The last installment of copy for the News goes to the printer Monday morning. Announcements and other articles should be in the hands of the editor by 9 A. M. Monday. Very short items, when necessary, can go in proof on Tuesday noon. Several delays, resulting from misunderstandings of this arrangement, seem to make this explanation necessary.

SIXTY VOLUNTEER AS GARDENERS.

Realizing that the college garden needs more care than its force of men is at present able to give it, Mr. Woods on Monday issued a call for sixty volunteer gardeners, girls willing to demonstrate their patriotism through an hour of manual labor weekly. Seeing in this opportunity for service a probable return of fun, satisfaction and experience, the girls signed up rapidly for the sixty places. The recruits are to meet in room 24 on Monday, May 11, at one o'clock for explicit directions for work.

HISTORY IS FOR SENIOR ELECTION.

No course before offered for election has met with such applause as the new and popular course, History 18. To the uninitiated, as well as to the casual observer, it did seem difficult to find the right person to fill the chair of a department of such rumored importance but there was little doubt in the minds of the "makers of history" themselves. They realized fully the weight of responsibility which would undoubtedly fall upon the heads of this department of delightful human history. Consequently the Powers that Be, acting with their usual foresight, met and discussed and balloted and then they met and balloted and discussed. Finally, when nearly a score of ballots had been cast and the college al large was showing signs of dropping every other course that Wellesley offers in their enthusiasm for History 18, Professor "Hickey" Lange was unanimously elected. Associate Professor Dorothy Stern was offered the position of Chief Forester for, since History 18 is a course of such wide scope, it will take an unusual interest in planting and caring for trees.

Never before has a course had a more propitious start, for few departments can boast a unanimously elected head. For the coming year History 18 will continue to be a course in current events and will be open only to Seniors. The prerequisites are three completed years in the department or the equivalent. The popularity of the course forces the Administration to limit the number of applicants to 500. Commencing with the fall of 1918 the course will be offered purely as history—we trust not ancient—but at all events it will be open to all classes by permission, and will be required of all even classes. We feel sure that no compulsion will be necessary, however, for under the guidance of the eminent Professor Lange, History 18 speaks for itself.

The entire college manifested its approval of the election when it congregated at Center and awaited more or less impatiently for the announcement of the winners of this unusual honor. The steadfast dignitaries finally appeared in a chariot of somewhat ponderous proportions drawn by a prancing steed. All those most interested in the course showed their enthusiasm by following with a lusty new marching song. To make the surprise more complete, for of course not one of the three of the classes had even a suspicion of the outcome of the election, the new officers of the administration were veiled in royal purple. Elizabeth Lapham, chosen as one well instructed in History 18, gave a brief summary of the course. Mention was made of those who throughout the three years just completed have helped to make this unusual course possible.
ALL THE NEWS THATS FIT TO PRINT.

At last Wellesley has a newspaper stand. Its object is not, as might have been feared, to point a moral, but it was assumed that a start had been made and an appeal issued. It has been discovered that the fact is not substantiated in the least. At least if there is any thought of making such a point, it has been shrewdly hidden. It is taken for granted that we all read some paper more or less regularly. But deploring the fact that it is undoubtedly always the same one, we are here given the opportunity to broaden our views through a knowledge of facts gleaned from varied sources. That this expansion of knowledge has started at the time, is not accidental. "History is being made before our eyes," we all realize. The very least we can do, and after all it is not very little, is to acquaint ourselves with the enlightenment of a broad and unknown knowledge. Catering to the busy ways of college girls, the committee has sought the papers quite literally, "to our very doors." At the elevator table are sale newspapers which publish pages of the different representatives of varied groups of people in the country. Start reading the conservative New York Times, if you must, but try The Call the next day, and then the Boston Transcript and Journal for variety.

It has often been suggested that the News digest this material for its readers that we publish each week, a summary of the events considered most important by the leading daily. But outside of the fact that the material would be decidedly old by the time it reached you, would not the very fact that you should miss the stimulants to be got from the thrilling contradictions you will be encouraged to read it morning to morning? You will soon realize that because your home paper says a thing is so, the whole country does not necessarily accept it. Moreover, and this is vastly more important, you yourself will have your mind broadened and not slightly compared with that obtained in a college course.

