MR. RAMON JAEN TO LECTURE.

At eight o'clock on Thursday evening, May 10, there will be a lecture by Mr. Ramon Jaen of West Point on "La casa espanola" with stereopticon slides. Mr. Jaen lectured here last year on "La tierra de Don Quijote" and those who heard him at that time will realize that it is a good opportunity to hear an interesting lecture given in pure, well spoken Castilian.

WELLESLEY SEES A "REEL" SHOW.

The much-longed-for musical comedy of the year, the "Romance Off the Reel," was presented at the Barn, Friday and Saturday evenings, April 27 and 28.

It was a 'live' show from beginning to end. From the first chorus of Equinoxian women, who "blithered" so cheerfully, to the last jig of "Charlie Chaplin feet," there was not a moment that the audience did not thoroughly appreciate. The staging of the northern scenery was good, the costumes were most effective. The music was catchy, and the choruses sang clearly and well.

Jane Matthews, 1919, made an attractive and appealing "Queen of the Movies." Her voice made up in clearness and sweetness what it lacked in strength; her acting was spontaneous and charming. Elsa Gracé, 1918, made a dashing Captain, and sang extremely well. Alice De Lade, 1917, proved to be the best singer in the cast. Her voice was of exquisite quality, and strong and clear enough to stand the hard test of Barn acoustics. Alice Brady, 1917, as "Jerry," the most objectionable of movie directors, was a picturesque hero whose cheerful grin carried him through every situation. Margaret Horton, 1919, took the part of "Pick," his indispensable assistant, and ground out films in a dashingly manner. The Equinoxian chiefs, Margaret Fox, 1920 and Margaret Conant, 1919, sang well and did some very effective acting. The short but unforgettable part of "Aunt Elvira" was done to life by Mary Hanson, 1919, and was one of the most artistic performances of the evening.

The fancy dancing was very well executed, and the costumes most striking. The final touch, "the coup d'état" which left the audience gasping was a bit of "Charlie Chaplin" imitation done by Pauline Holmes, with René Harris as his opposite, "Mary Pickford." As the curtain went down on this last proof of "The Lane Of The Reel," the audience showed their heartfelt appreciation of the "big show."

Anna F. Paton, '18, President of Christian Association, 1917-18

1917 MAKES A BIG SACRIFICE.

Much credit for the success of the operetta is due to Dorothy Blieburg and the song committee, and to Mary Flournoy and her chairmen. The pleasure which it gave was due to the fact that it was a Wellesley performance; its originality recommended it strongly. To Mr. Macdougall, the musical adviser, and to Susan Lowell, 1919, the director, belong the credit for the success of the musical pieces.

NO MORE NINE O'CLOCK! BUT—

Alas! No more wild rushes to the dining room at 7:45 A. M. With classes beginning at 8:40, and chapel at 8:15 (as is announced in the course of instruction for 1917-18), we will all eat breakfast peacefully at 7:30. But this new program has its advantages in that it lengthens each class five minutes, adds another period, and gives us greater freedom in arranging schedules. Moreover, in the future, elementary sciences are to be given three weekly appointments of two periods each, three consecutive hours being considered too wearing.
ONCE MORE—BOTH SIDES!

It seems to have been the duty of the Editorial column lately, to try to calm down excited feelings, rather than to try to arouse them as formerly. We harbor no animosity for "clerical minded sympathy with Germany," on taking a sensible attitude toward college-wide economy, on seeing everybody's side. Now there is another thing, concerning which feelings are high—the giving up of Garden Party and of Senior Play. No one can truly say and with assurance whether such a step were taken purely for the glory of being thought noble or for the sake of personal economy, or if a true disinterested desire to conserve our forces, our energy, our money for America. It is certainly there that were a large amount of both, the influence of girls enhanced for the better. But, regardless of motive, and in spite of personal accusation of some that it was a perfectly needless sacrifice, the value of it still remains. The class of 1917 has shown itself, in spite of personal desires to the contrary, ready to put aside thriftiness and selfishness with which women are so often accused, to give up their non-essential pleasures and to brave their own and families' disappointment, for the sake of principle. It is doubtful true that the War could not have been won, whether or not we have the Commencement festivities. The fact still remains,—serious renunciation is going to be necessary, and women are now-a-days big enough to sacrifice equally with men. If you still think that we needlessly or hypocritically gave up these festivities, ask yourself if you would have the heart to accept the luxury of the play or the reception, with the situation as it is. Women have too long been protected from hardships of mankind, and too easily grasp the luxuries of peace. We are made of fine material, if we would show it.

