EX-PRESIDENT HAZARD PRESENTS THE ANTIPHONAL ORGAN.

Ex-president Hazard presented the new antiphonal organ to the college at the Antiphonal meeting, May 27. In giving it, she expressed the hope that it would serve as an inspiration through its beauty in solos, but also as an accompaniment to the hymns. Ex-President Hazard spoke of the presentation of the instrument, the gift of Wellesley’s alumnae to the college. It was in 1900 that the Wellesley College Choir was organized, and ever since then the chapel music has meant much to the members of the college. How much more it will mean with the new organ can hardly be estimated.

THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH.

Unlike most last meetings of the season, the final Student Government meeting on Wednesday, May 22, did more than thank and say good-bye. The students of Wellesley had come together chiefly to consider the new constitution proposed and formulated for the Association by Elleanor Blair and her committee composed of President Pendleton, Miss Avery, Miss Gambling, Mrs. Holder, Mr. Sheffield, Mr. Cottrell, Dorothy Rhodes, Katherine Timberman, Joella Vogelius, Helen Potter, Ruth Coleman, Josephine January and Katherine Taylor. To have the beaver by no means the only business brought up before the meeting, but it was understood to be the main feature.

Events proceeded as usual, the reading of the minutes being followed by some interesting reports which Dorothy Rhode collection of John Peter, representative of the Village Seniors, commenced the new method of assigning one faculty advisor to girls in the same district, and then threw the opportunity at the dwellers in the village of Vassar and Freshman, for their helpful cooperation during the past year. Katharine Timberman, as chairman of the Executive Board, opened with the report that the faculty had had before it a very much smaller number of special cases of discipline than had been presented last year. As Fire Captain, Janet Doe told us of the few minor changes that have been made in the routine of meetings to have more fire drills in the Barn this coming year. Florence West, Chairman of the Advisory Board, reported the installation of a card catalogue system, and an other innovation in the attendance of members of this committee of meetings of the Village Improvement Association, as a means of keeping the college and village more closely united. The final report by Julia Broomack, was most optimistic in its account of the past work of the Advertising Committee in efficiently supplying posters to meet the requests of the various college organizations, and in her hopes for still greater efficiency in the coming year.

There followed then the election of a Fire Chief for the year of the coming season which was made clear, the meeting voiced its approval of a change in one of the rules in the Gray Book, which now reads that students of Wellesley College may stay in the Copley Plaza until 11:30 P. M. Still greater enthusiasm was expressed when Marjorie Sticken was announced elected.

The attention of the meeting next centered itself on the new constitution for Student Government, modelled after the constitution of the United States, and so planned that its execution will indubitably prove a means of banishing much of the present lamented red tape. A short review followed the reading, in which the details of the constitution were made clear, the association voted unanimously in favor of the plan. The new constitution does not become effective until passed upon by the Academic Council and the Board of Trustees, and this is that it will meet with no serious opposition.

Further business to come before the meeting consisted in a plea by Flora Lindsay for members of the Collegiate Periodical League, which contains the society of students, alumni, and magazines, and from Helen Biske a few words relevant to Red Cross knitting, Liberty Loan Bonds, and further War Relief work, as (Concluded on page 3, column 1)

The New—A Medium

Two-thirds of the subscriptions of The Wellesley College News come from the Alumnae! The undersigned believe that this is a vital interest which the alumnae feel in what we are doing in college today. That we still have a common bond in the News with the Wellesley of other years would be reasonable, if there were no others, for the existence of our paper. The columns are always open to alumnae and we welcome their suggestions. The “Free Press,” as is natural, most often receive contributions. It is difficult to measure the benefit to be derived from a subject, especially when it is one that interests a small group of students on a vital subject at an appropriate time. Articles, particularly when contributed by alumnae whose work since college has led them to write with authority, are of practical value. Such a feature was one in Hand in Hand in History in the News. “The Second Line of Defence—A Call to Arms” begins for a renewed interest in behalf of the child, at this time when so much depends upon the future of our nation. The Wellesley College News has achieved a new success when it has the good fortune to print articles of so definite a value as the one contributed this week by Miss Appleget.

Current Events at Chapel.
The keen interest displayed at chapel the day Mr. Sears spoke to us about the Liberty Loan, would indicate that our morning services need not be as monotonous as we sometimes feel they are.