Bring your promises early as for the present there are only a limited number of papers and they are going to sell out quickly. If this proves a financially successful enterprise, we may even be able to incorporate it in our Student Aid work.

LIGHTS OUT!

Are you afraid of the dark? Is there a ghost on your trail? Has a spectre been in the habit of haunting you? Or do you merely long for "a welcoming light in the window" as you trudge homeward at 3 A.M.? These are the reasons the Student Magazine News, assigned for the fact that the majority of the dormitories glow with light during dinner time, during evening lectures, or during such hours as the inhabitants spend at the Lift.

We beg leave to say that the Glow is true. Most of us have eaten mandarins, theatres and candy from our expense list. Many of us look the other way as we pass the show windows of Filee's. But the obvious is easily overlooked. There are unconsidered ways in which we could help the college meet the Scholar's expense list. Shall we try the economy of thoughtfulness? Can't someone suggest other expedients?

I. A Curious Illusion.

A curious rumor is wondering around the out-of-the-way corners of the college that should be captured and brought out into the public gaze. It says that some of us are planning a card-catalogue which shall describe and rate every academic course open in our curriculum. The plan is that the instructor of each course shall appoint some member from her class to represent that course on the card-catalogue report and give an estimation of its worth from the student point of view. As each year reviews old courses, additions will be made until students may resort to the catalogues gain the students' judgment of certain courses, and thus make their election of courses more intelligently.

Such a proposal, made, perhaps, only in fun, should certainly meet with opposition among those who believe that the catalogue is only a tabulation of facts and that in the hands of any one student judge correctly the worth of any course of instruction to the student body as a whole. She cannot pass judgment on a course that is designed to meet certain needs. A course essential to her plan of academic preparation and cultural development may inevitably quite unsuited to the needs of other students.

Moreover, it does not follow from a girl's enthusiasm for a course that she has true appreciation of the help she will derive from it. It should be rated low.

Again, as we know, the methods and personality of the instructor would influence greatly an estimation of her course. A catalogue report must contain, surely, a discussion of instructors.

No student, then, it should be clearly seen, is competent to judge for others concerning academic courses. Because of this, and because "no instructor would care to have any one member of her class represent her course," as one instructor has said, any concerted action towards establishing a card-catalogue of courses should meet with prompt opposition from every clear-minded student.

II. A Word in Passing.

Step Singing this week; and now is our chance to learn some songs we haven't. We all noticed that when we start to sing at any gathering the only things we all seem to know are: "Where, O where are the Verdant Freshmen?" "Problems," and of course "Alma Mater," though even then we often stumble in the words in the last stanza. It is a shame we don't use more of our college songs, for we have a large selection of all kinds, beautiful as well as catchy ones. But we must be satisfied with what we know. Instead of laughing we ought to feel ashamed when we stop in the middle of a college song, because we do not know how to go on. I wonder how many could even sing, "'neath the Oaks," straight through, word by word? Not many I wager. I do not believe I could.

Now, however, we have the chance to remedy all this if we will. Most of us have song books. Why not bring them to Step Singing, and by going over some of the old favorites with the books and then learn to sing them word by word, and thereby do away with the old stumbling way?

CONCERNING NEWSPAPERS.

Last Saturday there appeared on campus a new institution, the news stand. We all, presumably, have read about the intelligent ideas about the war and the only information from which to form these ideas is to be found in the newspapers. In a crisis, one grouns that newspapers can't be depended on to tell "the whole story and nothing but the truth," and as a result we become over-skeptical it is well to pause and consider the particular merits and interests of various papers.

The New York Times, which of all the dailies, prints the largest number of columns, is the ablest representative of the business man, especially of the merchant, the great dealer. The New York Sun, once the organ of Tammany, has for two years been a strong Republican party paper. Another paper which should be started at the Chicago Press, and we believe over-skeptical it is well to pause and consider the particular merits and interests of various papers.

THE DRAMA AS A SOCIAL FORCE.

One of the most forceful speakers who has addressed a Wellesley audience in the College Lecture course this year came in the person of Mrs. Beatrice Forbes Robertson Hale, Friday evening.