HELEN J. SANBORN.

It is a regrettable fact that the present college generation has been denied acquaintance with Wellesley's late alumna and trustee because of her mortal illness. Nevertheless, for these students who beard the President pay tribute to her at Vespers, Sunday evening, Helen J. Sanborn ceased to be the mere name of an unknown trustee and become a distinct personality, to whose endeavors many familiar features of our life at Wellesley bear evidence.

Beloved graduated from Wellesley with the class of 1884 and she still such as for her of the Department of Spanish, her interest in her Alumnae Association, with her work as chairman of the committee which in 1891 closed the college's large debt on Norumbega Cottage, and including her constant support of the Shakespearean-Aspen association, Shakespeare garden, and her seven years' trusteeship just ended, when considered in connection with her constant devotion to and endeavor for the International Family of which she is in Spain, would seem to indicate that the governing purpose of her life was the promotion of education for women.

Helen J. Sanborn were indebted and grateful to Helen J. Sanborn for her lasting service to our Alma Mater; as individuals we are indebted and grateful to her for the inspiration of a life true to its obligation and its purpose.

To "The Marks That Weave Their Thread With Bones."

I wonder if the minds are free to weave their threads all day long. May I hope that they be restrained by their own sweet wills, when they become aware that the weaving is disconcentrating to readers and lecturers and to many interested listeners. Why is it disconcentrating? In imagination, put yourself upon the platform to interest an audience. The first essential for such a task is intense concentration of the thought on the part of the speaker. If the speaker looks over the audience and here and there sees an auditor stopped intently over her needles, it is instinctive to try to gain the attention of the person so engaged, and to be troubled and disconcerted if he cannot do so. It is the question then, of the few thoughtless listeners,—of course it is mere thoughtlessness—disturbing the person who is trying to hold the multitude of people, and disquieting her immediate neighbors who sympathetically understand that the speaker is tried. If there was an opportunity for you all to prove the truth of this statement by actual experience, there were no need to try to convince you. May we ask you of your courtesy to refrain from knitting when Miss Matthies reads us, especially, when it is a real so often employed for one's self or one's friends—for the soldiers are for obvious reasons forbidden to wear lovely pink or blue sweaters.

MAXIMA M. BENNETT.

II.

May We Suggest?

To the Powers That Be and the Powers That Are To Be of the Barn that the matters of reserved seats and ushering, about which there seemed to be no little confusion at the operetta, be regulated in the future in the following ways:

1. By appointing a Head Usher as one of the play committee, and by making her services just as necessary and as definite as those of the other members.

2. By giving the Head Usher charge of the special tickets, reserved seats, ticket taking, candy and score sales and all other floor arrangements.

3. By having the special tickets of three kinds:
   a. Those to be sent to the faculty with a request that they be returned if not used.
   b. Those for special guests, such as mothers or faculty guests, and their escorts, for whom seats should rightfully be reserved.
   c. Those for outside guests of our own age, who would be injured neither in dignity nor in wind and limb by scuffling for seats with the rest of us.

4. By reserving only the number of seats indicated by the ticket blanks of 3 a and b, and by reserving none more.

This would remove the unpleasant necessity of asking a girl who had gained a good seat by the laborious and bewildering process of standing in line since 6:30 to surrender that seat to a member of the faculty or some other through some fault of mathematics or watchfulness the ushers had not kept enough seats reserved.

5. By permitting no reserving of seats.

On last Saturday night the couple who had gotten in line at 6:40 and thus won the right to enter the Barn at seven o'clock could find no seats in the center section closer than the third row of posts. The rest of the section consisted of the reserved seats, which one harassed usher was trying to keep clear, and about seven rows of seats being "held" by a dozen scattered girls for friends. If in some way we could organize "holding" by one girl, one umbrella, and one rous-colored sweater!