That it was a distinct innovation to have a subject of outside interest presented in such a vital manner was very important. For the majority it was a matter that called for earnest thought and discussion during the day. Those girls who had not been there, were heard to express their regret. Was not this a novel situation, when girls are hurried to have missed morning chapel?

“Go to chapel” weeks ever originated if such a feeling were prevalent? Indeed it would seem that we have here the clue to the problem of attendance at chapel. “Chapel Works,” in reality, are never successful, except as they, more or less, fill the chapel with girls who in an attempt to remedy the situation, have pledged themselves to go. Actually, a forced attendance accomplishes no good. Only in so far as we can make the services so vital that the girls will feel they cannot afford to miss them, will we accomplish anything real. In our Sunday morning services we have indicated that, at a time like this, to discuss abstract morals, religion, ethics, is to mark us as not to the great needs of the day, in the lives of the girls in daily living, in our morning chapel which shall set the spirit for the day, do any less? Our faculty have shown us in many ways their tremendous interest in the current of events. Each one has his own point of view from which he sees the problems of the day are seen. Can we afford to miss any interpretation of these great problems that present themselves to-day? Surely a short comment on the great world activities presented to us by the leader of morning chapel could not fail to be so vital that everyone would realize that in staying away she was missing something of distinct interest to every intelligent college girl.

The Second Line of Defense—A Call to Arms

The publication in the Wellesley College News of the College has been exempted from school efficiency and patriotic service might well have a vital connection with a point made by Miss Simpson, reported on the same page, the woman’s first job is to be sure that the job nearest her is being done a little better than it has been done in the past.

Over and beyond the “daily grind” there is defensive warfare to be waged, for the work of years is in danger of being thoughtlessly destroyed, and for our ideas of education set aside as a war measure. We must rally to this, the Second Line of Defense, on whose strength more than upon the army and navy, depends the future of our country, for this is the line that protects the children. The facts brought out in this note, and reminds us that “successful war now demands an intensification rather than a disjointing of normal social processes.”

The Emperor of Japan, at the time of the Russian-Japanese War, refused to allow the drafting of any school teacher or the use of any school building for military purposes. “We must not sacrifice the education of our children during the stress of war,” he said, “for we shall need wiser citizens in the future as we have today.”

England at the present time is wishing she had not used her children so recklessly. Cecil Leeson, in “The Child and the War,” tells a story which should save us from the mistakes made by England during the war. England rushed her children into industry in an effort to increase industrial output. Enormous wages were paid to children, restrictions on working hours in certain industries, were suspended, schools were kept to shift for themselves, and most of the child welfare work abandoned. Even children, it was urged, should do their bit. The Committee on the Health of Munition Workers reported that in May, 1916, 1,535 children were exempted from school, and go to work, that in 1915 probably 45,000 children between twelve and fifteen, in excess of the usual number, and from 150,000 to 200,000 of eleven and twelve had left school without permission, to go to work.

The results were inevitable. The harmful effects on mind and body are just beginning to show, while Juvenile Delinquency among children of the ages exempted from school attendance, increased in 1916. Moreover it was found that long hours for women and girls materially decreased their output. England now has returned as far as possible to her normal program of enforced school hours, welfare work and restricted hours. France has published model work for girls under eighteen and discourage it for girls under twenty-one. The cost of these war expedients was too great.

Many have expressed doubts as to the danger of our falling into these errors, but indications show that we have headed that way. We must throw our energy into this Second Line of Defense so aptly named to keep the burden of the war from the shoulders of the children.

Dr. Josephine Baker, of the New York Bureau of Child Hygiene has said that fifteen of every hundred children in the secondary schools of New York suffer from mal-nutrition, the largest number of hungry children ever recorded by the New York Board of Health, and this in time of peace.

What will the percentage be in six months? Yet, as the children’s need grows more acute, it becomes increasingly difficult to plan the present school lunch system, planned to meet this need, but even to keep it intact.

Like France and England we are trying to increase our labor supply. From an acquaintance with many of the workers in the great packing industries, and by virtue of its position in the Yard, The University of Chicago Settlement has been informed of the influence of war time on labor conditions in the Stock Yards, doubtless a fair example for any great packing house in the world.