Mrs. Hale, in introducing her Miss Bennett voiced the question that had arisen in more than one mind as to how she was going to show the drama to be a social force. Mrs. Hale, however, clearly illustrated the connection between the theater and religion and ethics, by tracing the development of the drama from its origin in Greek tragedies. She showed how in almost every stage it was either a religious set, or contained much that was purely ethical. The earliest expression of man's instinct to portray his emotions in definite meaningful action, were so sacred that women, there of low position socially, were not permitted to see them. In early Hindu drama there are found not only religious and ethical elements but the idealistic conceptions of the people. Rome and Italy contributed, not an onward step in dramatic progress, but a new place, the "Punch and Judy," or "Marionette" show, which lived many centuries, and is only now being terminated by a new show, the movies. From the twelfth to the fourteenth century in England the drama existed only in the form of morality and miracle plays.

In the meantime the theatre became no longer religious but secular, yet intensely universal and profoundly ethical. From the time of Shakespeare, in whose plays we find the truth of ethical foundation, the native drama of England (the only kind Miss Hale said which is really vital) has had a checkered history. The Puritan Reformation dealt it a heavy blow which resulted, for a time, in the closing of the theatres, and later, indirectly, in the introduction of various foreign races. Yet until the end of the nineteenth century did the drama begin to find itself as an instrument for social good. Then came the plays of Ibsen, from Norway, which began a revolutionary movement in dramatic writing. Instead of melodramas, and plays of manners of Goldsmith and others, there came to the stage a realistic drama setting forth social problems in such works as "The Enemy of the People" and the "Doll's House." The drama of today shows an advance of artistic and intellectual expression that promises well for the future. Among the writers who are doing the most for the social power of the theatre, Mrs. Hale mentioned Shaw, the satirical, Granville Barker and Galsworthy, the realistic; and Munk, Publishers, Rostand, Jerome and Kennedy the idealists.

In closing Mrs. Hale emphasized the fact that the movies had come to stay, and it was our task to educate the public taste and refine it. She realized its great possibilities for good not only in itself but for the fact that it would divert the lower class productions from the stage, thus allowing greater chance to produce the most valuable plays for public good. "The great public," she said, "will not flock to serious plays unless they are so great and so simple that all people will go to see them."

BEFORE HEARING MISS MATTHEWSON.

Miss Edith Wynne Matthewson will read May 18th scenes from Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, and probably some Shakespearean Sonnets. It would add greatly to the artistic appreciation and the knowledge and love of Shakespeare if all students who are to hear Miss Matthewson read would take the time to carefully re-read the play, so as to become how familiar the theme and text. That is the only way to become fully aware of the exquisite interpretation of the reader and to acquire an appreciation of her speech and artistic standards. In this country there is no reader in poetic feeling and beautiful response of voice and body better fitted to interpret Twelfth Night.

THE COURAGEOUS READER.

On Friday, May 11, at 8 o'clock Madame Dupriez, wife of Professor Leon Dupriez of the University of Louvain, will give a free lecture telling of her escape from Belgium upon the occupation by the German army. A collection will be taken up between the lecture and the steeplechase views.

CHOSE HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS.

If you wonder what to adopt as a profession after graduation; if you have Yankee thrift; if you have physical strength; if you like and have a sympathetic understanding of people, become a Household Economist. According to Miss Turner, formerly head of Fiske and now of the New England Kitchen, who spoke at three o'clock, on Wednesday, April 2, if you have these qualities you are fitted to stand the monotony of its right ten hour day, its drudgery surroundings, and to delight in its dramatic moments.

An opening for college girls lies in the public and commercial lunch rooms, in college dormitories and in the boarding house. Before asking us what impression her pictures of the household duties had made upon us, Miss Turner spoke enthusiastically of the work of Miss Green in one of the poorer districts of Boston, giving us an idea of the philanthropic side of this new science, Household Economics.

On Sunday morning Dr. Johnston-Ross set before us very definitely the things that are expected of college women in these troublous heart-finding times. He warned us against the vices of cruelty and brutality, and exalted the idea of the ministering, courageous, suffering woman. The first duty of the academic woman, he said, was to think clearly and to apply Christian thinking to life more. In this way she can help to further the cause of liberty, the ideal for which America stands. The college woman has a great opportunity, he believes, to help the development of spiritual freedom, and to reconstruct the faith in God which many people will lose on account of the war. Loss of faith for such a reason, Dr. Ross said, was due to the inadequate conception of the individuality of God. M. W. C., 1919.

ARMENIAN RELIEF WORK.