These regulations will mean the abolishing of the old system of telling a few girls with good looks and new evening dresses to hurry to the Barn to reserve seats. But it must be remembered that, we shall have to make up for it in some way, and that we must have an organized, determined, and tasteful group of picked girls under authoritative direction.

The Barn has abolished the dangerous and uncomfortable "shoving up" this year; why not take the time in stamping out our irritating and unfair practice of "holding" for a New Year's task?

Politics.

There are no girls in college who would not vigorously denounce corrupt national or local politics. They of course see to be same girls in Wellesley whose standards of college and class politics are of a lower level.

It is a lamentable, but an indisputable fact, that at these last elections, girls were actually standing near the elevator table who accused their Freshman friends in an adroit manner and deliberately influenced, or tried to influence, their voting. Not only is this true, but it is also true that girls have gone down to the village to call on freshmen and we doubt have developed from these declarations of subtle suggestions as to what girls it was best to vote for.

We are glad to feel that the candidates for office were undoubtedly unaware of the vast amount of soliciting that was being done on the campus. That it was not true, and it is also true that girls have indeed been victimized by our own candidates, and that we would have been sorry indeed to have known that such electioneering was going on.

We do not mean to imply that soliciting is carried on to a great extent by any great number of girls, but it does exist to a certain degree. It seems to arise from antagonism among crowds and cliques.

Wellesley College has always been considered as one standing for pure democracy. As long as there are rival cliques, each working to get ahead of the other, can we maintain our democracy? Our sense of right and honor is not high enough to stamp out such methods at election time (and it does not seem to be unfortunately), cannot our high ideals of democracy bring us to a realization of the injustice we are doing to ourselves by permitting methods that are of such a low nature? Why cannot we have a better spirit of fellowship among us all, a broader and more generous attitude to others, even though they do not happen to be our own personal friends, in our own narrow clique? Let every girl always ask herself, and especially at election times these ques-
The Club for the Study of Socialism was fortunate in being able to secure as speaker Dr. Harry Ward of Boston, who lectured at Shakespeare House on Sunday, April 29th on "The United States and World Peace." He opened by stating that we must reverse the old maxim and "in time of war, prepare for peace," and consider not only what will be the final outcome of the war, but what are its effects already in progress.

We claim this to be a war for high ideals, but those who are doing the fighting can think only of winning, and the terrible part of war. Moreover this war is not really fighting, it is scientific killing, directed to the utmost extent of all the inferences of modern warfare. The waste of economic resources is so great that we cannot stand it long; for the speeding up in industry is sending its produce either to waste or destruction. The immense war debts will burden our children with the payment of interest. There would be only two ways out of causing future suffering from this burden: one, to disarm, and save the cost of armaments; the other, to change the economic basis of society that there will be no payment of interest.

The social burden of the war, we are already feeling. Social agencies are already closing down in the United States, and even the common schools are shutting down in England. Will the possible gains from this war be great enough to over-compensate the losses of war? Are not social changes, liberalization, and social diseases? We must not compromise with our consciences, and try to base this war on Christianity, though we may say that the world is such that it is impossible to be Christians. The death rate in nations at war is a horror, and to strive to make a world in which it is impossible. The danger is that the United States will lower her idea of democracy to that of the Allies as shown in the treatment of small nations.

The United States has made the world a safer place for democracy. There must be disannulled not compulsory military training, if democracy is not to be perpetually maimed. The United States must see to it that she is willing to sacrifice something as a nation in the war the sacrifice of individually—for the high ideals of world peace and world democracy which she professes to seek.

PHYSICS AND WAR.

To many of us the position of physics in modern warfare is a rather curious one. Prof. Arthur S. Webster of Clark University in a lecture in Billings Hall on April 24th, was an entirely new one. Professor Webster, as a member of the Labor Council Board, was in a position to describe to us the very latest developments of war in use in our war department. Although deploring the production of science for the infamous net of war, we can not fail to admire the ingenuity of various of the modern devices. In the department of mechanics, the speed of the latest war machines is something to be noted, but the most remarkable is the use of the airplane and the submarine. The submarine shows the greatest variety of work that apply the principles of physics. The torpedo is likewise a complicated machine, its most wonderful feature being a gyroscope. The submarine records the distance of the boat and the submarine uses a similar recording instrument which, as the boat is directed towards the original goal. The speed of the submarine is something which is not only a matter of the first importance in the war, but is also an aid to the submarine in the war at sea.

