocks of the North Shore, and Settlement houses of
Boston and elsewhere,
Each as she came with a brand new spring bonnet.
Lauding the sunshine and tempering the rain,
Nearer and nearer approaching to Wellesley,

Darker and darker
The sky grew above them,
Cold blew the chilling wind,
Sharp fell the winter rain.

What is the matter? (The weather man shudders),
Wellesley roars—"Weather unsettled."

WEIMESLIE CLUBS.

The April meeting of the Boston Wellesley College Club will be held at Walnut Hill School, Na tick, Saturday afternoon, April 8, at 2:30, under the auspices of the members of the club in Natick and vicinity. Miss Conant and Miss Bigelow, the principals of the school, are the hostesses for the afternoon and an opportunity will be given to see the four buildings and the grounds. The program will consist of selected readings by Miss Effie Kuhn, 1912, groups of College Songs by a double quartette from the College Glee Club, and a short talk on the Graduate Fellowship of the A.C.A, by Professor Mary W. Calkins.

IN MEMORIAM.
MaVl Taylor Crites, 1891.
The Class of Ninety-one wishes to express its feeling of loss in the death of Maud Taylor (Mrs. George W. Crites). She died December 30, 1915, in California, where her home had been for many years.
Her vivip personality, stimulating, intense, eager, will be always enduring to her friends. In spite of the limitations of ill health, she enjoyed life in all its phases, especially her books and her friendships. From her Dana Hall school days and her college years she was an ardent student of literature, with distinct appreciation for dramatic literature, and had she not been prevented by meagre health would doubtless have expressed herself further in writing.
To those who knew her well she will remain, not a memory, but a living force gone beyond our sight.
Signed
BERRI Palmer Land.
Claire Sampson Bowdish, 1906.

ALUMNÆ DEPARTMENT.
It's beloved member, Claire Sampson Boarditch. Because we remember the life and enthusiasm which she always expended in behalf of the class and college during our stay there together, and the loyaltv and interest with which she has responded to all pleas for help since that time, we feel that we owe some small measure, appreciate the bereavement of those nearest to her. To them we send our heartfelt sympathy.

Be it also resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Dr. Howitt, to the Collegian News, and that they be filed in the records of the class.

Signed
RUTH LOUISE GOKHWIN,
MOLLEE SIBERS GUMMER,
RUTH HERBERT HINZ,
For the Class of 1906.

A LETTER FROM JAPAN.
Carly Mrs. W. R. Weakley, 14 Kagawuchi, Osaka, Japan, February 26th, 1916.
Dear "Wellesley College News."
You may be sure that your paper is most welcome here, coming, as it does, from two sources into this home, which is charged with the Wellesley atmosphere.

Since I left New York City, December 7th, 1915, it seems as if an invisible but potent banner, inscribed "Wellesley," had been waving over me. First, on arrival in Chicago I was met by Lucy Willcox Gunn and spent a night with her. The next day I lunched with Harriet Wilcox Gunn (1903), meeting, in her home at Evanston, Fräulein Hintermeister, my former table teacher at Stone Hall, in "ye ancient days" of 1892 and '93. Then, on reaching Japan, I went at once to Mrs. Gertrude Wilcox Weakley's (1888), and received a cordial welcome to her home, where I have remained since January 5th. Rev. William R. Weakley and his wife are missionaries under the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and have been in Japan about twenty years.

I have been greatly interested in visiting my friend's numerous Sunday-schools in Osaka and vicinity, where she teaches Japanese children. It does one's heart good to see how the liberal education Gertrude received is all devoted to the service of these little ones, and it is wonderful to see them very young and take deep pleasure in their work, but also have very good times when they gather for social intercourse.

On a bright morning of last week, we received the following telegram from Miss Susan S. Scarfe of Kole College:

"Wellesley tea at three to-day for about guests, Scarfes. Mrs. Wellesley and I responded at once, quickly traveling the seventeen miles to Kole, and met Miss Fung Hin Liu (1914), whom I had previously met at Wellesley, and a Miss Most, who were on route to Shanghai. We had met Miss Alice Cary, (1913), before, and Her Legendary was enjoyed. Scarfes brought out Wellesley pictures, and the new book by Florence Converse, and at my request, showed her Phi Beta Kappa key and college seal pin. As some of us were quite "ancient dancers," funny tales of the days when we did "domestic work" at the college were told, and Miss Scarfe read aloud some humorous poems. I alone had enjoyed the proud distinction of having washed dishes with President Pendleton in her freshman year, and on one occasion, I think, that she dedicated a secret society, and included me, which celebrated our task, with some of its more startling features. And thus the moments flew on wings, as our little Wellesley group enjoyed itself in the heart of the "Wellesley atmosphere." We have seen some recent meetings in Tokyo, of the Japanese Wellesley Club, came in also for their share of attention. You may be sure that we pledged firm allegiance to President Pendleton in Japanese tea, and sent loving thoughts to our "College Beautiful."