Almost without exception the men are working overtime, many fifteen hours a day. Of five hundred women working in one of the great packing houses, 80% were married and had young babies. Those working at the stock yards are usually young girls.

A very quoted brought out the fact that they were working the average, three and four hours out of the twenty-four. Their employer, a public spirited man, stopped the night work, but had no power to do so, there was no legislation to help him.

Despite a law to the contrary, however, munitions factories in Connecticut found ways to evade the law and employ women and girls as young as sixteen overtime, and night shifts. This was a year before the United States entered the war. Since then a bill has come before the New York legislature to exclude from the provisions of the labor law with regard to hours, women and minors over sixteen engaged in the manufacture of military supplies for the United States. In March, the New York State Industrial Commission exempted from the one-day-rest-in-seven law a well known Aeroplane company. Enthusiasts have suggested that all schools and monies of any kind be used to send the children to the farms. It has been also urged that the place of enlisted minors be filled by boys of fourteen. These are some of the signs that we are in a fair way to follow England’s bad example, and send this axle labor and school attendance legislation.

Is it less harmful for children to pass their childhood at hard work for long hours in time of war than in time of peace? Will the fact that their labor is needed help mothers who work to keep their babies alive? Although it has been found that children exempted from school and working on farms show a high percentage of retardation, we are contemplating widespread exemption if we can countenance indiscriminate shipping of children to work in factories. We should take into our consideration the increase of Juvenile Delinquency, we may be unprepared to handle the problems as well as in time of peace.

Of the twelve officers of the Juvenile Protective Association in Chicago, nine, were recently suspended because of their political activities, school lunches, free air camps, playgrounds, and other centers of social service which depended upon contributions have been the first to feel the effects. The government in July spent $200,000 in one month, and the demand for the work in schools has increased so greatly that the National Committee needs for increased effort to maintain a sane and normal social atmosphere. Volunteers are very scarce. The club work of this settlement, for example, has depended upon volunteer workers from the University of Chicago and different parts of the city. Now, however, with a greater need than ever for recreation of all sorts, the volunteers are drilling, or doing Red Cross work. I do not wish to detract from the value of such service, but surely there is as much need to look after the growing children as there is to prepare to tend the wounded.

Here lies the work, in any case, ready to be done. The Council of National Defense argues that no standards protecting women and children be lowered at present." England considered the lowering of the standards a temporary expedient, but as the war dragged on into an endurance test she found that she was wasting the future and not gaining by it in the present. "The nation is under solemn obligation to secure that the rising generation shall grow up strong and hardly both in body and character" this is the message from England, three years at war, to America, on the third year now.

In his message to Congress urging war, President Wilson said, "My own thought has not been drawn from its habitual and normal course by the unhappy events of the last two months, and I do not believe the thought of the nation has been altered by them."

The National Child Labor Committee has prepared a war time program for those who believe that the nation's ideals are still intact, that we stand for the same principles we have tried to uphold in the past, and who would serve in such a way that, while working for the greatest efficiency in war, are still building for constructive peace. They suggest three lines of effort.

1. Oppose all attempts to break down the school system in your vicinity either by relaxing enforcement of compulsory education laws or by cutting down school funds.
2. Oppose all attempts to break down labor laws in your own state.
3. Support as usual all local and national social agencies.

Remember it would take but a short time to destroy what it has taken years to build.

As there appeared to be no further business for consideration, Dorothy Spellacy proposed a rising vote of thanks to Dorothy Rhodes, Helen Potter, Eleanor Blair, and the Executive Board and Committee, and in so doing she expressed the sentiment of the entire college as well as those present who showed their hearty appreciation of the good work of the outgoing officers. Dorothy Rhodes closed the meeting with her expression of gratitude for the support of the organization.

PROPOSED CONSTITUTION FOR STUDENT GOVERNMENT.

Whereas, We the students of Wellesley College, desire to assume individually and collectively a responsibility for the conduct of Wellesley students in their college life, and thus to promote loyalty and self-control in the college community, we do hereby, in accordance with the "Agreement between the Faculty and the Students", organize ourselves into an association.

ARTICLE 1. NAME.

This Association shall be called the Wellesley Student-Government Association.

ARTICLE 2. PURPOSE.

The purpose of this Association shall be to control the conduct of all matters concerning the conduct of students in their college life that are not academic in nature, except such as are reserved to the judicial authority of the Faculty by the terms of the Agreement.