The Submarine is a remarkable machine, because of its speed and its ability to move under water, and its ability to escape from enemy submarines. The submarine is a wonderful machine, and it is one of the few things that has been invented which has not been used for war purposes.

REMBRANDT ETCHINGS FROM MR. J. PIERPONT MORGAN'S COLLECTION.

Note: Mr. Sachs has omitted to state (in the following notice) that all the valuable Exhibitions of this year have been due to his generous effort, his expert competence—selection and arrangement that collectors have reposed in him. The Durer Engravings were in part from his own valuable collection, and in part from that of Miss Buxted of Boston, loaned personally to him.

In connection with the work of one of the History of Art Courses there have been held at the Farnsworth Museum this winter a series of special exhibitions of distinguished artists and a special art show earlier in the year are still on view. Most important of all, however, is the present remarkable exhibition of Rembrandt's etchings, consisting of a carefully selected group in superb impressions of some fifty prints from the master's total production of over three hundred etchings. The physical limitations of the gallery made a careful choice and elimination mandatory, but the prints-selected represent adequately the wide range of interest of the master; the best of Dutch art of the 17th century and of the greatest etcher who ever lived.

The exhibition has only been made possible through the very generous cooperation of Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan, from whose famous collection the present exhibition has been drawn. Rarely indeed (in this country—at least) has a student body been afforded such an opportunity, for no public or private collection in America equals Mr. Morgan's in the range and quality of original etchings by Rembrandt. In beauty of impression as well as numerically, it may justly be compared with the great European collections; with those of the British Museum; the Bibliothèque Nationale, Paris; the Berlin Museum; the Museum of Vienna; and such private collections as that of Baron de Rothschild.

That being so, the College and the public in general should not fail to avail itself of the present unusual opportunity.

This is not the place to describe even the most notable of the prints now shown. To attempt here to write adequately concerning Rembrandt is of course impossible altogether. It seems best, therefore, merely to quote a few brief passages from Sir Sidney Colvin's account of the master:

"Rembrandt, the most famous of painter-etchers, was born at Leyden on July 16, 1606. He early made his mark as an artist of high promise, especially in portraiture, and began to find sits (Concluded on page 6)
THE NEWSPAPER STAND.

Wellesley's new acquisition is to be a newspaper stand at the Elevation Table. Beginning May 3rd every girl will want to stop, look, buy and read the different versions of the latest war thriller.

"Kaiser abdicates," says one.

"Hohenzollerns will never give in," says another.

Of course, if you are satisfied with headlines, or what your own pet paper says, you won't be over-impressed with this privilege of buying papers of all complexions.

Four Boston papers, four from New York, (from the conservative Times to the socialist "Call") and the Philadelphia Ledger will be on sale daily, and Monday mornings there will also be Sunday papers from New York, Chicago, and Philadelphia.

If you want to see Wellesley's "Newspaper Stand" a permanent feature, bring your pennies and prove that you appreciate the value of more than a superficial scanning of the paper on your dormitory table.

PERSONAL PREPAREDNESS.

The students of Wellesley College and their friends are most cordially invited to attend an exhibition which will be held at the Wellesley Inn from April 30th to May 4th between the hours of 9 and 5 o'clock where they will have an opportunity to learn what a tremendous advantage a knowledge of shorthand and typewriting is to a person with a college education—especially at this time when women of intelligence may be called upon to undertake the bigger things in the business world.

They also will have opportunity to acquaint themselves with a typewriting machine which is particularly adapted to their needs—light weight, convenient, maximum speed, low cost—THE CORONA the "Personal Machine."—Ade.

COLLEGE NOTES.

Miss Hazard Coming East.

Ex-President Hazard left her winter home in Santa Barbara April twenty-second, going on to Plano Springs by motor. On May sixth she enters upon the transcontinental journey, and expects to reach Peace Dale on the tenth. We shall hope to see her in Wellesley while it is still beautiful with spring.

Miss Scudder On Vacation.