Miss Morley from the girls' school in Marasoum and Mrs. Kate from Tarsus spoke at the Agora House on Sunday afternoon, May 6, upon the departure of the Armenians and the acute need for relief work. The terrible persecutions have been going on for two years, and now there are over two and a half million people in need. We can only vaguely realize the terrible conditions which exist, for these exiles have no one to help them but the American missionaries. When we realize that ten cents a day will save some woman's or child's life, and twenty-four dollars will keep law alive for a year, it seems as though we might make another effort to assist. It is not such things as clothing, shoes or bedding that are asked for, it is food, perhaps but a meal every other day, just something to keep the body alive. Can we not help in saving thousands of innocent people from starvation? All contributions should be sent to Charles R. Crane, Treasurer, 50 Fifth Avenue, New York. Any one desiring further information regarding the relief work may secure it by applying to the American Committee for Armenians and Syrian Relief, Madison Avenue, New York.

PERMANENT PEACE.

A circle has been formed for the study of Permanent Peace with the following outline as a guide:

1. What steps have already been taken towards securing permanent peace? With what results?
2. What obstacles must be overcome if permanent peace is to be secured?
3. What plans have been proposed for securing such peace?
4. Would any of these plans, or any combination of them, succeed in removing the obstacles?
5. What are the dangers of permanent peace?
6. What new evils would be created?
7. Is there any way of obviating these dangers?
8. What would be the benefits of permanent peace? Would these benefits be great enough to warrant facing its dangers?
9. If so, what are the first steps toward this end that should be taken by national governments and (b) by individual citizens?
10. If not, what can be done to ameliorate the existing situation?

Members of the college above Freshman rank can enroll for membership by leaving their names in a box for that purpose posted on the war bulletin board since it is hoped that one meeting may be held this year immediate enrollment is desirable.

Anyone who is acquainted with valuable books or articles on the subject is urgently requested to drop the titles or other information about them in the same box.

The first speaker called upon after dinner, Miss Elizabeth Kemper Adams, formerly Associate Professor of Philosophy and Education in Smith College, and now an officer of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union in Boston, made a characteristically brilliant speech on "The Student, a Neglected Asset," the tenor of which was an appeal for the wider participation... 1918'S BIG GUNS AFLOAT.

1918, her ranks recruited to full wartime strength, her "big guns" afloat in a newly patented Dicht-bout and manned by fetchingly feminine "middies," bombarded Step Singing, Monday evening with a rapid fire of song hits. Awaiting the signal of the bugle for action, the "middies" aimed their musical missiles first at their new commanders, "Hickie" Lange and "Dot" Stern, and finally at the veteran Seniors whose reception of the bombardment was indicated by their cheer, "We wish all submarines and their crews were like that!"

Following the response from 1917, the Freshmen were given the opportunity to serenade their big sisters and came forward with a series of clever songs prophetic of 1918's success next year.

In the ball which followed, the Freshmen proved that they had been no more dauted by a rainy May Day than the Juniors, for Charlotte Hassett presented Dorothy Spellsew with the belated May basket of corn flowers and white sweet peas. Small bouquets of the same flowers were also given each Senior.

Special permission had been obtained to extend the time for Step Singing, so that an opportunity was offered for still another of the customary May Day events—the first presentation of the Sophomore Crew song. 1919's new song, as led by Susan Lowell, was received with much enthusiasm.

The American flags and military suits which were the characteristic features of '18's serenade, made even more significant the singing of the Star Spangled Banner, which seems to be the natural and fitting close for Step Singing this spring.

On April 23 a cablegram announced to her family the death of Miss Ruth Holton in Moscow, Russia, from typhoid fever, contracted during her work as a member of the Red Cross relief work for Polish refugees in Russia.

Miss Holton graduated from Radcliffe College in 1911, received the degree of M. A. at Radcliffe in 1912 and after one more year of graduate study at Radcliffe passed the two years of 1913-1915 in the Botany School at Cambridge (England) University, holding the Alice Freeman Palmer Fellowship for 1914-15. In June 1915 a three years fellowship from Newnham College was awarded to Miss Holton—the first time the honor has fallen to an American— but entrance upon the duties of the fellowship was postponed on account of the war.