ARTICLE 3. MEMBERS.

All students of Wellesley College are subject to the operation of the constitution, and are therefore members of this Association.

ARTICLE 4. ORGANIZATION.

Section 1. Officers. The officers of this Association shall be a President, a Vice-President, a Secretary, a Treasurer. The President and the Vice-President shall be elected from the incoming Sophomore class; the Secretary and the Treasurer, from the incoming Junior class.

Section 2. House of Representatives. The legislation of this Association shall be initiated in a House of Representatives made up as follows:

1. The presidents of the college houses.
2. The village seniors (not including the Vice-President of this Association and the Vice-President of the Christian Association) elected by such manner as the Senate shall determine.
3. Ten seniors, twenty-five juniors, and twenty sophomores elected at large by their respective classes.
4. Fifteen freshmen, elected by freshmen upon a representative plan to be determined by the House.

Section 3. Senate. The executive work of this Association shall be centralized in a Senate made up as follows:

1. Faculty and administrative members—
a. The President of the College or her deputy.
b. Four members of the faculty and administration elected by the Academic Council.
2. Student members—
a. The President of the Association (presiding).
b. The Vice-President of the Association.
c. The Secretary.
d. The Treasurer.
e. One Sophomore member (acting as recording secretary).
f. One Freshman member (acting as clerk).

LIBERTY BONDS FOR SALE!

Mr. Paul Sachs, a lecturer in the Art Department, spoke in morning chapel on Wednesday, May 23, upon the subject of buying Liberty Bonds. He emphasized the fact that by lending money to the government one could best serve her country at present. Billions have to be raised, and it is up to the people of the country to show their support and loyalty by denying themselves luxuries and by subscribing to the Liberty Bonds. These bonds are a safe investment, yielding 3 1/2% at present; and, when the government is forced to pay higher interest, can be exchanged for bonds paying the increased amount. The bonds can be bought back by the government after fifteen years, but must be bought by the government after thirty years. The Liberty bonds can be bought at any bank or post-office for fifty dollars and up. At the time of application for a bond, 25% must be paid; on June 28, 1918; July 20, 29%; August 15, 30%; and on August 30, 35%. The local banks have offered a system by which a bond can be bought through them by paying a fifth of the value of the bond each week, so that the bond is paid for within a year. For this service, the banks charge 3 1/2% interest on the money forwarded, but allow the purchaser 3 1/2% on the amount paid.

That every one who can possibly afford it should buy a Liberty bond is a fact not to be questioned. It is for America to wake-up and back the Administration in carrying on this people's war. Just row the demand is for money. Those who can should buy these bonds; those who cannot should use their power and persuasive ability in influencing others to buy them. Every girl has an opportunity to serve her country this summer by turning bond-saleswoman.

The engagement of Marion C. Carrick, 1918, to Albert G. Curry, Allegheny, 1916, and Boston University School of Theology, 1919, was announced at a tea given by Miss Lindsay at Zeta Alpha on Thursday, May 24.

NO MORE VISITING JUNIORS AND SENIORS.

After a very careful and thoughtful consideration of the question, the Christian Association Board has decided not to appoint a Village Committee, that is visiting Juniors and Seniors, this year. Miss Pendleton, Miss Tafts, several other members of the faculty, heads of houses, and many students have felt that this committee is unnecessary. This year there will be four more Village Seniors than usual; consequently each district will include only 30 or 40 girls, a number with which one senior can easily keep in personal touch. It is to be understood that this plan of doing without Visiting Juniors and Seniors is only an experiment for this year and does not necessarily continue in following years. If, during the year, it is found that there is a need for girls to help the Village Seniors in their districts a committee will be appointed. The only way to ascertain the true value of this committee is to try the experiment. If the Board next year feels that Visiting Juniors and Seniors are necessary and decides to appoint them, the whole system will be all the stronger because of this test. The Board wishes to thank all those girls who showed their interest and enthusiasm by signing up, and hopes that it may use them in some other part of the Christian Association work.

Proposed Constitution for Student Government.