After seeing one book, The Church and the Hour, through the press, and completing the manuscript of another, the Arthurian study on which she has been working for several years, Professor Scudder is at last starting out on her Sabbatical travels. She goes first for a visit at Bryn Mawr, taking in the annual meeting of the College Settlements Association at Mount Iven, and then to Washington, to the Federal Council of Churches. Miss Scudder plans to return to Wellesley for a week in May, and then to go with her mother to their summer cottage in Shiloh, New Hampshire, for a brief visit. On the first of June Miss Scudder, probably accompanied by Miss Florence Close, starts for Montreal on her way to two months of journeying in the far west.

A GIFT FOR THE SHAKESPEARE GARDEN.

Mabel William Shakespeare acknowledges with grateful appreciation the gift of fifty dollars from Miss Elinice C. Smith toward the care of his garden this summer.

MISS REPLIERRY AT WELLESLEY.

On May 11th, at 4:15, Miss Agnes Replier will lecture in Billings Hall on The Courageous Reader. In Wellesley, as elsewhere, Miss Replier is known as America's foremost essayist. From Books and Men, on through the goodly list of volumes bearing her name, to her latest Atlantic essays, she has manifested power of clear thought and of crisp, delightful expression. It is seldom, perhaps, that so much wit is combined with such strength of conviction. Especially of late her work has developed along lines of national and of international importance, and has shown keenness of insight, breadth and sanity of judgment, and unflinching courage. Miss Replier has proved herself a woman of power, and Wellesley will, with peculiar pleasure, welcome the courageous writer.

BASEBALL RETURNS.

Baseball returned to Wellesley on April 26 for the spring season. Its first public appearance was at the indoor baseball game between the Seniors and Juniors in the gymnasium. The most remarkable feature was the heavy hitting by both teams. Fannie Rane, '18, fielded very well. She was able to judge the rebound of flies so well that she caught several as they bounced from the gymnasium wall. Margaret Jones, '17, pitched a steady game, covered several flies and batted a high average. Elizabeth MacNaughton, '17, showed ability in stealing bases, and in sliding for home. Two or three runners amused the audience by sliding so hard for their base that they slid away with the little rubber mat that marked the base upon the polished floor. The Seniors won, 41-31. Mr. Fette coached and umpired the teams.

W's for Indoor Baseball were awarded to Fay Cobb, Margaret E. Jones, Elizabeth MacNaughton, and Eleanor Newton from 1917, to Esther Dush, Florence West and Bob Reavill from 1918.

CORRECTION.

ly from a general change in the artistic fashions of the time. He continued to labor industriously, without any cessation, unceasingly so that his name has been preserved to the last of the century and counting.

"Now, two centuries and a quarter after his death, the fame of Rembrandt has again risen to a point that it has never reached before. He has taken his place as the forerunner of the 'naturalistic' painters of the world: a true Dutchman, resolute to see and interpret the world according to his own vision of it, observing northern nature, with a northern eye, and not attempting to imitate the Greek canon of grouping or perfection of physical type; but investing life as he saw it, and the past as he imagined it, with an essential poetry of his own. One somewhat superficial element in his poetry depends upon a peculiar love for bizarreness and curiosities of Oriental and other costume and adornment—a taste he shared with several of his teachers and contemporaries. For profounder elements were his unrivaled insight into the strength and paths of human character and feeling, not disdaining the common, the degraded, or grotesque; and his acute and wholly original sense of the magic of light and shade and atmospheric mystery, as enveloping and transfiguring all the objects of vision, and revealing in them a thousand subtleties of form, colour, and relation unperceived by common eyes. From the gift of nature and from indefatigable self-training, he derived an unequalled command, which steadily strengthened from youth to age, of the technical resources required for expressing these powers and sensibilities on canvas."

PARLIAMENT of FOOLS

1917 MODEL SPRING SONG.

When crew begins
And the young galley slave
Draws on her jersey tight
With spots of grease bedight,
She chalks across the jump
Trying to keep from mortal sight
Lost she be hurled o'er college as a vamp.

But when the latest Vogue
Deceives a “slip-on” for the advanced junior fill's
In color yellow, rose, or taupe,
Or flax or Germantown or rope,
She flaunts its jumklette
In Math class or in History 23.