Cordially,
ELEANOR S. CONWAY
(of the class of '86).

WELLESLEY'S WORK IN CHINA.
REPORT OF THEBREANA SEVERSON'S SUMMER WORK.
"The months of July and August found me at Peking with a secretarial family ranging from three to six. The one non-secretary helped to forget we were anything but ladies, however. During July I kept on with my study, but August was a complete holiday with a delightful schedule of tennis, bathing and reading. Since coming to Tsienhsien I have spent my mornings in study, but the afternoons have been given up to helping with the opening up of the fall work. It is a joy to be able to do a wee bit in a really truly Association after the two years given up to language study. There have been much more first experiences than I've been kept in a perpetual state of wondorment as to what would happen next. The meeting of the Board of Directors showed me what splendid initiative some of these Chinese women have. Attests the way they have found a person's need without seeing a corresponding need for more Chinese secretaries, still one was glad that they wanted the extra meetings, for it showed they were not content to remain always at one stage. Now we have meetings every Sunday afternoon and while they are not very large as yet, those who come are mostly those who do not get to church in the morning, and so are the very ones we want to reach.

"The educational work has begun and I have a class in beginner's English and am assisting in the Cooking class. I am to have an English Bible class, and possibly one in Chinese.

"The Chinese secretary has made out lists of all the new members, arranging them by localities, and this past week the secretaries and Board of Directors have called on all the Christian members. We find that personal invitations to meetings do much toward getting the members out. We are hoping in the next two months to call upon the whole membership and then exchange lists and start over again.

"The event which has called out the largest number was a lantern festival, when at least a hundred and fifty were present. Nearly eighty of the Christian membership came out to a meeting addressed by Miss Paxson, who spoke to them on their responsibility for the non-Christian members."

Miss Severin is certainly doing her share of the work and doing it well, but we are not supporting her as we should. The Committee on Wellesley Work in North China faces a deficit of $500 for this year unless YOU do something about it. It is never too late to contribute and no amount is too small. Twelve and one-half cents will support Miss Severin for one hour, $1 will cover an eight-hour working-day and $3 will take care of her throughout the whole twenty-four hours of one day. Do it now. Checks and money orders should be made payable and sent to

Les dessins sont des plus exquis — plusieurs des vêtements sont des échantillons — la plupart se vendent à 20%, de moins qu’il est possible de se les procurer ailleurs.

Vous êtes cordialement invités, mesdemoiselles, à venir voir notre jolie variété de modèles — vous trouverez sans doute le trésor intéressant et avantageux.

PLYMOUTH THEATER.

Never in her career has May Irwin, the leading comedienne of the American stage, been received with such warmth of approval as on last Monday night at the Plymouth Theater, Boston, when she opened her regular engagement in the latest and funniest play she has ever had, "33 Washington Square."

"Miss Irwin has always been sure of a welcome in Boston as in any other city of the country. Her personality, a warm-hearted, human, charitable, fan-loving, and far-reaching personality, has enshrined her in the hearts of the people; but this time she has not only her personal appeal, but the strength of the best play she has ever had, to keep the welcome warm.

Whether by accident or design, "33 Washington Square" contains every opportunity to show Miss Irwin at her best.

GEORGE ARLISS AT THE HOLLIS-STREET THEATER.

George Arliss, the distinguished English actor, whose creation of the role of Paganini will ever be famed in the memory of theater goers, comes to the Hollis-street Theater, Monday, April 11, in a new characterization that is said to be as worthy of his artistry as "Disraeli" itself.

The tourist to Genoa who remembers Paganini’s wonderful violin, enclosed in a glass case and shown with such reverence, will, experience a thrill of delight at the unusual and notable presentation of the great master himself, and to the thousands of others who have read of his genius and eccentricities, says the Transcript. The play pictures one of his visits to England in which he gently disillusioned a sentimental girl. The engagement of Mr. Arliss in this production is for two weeks only.

PARK SQUARE THEATER—MARGARET ILLINGTON.

Miss Margaret Illington, the foremost of America’s native born emotional actresses, opened her engagement at the Park Square Theater, last Monday night in Henry Arthur Jones’ big play, "The Lie." Miss Illington has played many roles and played them all well. Her position she has gained through her own personal endeavor, but she has never been seen to better advantage or played with more finish, more certainty, or more success of results than she does as "Edna Shale," in "The Lie." Miss Illington’s supporting company is as Nearly perfect as such an organization can be. Miss I. I. will give matinées on Wednesdays and Saturdays during the engagement at the Park Square Theater.