Section 4. A body of responsible advice the Association shall have a Cabinet composed of the heads of the major college organizations, viz:—

1. The President of the Student Government (Secretary of the Senate).
2. The Vice-President of the Student Government Association.
3. The President of the Barnswallow.
4. The President of the Athletic Association.
5. The President of the Christian Association.
6. The Fire Chief.
7. The Editor-in-Chief of the College News.
8. The President of the Scholar class.
9. The President of the Junior class.
10. The President of the Sophomore class.
11. The President of the Freshman class.

ARTICLE 5. TOWERS AND DUTIES.

Section 1. Of the Officers.
1. The President shall call together and preside over all meetings of the Senate and the Cabinet. She shall carry to either the Senate or the House of Representatives, as the case demands, the results of Cabinet conferences, and may address the Senate or the House.
2. The Vice-President shall assume the duties of the President in the absence or at the request of the President, and shall act as Executive officer for undergraduates in the village.
3. The Secretary shall keep a list of the members of the Association, she shall attend to its correspondence, post notices of its elections and mass meetings, and shall publish promptly the action of the Senate on legislation referred to it by the House. She shall give the librarian of the college for the “Historical Collection,” or before Commencement Day of each year, a complete collection of programs, and all public meetings of the organization, and any other historical material of interest.
4. The Treasurer shall have charge of the finances of the Association, disbursement being made subject to the approval of the President. At the close of the fiscal year she shall submit them with vouchers, to an experienced auditor appointed by the Student Government Association, and College Administration.

Section 2. Of the House of Representatives.
1. The House of Representatives shall elect its speaker, its secretary, and such other officers and committe as it deems necessary.
2. The committee work of the House shall be transacted by committees not restricted in their membership to the members of the House.
3. The House shall legislate on all matters within the jurisdiction of the Association. Its legislation shall be subject to the approval of the Senate.

Section 3. Of the Senate.
1. The Senate shall deal with all matters of discipline, except matters of academic routine and such cases as are dealt with by the President of the College acting alone.
2. The Senate shall regulate in general all undergraduate activities not academic in nature, except such matters as by the faculty-student agreement are reserved to the college authorities. The activities under Senate regulation shall include the student publications, athletic events, and in general all student entertainments.
3. The student members of the Senate shall carry on such routine work of regulation as the Senate may commit to their charge.
4. The Senate shall, at the fall of each session, transact by committees not restricted in their membership to the members of the Senate.
5. The Senate shall decide the precise time and manner of holding elections.
6. The Senate shall exercise a veto power over all legislation passed by the House of Representatives.
7. Any four of the faculty members of the Senate may exercise conjointly a suspensory veto over the Senate’s action by referring it to the Academic Council for decision.

Section 4. Of the Cabinet.
The Cabinet shall meet at least once a month for conference on college problems and interest, and shall through its chairman offer advice to the Senate and the House of Representatives as occasions arise.

ARTICLE 6. REFERENDUM.

Section 1. The Senate’s action upon any measure passed by the House shall take effect after the lapse of two weeks from its time of publication, during which period the measure is subject to the demand of a referendum vote upon it by the student body. If not sustained by such a referendum, it shall be returned to the Senate for reconsideration.

Section 2. A referendum vote of the student body may be had on a petition signed by at least twenty-five per centum of the students of each class or on a written request of five members of the Senate filed with the Clerk of the Senate. All referenda blanks shall be obtained from the Clerk of the Senate and all signatures shall be counted, checked and certified by the Clerk.

Section 3. A Senate referendum shall be defeated by a referendum vote of the student body shall not be brought up more than once thereafter within the same college year.

ARTICLE 7. ELECTIONS.

Section 1. Meetings of the whole Association for purposes of discussion may be called by the President at any time, or by a written request signed by twenty-five members of each class and filed with the Secretary of the Association.

b. Every member of the College is expected to call the attention of the Senate to such failure in the enforcement of the Association’s rules as should (Concluded on page 8, column 3).
On Sunday afternoon, May 6th, a service was held in Houghton Memorial Chapel in memory of Amelia Avery Hall who was for many years the senior teacher at Walnut Hill School. Miss Hall was a member of the class of 1884 of Wellesley College. From the time she entered college throughout her life, she exerted a strong influence in upholding the highest ideals of Wellesley life and thought. Those who knew her will never forget her brilliant character and the charm of her winning personality.