And that's the difference, you see,
"Twist service and the dernier cri!"

REPORT TO THE NATIONAL OBSERVATORY AT WASHINGTON.

A most peculiar phenomenon has been observed lately in the Wellesley sky. A body of meteors has approached so near the atmosphere of the campus as to be almost within it, thus giving an opportunity for much closer scrutiny than has ever been possible before. There appears to be little connection between the meteors of April and those of the meteors of August, for their habits and formation are quite different. There is a central group, most plain visible from the university, and this is the nucleus of the reddish tinge which characterizes the meteors. The nucleus seems more or less at rest (though speeded through stellar space at a velocity of 94,000,000 miles per day) but on the outer edge there is a continuously moving trail of meteors growing paler and paler in hue in proportion to their distance from the center. It is the latter whose path has proved so baffling to many astronomers, for their motion is erratic to the last degree. One of these wandering meteors follows a straight course for only a short distance, then unaccountably describes an arc with a radius of ten feet at least, before resuming its way.

Considerable alarm has been caused among the more nervous and superstitious by the disturbance, but we hasten to reassure them by the above scientific observation. At the present rate of travelling they will probably be out of reach of our strongest telescope within a few days. This is a matter we greatly regret, for on the whole, the appearance of the meteors has been one of the most interesting occasions of the season.

18. A letter is received from a new correspondent, who describes herself as a University woman, though not a recent graduate; who has had business experience and training, and who is now in charge of a farm within one hundred miles of New York. This inquirer wishes to find (quoted):

"Two or three patriotic college girls, fond of country life and all animals, who are willing to pay their own expenses for board and lodging on the farm, which will be nominal, and give their services free, under the instruction of a fully qualified and experienced married farmer... all of us desire our utmost and best for love of country, devoting all the profits (of the farm) to the cause of democracy and the Allies."

More News from Our Ambulance.

April 28, 1917.

My dear Miss Hart,

I need hardly tell you with what deep appreciation I received your cheques from students of Wellesley College amounting to $310, to be applied to the further maintenance of the "Wellesley College" ambulance. In this week's mail to Paris headquarters, I am advising them of this gift and the use to which it is to be put, and know that they will be as grateful as we are for this evidence of the continued friendship of the students of Wellesley for the Field Service.

I feel it will interest you, and those who have been so generous in our behalf, to know that we are sending over to France during the next month or two on an average of fifty men. When these are added to the contingents from eight or nine New England and Southern schools, Boston and other schools we have surely twenty-five sections at work, representing more than eighty American colleges and universities. This increase in the size of the Field Service is of course very gratifying to us, but as it means a proportionate increase in the cost of maintenance, you will realize how sincerely grateful we are when donors of ambulances have been in service for some time find it possible to supply their continued maintenance, and thus lift our burden considerably.

With appreciation always of your courtesy and interest, believe me,

Sincerely yours,

Henry D. Sleeper.

"LIBRARY WORK FOR CHILDREN."

At a time like the present, when each of us is trying to do her share for the country, the lecture given at T. Z. E. on Tuesday, April 24th, by Miss Chna W. Hunt of the Brooklyn Public Library, was doubly interesting. In developing her subject, "Library Work for Children," Miss Hunt showed how vital a thing is the training of children for good citizens, especially now, when the civic condition of the country is one of such unrest. The influence of good books, pleasant surroundings, contact with the courtesies of life, and association with gentlewomen, besides meaning much to the children, has a value in hard cash to the community in which they live. Miss Hunt told many amusing stories about the children; and if pointing out how quick the librarian must be to know what the children mean, she said that she must be so familiar with the names of books as to know that when a little boy wanted "Holy Smoke" he meant "The Divine Fire" and that the girl who asked for "The girl who lost her limit," she meant "The girl of the Limberlost."

Miss Hunt briefly outlined the program of the Brooklyn Public Library's Training School for Children's Librarians. The course is one lasting nine months, and there is no tuition fee, as the graduates are expected to take positions in that library. She said that she would be very glad to communicate with any girls who might be interested, if they will address her at the Brooklyn Public Library.

APPOINTMENT BUREAU.