Field work in botany in the Hebrides and Scottish Highlands, planned by Miss Holton for 1914-15, was interfered with by the war so that she spent most of her year in the study of the collection of fossil plants sent to the Botany School at Cambridge by the Geological Survey in India. The results are appearing in articles in The New Phytologist and Records of the Geological Survey of India. During the year 1915-16 Miss Holton sent copies of two articles to the Wellesley Committee on Graduate Instruction: "Outlines of Some Indian Conifers, Botanical Gazette, Vol. LXX, No. 3, September, 1915, and A Jurassic Wood from Scotland, The New Phytologist, Vol. XIV, Nos. 6 and 7, June, July 1915.

The following expression of appreciation has been sent to Dr. and Mrs. Holton:

The Faculty of Wellesley College desire to express to the family of Ruth Holton, Alice Freeman Palmer Fellow for the year 1914-15, their sympathy in her loss, and their appreciation of her scholarly research work and her helpful contribution to relief work during the war.

RESOLUTIONS.
The New York Wellesley Club has received the news of the death of Mrs. Durant with deep sorrow and regret. But though we feel the loss to our college body, we rejoice for her that she has passed to that higher life for which her consecrated services have been a life time of preparation.

And whereas, throughout a long and useful life time, she has consecrated herself to the broadening and developing of the lives and minds of women, and whereas her personal influence upon the individual students for many years has remained a sweet and precious memory, the New York Wellesley Club wishes to express its deep bereavement and sorrow.

Therefore be it resolved that a copy of this resolution be spread on the records of the Club and a copy sent to the President of the College.

Miss Ellen F. Pendleton.

President of Wellesley College.

Dear Miss Pendleton:

It is with feelings of profound sorrow that we have learned of the recent death of Mrs. Durant. Probably no college was ever privileged to have so long and so intimate an association with its founder, and no founder ever gave herself, mind, body and estate, so intently to the interests of her college. Therefore great as the loss is, we cannot but feel thankful for her memory and for the long years that she has been spared to us.

Especially to us older alumnae, the frequent meetings with Mrs. Durant in the grounds or corridors are so inseparably connected with Wellesley that we cannot think of them apart, and to us her presence will still remain there. May we through you express to the College our deepest sympathy in the loss that has come to us all.

Very faithfully yours,

Euna C. Spaulding.

Secretary.

For the Washington Wellesley Club.

To the Class of '82, the passing of Mrs. Durant has meant the loss of our beloved Honorary Member. The approach of our thirty-fifth anniversary reunion brings vividly to mind her enthusiastic participation in our former celebrations. At the twenty-fifth she entertained us in her house at a delightful luncheon, and when the repast was ended, begged us to remain through the afternoon and have our reminiscences with her. In her motherly presence we opened our hearts with unusual freedom and our intercourse was peculiarly intimate. She always alluded proudly to "our class," and through the years of her normal strength kept informed of the work and whereabouts of each member, calling all by our Christian names.

It rejoices us to believe that through all these thirty-five years, the class bond was to her, as to us, a vital and inspiring relation.

WELLESLEY—C. S. A. FELLOWSHIP.
The Wellesley College Alumnae Association joins with the College Settlements Association in offering for 1917-18 a fellowship of $400 to a Wellesley College Alumna. This fellowship may almost be called an "experiment in social education" for it is offered in the belief that for many students a year of post-graduate work that combines the academic type of preparation with immediate application to dealing with the problems that a settlement neighborhood offers, gives an experience of rare value.

Candidates for the fellowship must present satisfactory evidence of good health and a special fitness for social work.

The plan includes residence for nine months in either the New York or Boston College Settlement where board is $60 a week. The practical work is done either wholly at the settlement under the direction of the head worker or part of it may be taken outside, if the fellow is interested in some special phase of community life.

The academic work will be arranged to best supplement the courses the student has already taken and may be, in New York, at the School of Philosophy or at Columbia; in Boston, at the School for Social Workers, at Radcliffe or at Simmons.

The fellowship for this year has been held by Kate Van Eaton, Wellesley, 1916, who has lived at Denison House. Her work there has been with children and with foreign women; at Lincoln House, which exists in group work, she has had a girls' club under the supervision of the director of girls' work; and at Radcliffe she has taken a three hour course in "The Theory of Social Reform."

Further information or application blanks may be had from the chairman of the C. S. A. Fellowship Committee, Miss Helen F. Greene, 80 Pliencey Street, Boston, Mass.