The service on May 6th was an expression of joy and gratitude by her friends that the opportunity was given them to know such a life and to experience the inspiration of her influence. The pupils and teachers of Walnut Hill School occupied the front seats in the Chapel, while former members of the school at present students in Wellesley filled the choir stalls. Members of Miss Hall's class of 1884, with guests from the school, associates of college days, a large number of friends from the vicinity, filled the main body of the Chapel. Following a beautiful prelude by Professor Macdougall and the singing of the opening hymn, "Love Divine" all the exulting, the Reverend Bower Eddy, the principal speaker of the afternoon, read from the scriptures and offered prayer.

Miss Bigelow of the Walnut Hill School spoke of the friendship between Miss Hall and Miss Conant and Miss Bigelow, the principals of the Walnut Hill School, dating from the year in which the three entered Wellesley as members of the same class. She spoke of Miss Hall's fine training of character, her remarkable good sense and judgment as seen in college days. She also referred to the great personal charm which always attracted both old and young to Miss Hall, her beautiful expressive eyes, her merry laugh, eager, alert look and manner, and above all her quick comprehension and sympathetic understanding of people. Mentioning briefly the various positions in which Miss Hall taught after leaving college, Miss Bigelow indicated some notations that Miss Hall, hallmark of all Miss Hall character. Her life was based on the Christian ideals and while she did not talk much about religion, her daily life was eloquent in its patience, selflessness, faith and love. Among the striking traits of Miss Hall is her ability to grasp at first her power of clear, keen and logical thinking. As a result she sought and found the exact truth about events and principles. The love of truth was most characteristic of her. Another striking trait was her belief in the supreme importance of moderation and the proper balance and proportion of emotion and action. Her own life was a marked example of a life so directed. Her strength of character enabled her to let fall the greatest of situations and ability to put herself in the author's place made our books live for us. With all our love and respect, there was no sense of hero worship. Her own attitude of comradeship and friendship disturbed this at once. She gave friendship with the girls a charming sense of equality which was unique. Friendship with Miss Hall is now a precious memory. It was not merely friendship during the years at school. She followed the girls with words of counsel and encouragement into their homes or wherever they chose to take in the world.

Following Mrs. Fellows' remarks Mrs. George S. Palmer of New London sang very beautifully Handel's "Come Unto Him" and after Mr. Eddy's address, Miss Hall sang "For all thy saints who from their labors rest," the service closed with the benediction.

The following selections from Mr. Eddy's address give in a general way an impression of his principal thoughts.

"In the peace and quiet of a memorial service like this we are finding sure foundations for spiritual satisfaction." Not all of us in the room are conscious of the fundamental nature of the arguments and reasons in our thought for the salvation and protection of the country, the great spirit of an all-powerful God, the army of citizens, the army of disarmed men and the army of nations, in the midst of the harried and belated preparations of our country for this great conflict, we can gather together in a chapel like this and yet not sense in our hearts, and minds, and souls, and spirits, for reality, for we find here the deepest things that like can touch. The worth of character, the satisfaction of spiritual service, the reality of the revealed, the true and the good are the deepest things in the experience of each one who recalls Miss Hall this afternoon in affection and in high adoration. The contrast of her life with the present national hour need hardly be pointed out. The lives in years of peace, in the years of the decade of decades of peace as against the wailer and massacre of all the priceless lives demanded by this war. The victories of her life were those of character, even of the sick-room, rather than of the trench and battlefield. There is no reward of iron cross or ribbon of honor or medal in this world greater, or more far beyond any symbols or insignia to express that abide in your heart and in mine. In these greater things than those spread upon the front pages of our newspapers from day to day, we find a deep-seated satisfaction and truth and service.