19. A lady, who has a daughter of sixteen to educate, wishes to find a school that will be vaccination in the South for the winter, in New Jersey in the spring and fall, and in camp or travel for mid-summer months. Ideal houses and situations have been found for these four seasons, one of them in the neighborhood of a large university, and a principal is needed for this school.

30. The right person, equipped with typewriting and stenography, might have a delightful vacation (six or eight weeks) by serving as secretary in a southern school for mountain whites.

The Appointment Bureau of the College has been asked to obtain the names and addresses of persons who might be secured to go to Yucatan, Mexico, for educational work under the head of the Department of Education. Experienced graduates of colleges are desired with a thorough understanding of Spanish, since the teaching is to be done from that language, Mexicans, Spanish Americans or Europeans of Latin origin who have graduated from American colleges are especially desired. The work is in directing schools or departments of industrial training. A letter regarding this opportunity may be seen at 38 Administration Building in office hours.
DEATHS.

"St. On Sunday, April 21, in Natiek, Mass., Julia Ada Ellis.

"St. Suddenly, on April 19, 1917 Fred C. Ellis, husband of Auguste Helmholts Ellis.

"St. On March 26, 1917, in New York City, Theodora Nye McCutcheon.

Mrs. Florence Jenkies Spence, delegate from this club to the 1916's Commencement, brought back to us a most interesting account of the events of that week.

Miss Elizabeth Rogers, 1916, gave current news of the Wellesley campus. Miss Florence Crofut presented a poem of the theme and of the four meeting of the Graduate Council. The chief topic of the meeting was "Student Aid." The Hartford Branch of the Wellesley Students' Aid Society is represented by Miss Florence A. Moore, Chairman, and Miss Jessie Wilson.

It was a great pleasure to have Mrs. Van Winkle present, who spoke of the Utah Wellesley Club, (having thoughtfully brought copies of the cook-book with her). She made a stirring appeal for the Student Aid Society also and a discussion followed.

During the social hour which followed, Mrs. Van Winkle poured, the hostess being the Executive Committee.

In November the Club raised a substantial sum for the Student-Union Building, by an exhibit of the wonderful war posters barned by the History Department of the College, which was open for five days and closed with a captivating lecture by Miss Carolyn Wilson, 1909, on her experiences as a war-correspondent in France and Germany. At the close of the lecture the audience remained to meet Miss Wilson and to speak her with questions. Members of the Club took turns by twos in being on duty at the picture exhibit, which was well attended.

Miss Wilson was entertained by Mrs. Marjorie Merridith Hathaway during her stay.

On January 6th a social "get-acquainted" meeting was held at the delightful home of Mrs. Amanda S. Leighty '07 in New Britain, undergraduates at home for the holidays being included in the invitations. Mrs. Clara Sternberg Traut assisted her sister in receiving. A musical program furnished by the "Traut Trio" was much enjoyed and in the lively social hour which followed the seven Traut daughters were most helpful.

On the evening of February 13th a Club Supper was served in Center Church House, Hartford, with Professor Kendall as host of honor. This informal and delightful affair was followed by an open meeting at 8:30 o'clock in the same building at which Professor Kendall was the lecturer, her subject being "An Inspiration of the East." Professor Kendall is a charming speaker and gave a most interesting account of her trip in 1914 to Turkey, through Persia and India, holding the close attention of a large audience of invited guests, including the parents of undergraduates. Following the lecture a reception for Professor Kendall was held and light refreshments were served.

On March 13th the Club was entertained by Mrs. Abby Blanchard Mead at her beautiful new home on Forest Street in Hartford. Miss Helen Legate, 1908, described in a most interesting way her life at the Sorbonne and all the admiration who attended the February meeting of the Graduate Council was read. Tea was served and Miss Ellen G. Means and Miss Capron poured.

At the suggestion of the "Hartford Times" an article on the history, personnel and activities of the Club was prepared for publication in that paper by Miss Ellen Goodrich Means.

WELLESLEY CLUBS.

Hartford.

The first fall meeting of the Club was held at the Golf Clubhouse on Friday, October 6th, 1916, the Vice-President, Mrs. Louise Williams Reelings, presiding.

In recording the death of Theodora Nye McCutcheon, the class of 1903 voice intimately the keen sorrow which we share widely with Wellesley College and with our Alumnae body and which we tenderly express to the little sister she has left. We are glad to be privileged to name as classmate one whose loyalty and generosity we were never failing as alumna, as friend, as countrywoman,—one whose high faith and courage is a splendid memory and inspiration to the class to which she gave an allegiance of devotion.

The Oregon Wellesley Club holds four regular meetings a winter in Portland at the homes of its members. We have had three such meetings so far this winter, with an average attendance of two-thirds of the members. After the business is transacted, and the program concluded, we spend the rest of the afternoon enjoying our friends over a cup of tea, and around the piano singing our old songs.

Just before Thanksgiving, the Club gave an afternoon for the girls of Portland who are interested in colleges. The Wellesley moving picture film, which was sent on from Wellesley to us, was shown and the pictures explained. A short talk upon Wellesley was given and college songs were sung by the Club. In spite of very bad weather we had a large attendance.

At our next meeting, in April, we are to have with us Dr. George Herbert Palmer, who will be in Portland at that time giving a course of lectures at Reed College. We are looking forward to this with great pleasure.

In July of this year, when the National Educational Association meets in Portland, the Wellesley Club will be hostess at a luncheon for all visiting Wellesley women. We take this opportunity to invite our future guests.

Rhode Island

The Rhode Island Wellesley Club met on Monday afternoon, March 25, at the home of Mrs. Kate Cushman Tannier. Mrs. Helene Buhler Magee of the English Department at Wellesley gave a most interesting talk, which she called "An Interpretation of the College," naming the three things which every college tries to give its students: knowledge, power, and taste. In showing how the alumna can help the college do its work, she touched upon the new entrance requirements, the four comprehensive entrance examinations, the curriculum, the social life, the open forums originated by the students, the societies, and student government.

Preceding this address the reports given included that of the mid-winter rally, read by the Secretary, Miss Elizabeth Hoyt; that of the treasurer, Miss Agnes Little; and reports of the various circles raising money to complete the pledge of $8,000 made to the college.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION MEETINGS.

Campus

"Church Membership—It is worth while!" was the subject of the Christian Association meeting, held April 30th in Stone Hall parlors. The leader, Helen McMullin, spoke of the essential importance of creeds, of the general trend in our present-day churches toward unity of worship. She then suggested the need of help felt by most church members in our part in meeting that need, as subjects for the general discussion which followed. During this discussion, the church as an embodiment of an ideal, religion as a necessity, and the real value of church work, were the points especially stressed.

Village

Leadership was Katherine Speidel's subject for the Christian Association meeting at St. Andrew's on April 30. We owe our greatest loyalty to Christianity, and we must not let it be subordinate to our sadder loyalties. The nations now at war have shown us that there is heroism in every Christian, for every citizen and native has served his country, not only by fighting under her flag, but by doing the daily duties at home. In the present crisis unquestionable support should be given to the country, but we owe an even greater loyalty to God. We must not keep hidden the spiritual heroism which is within us, rather we must strive always to be loyal Christians, thus growing bigger and gaining higher ideals.

INTERCOLLEGIATE NEWS.

Brown University is organizing undergraduates with experience in farming to establish agricultural camps in Rhode Island. Under certain conditions credit will be given to students living college to farm. The faculty will plant ten acres of University land with beans and potatoes.

Bowdoin now offers two military courses, one of very rigid training which takes the entire time of those who enroll, the other more moderate. The general sentiment in the college is that every man should enter one of these courses unless debarred by physical incapacity.

Brown offers an example that deserves following. In case of war, undergraduates will do what is most needed and what they are most fitted for, but meanwhile they intend to do "the little things that everyone forgets—being pleasant, and above all eating things we dislike."

Florida State College for Women offers an excellent course in public school music, an important part of the training for girls who intend to teach in grammar and high schools throughout the State. At a recent recital, a chorus of eighty-five students who are taking the course was much commended for its good tone, attack and enunciation. Only six of its members had received private instruction in voice.

An Intelligent Person may earn $100 monthly corresponding for newspapers; $40 to $50 monthly in spare time; experience unnecessary; no canvassing; subjects suggested. Send for particulars.