Here this afternoon I feel that in the details and the backgrounds of her life Miss Hall represents not only the best this country has been able to pour into one span of years; she represents the very best of class, rare spirituality and without exception. This is a good deal to claim. We claim it not for the individual, but for all American womanhood, born as she was born, reared as she was reared, educated as she was educated; and if these things are true, let us discover a part of the obligation they leave upon every life thus developed. Behind Miss Hall's back are the experiences of the Colonial struggle. They were men of distinction in early Colonial days. More than the individuals do we find in the spirit of the times, as we pass from the Colonial era to the stirring center of the century in which our own life came into the world. In her own family she represents the best that American womanhood can do. This is a strange cause of the simplicity and many limitations of thrift and economy involved in the struggle for education in the simple community life of our best American towns. I am not sure but that when the public school is first set up it was the youngest of six children does not carry with it the compensation of discipline. This life received its education in the public school system, the worth of which we have lost because we ourselves are a part of it, and yet when the school system is the highest and finest training school for character that the whole world has ever produced. Her graduation from Wellesley College was a period when the struggle for character and the emphasis on ideals was perhaps greater than at any other period in American life. We are too hurried now to grasp the essential values of these earlier days of the education of women in colleges like Wellesley in its first years. It is the best of our American College education that is carried on by those who come forth from these halls accept it as their almost unconscious responsibility to employ this training in the training of others. It was not a mode of choice, it was a fundamental character that Miss Hall brought out of its own being in the world. It is a great privilege in my younger years to remember Miss Hall as she taught in the high school at Leavenworth. Leavenworth is one of the older communities of the West. It is still far removed from the cultivated background of New England which was so natural to her. I can remember well the lessons and the manner in which she taught. I can remember well the love that she showed for those who came to her from the homes of somewhat apart not only from the homes from which many students came, but also from the spirit of many of our instructors.

I am thinking this afternoon that we are too near a life like this, sharing too intimately in the same environment, too conscious of the same background to appreciate the rareness of this life in contrast with the womanhood of the rest of the world.

Miss Hall stands forth this afternoon in our thoughts and hearts as one who has been intimately near her as she does in vital contrast to those at a greater distance. In no other country could she have touched lives like these; in no other country could she have been free to leave behind her a record of the things that she does, the good things that she does not do. This is the greater sadness, the greater sorrow, the greater pity, the greater absorption of our sorrow and our reverence.
The presence of God in this life. You and I have no thought of incompleteness in Miss Hall's life. Beginning with these advantages, it came to its end after months of suffering in which her sick-room radiated cheer and courage. There was little consciousness of loss. It was a life so perfectly lived that it could yield its strength back to the Giver without repining and without complaint at its abrupt end. In saying these words I am touching upon a fundamental philosophy. Every thought of our satisfaction in her means that her life was an adequate investment.

Your satisfaction and mine are involved in every thought of affection because this life fully proved the deepest revelation of character that Christ has given to us. God has given nothing better to our world than lives like this, fully rounded, complete, poured out in every breath in the service of others. I should not be true to her spirit in closing, however, if I did not lay upon the lives of those students here the essential challenge that must come from her in every memory. Not by seeking to attain ends of one's own selfish choosing, but rather by losing one's self in the task of education, in daily service, in friendship; not by vanity and self-seeking shall character find its truest fruition, but by self-abnegation and a rich, perfected service shall you and I find words to praise her and experience for our guidance. God has not revealed Himself in vain in a lead like this, in an hour like this, when you and I in our hearts can give greater praise to her than to lives lived in the full blaze of notoriety or in greater wealth of prominence. You and I have the right to sit in judgment upon a life like this and in the background of our thoughts find this life a satisfaction where other lives are inconclusive. We yield our own high allegiance to its ideals and its paths of service. Through all the years of your life you will never find anything better to admire than such service and such selflessness. The lesson of such a life will go with us from this place into many a quiet corner, far removed from the greater deeds which seem to mar the pages of history; but you and I, in that place will find ourselves near to the heart of God, as we remember there her character and her service of Christ, the Master of us all?"

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO ALUMNAE!

In printing this week, the class percentages of those alumnae who have paid dues to the Alumnae Association, attention is called to several facts:

1. That, by vote of the Alumnae, Commencement and Tree Day notices are sent to those only who have paid the annual dues of one dollar, except being made in the case of reunion classes, to whose unpaid members these notices are sent by courtesy of the Association.

2. That the fiscal year, as indicated on your due bill, runs from September to September, which means that dues paid last June were for the current year—September 1915 to September 1916—unless otherwise specified. If you receive a due bill this year, it means that your dues for September 1915 to September 1916 are unpaid.

3. That out of about 3,500 alumnae, some 2,200 have not yet paid this year's dues, although three notices have been sent. It is possible that some of these notices have gone astray because of the lack of correct addresses. The Alumnae Office asks your prompt support of the activities of the Association of which you are a member.

In case you have occasion to think that a mistake has been made in your account, the office will gladly look up and correct any error.

Mary B. Jenkins, Alumnae General Secretary.
