THE BIG FOUR SPEAK AT CHAPEL.

President Woolley of Mount Holyoke, President McCracken of Vassar and President Nelson of Smith spoke in the chapel on Sunday evening, October 12.

PRESIDENT McCracken SPEAKS ON THE COLLEGE EQUATION.

Can you factor the college equation? Is there a way of factoring the equation? X, said President McCracken, represents the general environment, that is, the curriculum, the method of study, the type of campus. Y, is the group factor. X+Y is comprised of the social atmosphere, social traditions, student government, group honor and student social. The third factor is Z, the individual. Although the college depends to a great extent upon X, the college is too little designed for the individuals. The duty of each college is to give due consideration to X and Y and Z and to study to achieve a balanced “roundness.”

PRESIDENT WOOLLEY SEES GRADUAL CHANGE IN WELLESLEY.

The most noticeable change of course, said Miss Woolley, is in the campus. The new buildings make Wellesley very different, although the lake and the oaks are ever the same. But there are less visible, tangible changes. It is a change that has come into all colleges. Now women are becoming truly conscious of the world’s need of their contribution. Theirs is a peculiar contribution that women women can make. It is for them to assume the great responsibility, for they possess the power to add to the achievement and to the thinking of the world.

WOMAN MUST BE FAITHFUL, IS PRESIDENT.

President Nelson compared the mood of the spring of his previous visit and the mood of the autumn. At the time of his former visit the world was filled with hope. People had thrown themselves into war work, and were battling steadily for a better society. Now the world is going through a depressing middle state. “We have lost the thrill of what we fought for,” said President Nelson. “We are getting bored, worn, careless. We are suffering from spiritual fatigue.” The men have had their political opportunity, but they have not seen things through. They rose to the task, but did not finish their task. They lacked faith. The woman citizen is now coming to the front. She does not bring expertise or experience, but support to the wavelike faith of men. Her work is to make men feel that anything can be achieved if their faith holds good.

President Pendleton introduced the speakers and afterwards thanked them in behalf of the college.

23 COMES TO CAMPUS.

The Freshman class paid its official call on the campus on Saturday evening, October tenth. Under the expert leadership of Carol Rhodes, the long white line wound from Homestead to Tower, up the Hill and through the quadrangle. The gay lanterns, red and white with a giddy green fringe, swayed in time to the marching song, Well-wel Wellesley. The Freshmen, in white middies and skirts with stiff Buster-brown collars, green ties and green water-shopped hats, sang happily, largely because of the leaders who danced with such infectious enthusiasm up and down the side lines. It was a most satisfactory performance, and deserves the congratulations of the college.

The songs, moreover, were numerous and spirited. It was at once unique and gratifying to hear a serenade in which there was no mention of the worries of mathematics. The words were friendly without being offensive—and a freshman class that is not offensive is a joy forever. The Sophomores were told not to worry, “in quite a hurry we will be knowing as much, if not a lot more than you.” And yet '29 was not over confident. “We will as the green things do before the snow grab of ‘22,” they said humbly. Taken in all the songs were well-written as well as well-sung.

One feature of the serenade was the mysterious barquequins who were performing the singing. She was a strange figure in yellow and green, swinging a wand and puffling on a couch. What she was doing or why she did it The News has been unable to discover.

MISS SNOWDEN SERVES WITH DISTINCTION IN ALLIED ARMIES.

Louise Hertogene Snowden, one of Wellesley’s faculty members who asked for leave of absence to do foreign service, has returned to the department of History, after eleven months abroad. Miss Snowden’s experiences were so interesting and so typical of many of those that the News sent a representative to learn some of them—and to be laughing told a few more which were, in the estimation of the person interviewed, too poignant or too personal to print.

Selected as a Y. M. C. A. worker, Miss Snowden was, because of her reputation as Ysian sent first to Cogne to work with the French. Foyer du Soldat thereby to cement France-American Relations as well as do regular Y work for the poilus. She then worked at Salins until February.

After a leave, passed at the beautiful Biarritz reception center, she applied for work with American forces and was sent to Dijon, headquarters of Marshal Foch, there to act as divisional field secretary for the women serving in the more than a dozen YWVVs. At Banne, in this region, there was situated one of the universities to which German soldiers were sent, and the work there was heavy. At the end of April, however, the university was about to close and Miss Snowden required more to keep her busy.

At Brussels, where she stopped on her way to Rotterdam, she was asked to install and take charge of the American Officers’ Club, “if it can’t run a hotel,” I protested, but I did. And I was a regular hotel manager. It surely was different. I never had a meal in peace! I had to think of all the people who gave me concerts about twelve or one.

ONLY A BUNCH OF FLOWERS.

The opinion holds very generally in college that society membership is considered as more important than it is in reality. That poor, tired specter, the society question, would become ported, it is said, were societies seen in the proper perspective. The college takes them for too seriously.

If the society ghost can thus be laid is a moot question. It is very true that society membership is rated of more importance than it need be or as normal or necessary. And this over-high rating is helped by some of the minor details of these systems—details that have been in evidence recently are the wearing of flowers by the students who are to be initiated.

It seems a small matter—only a bunch of roses. Yet the processions in drawing a line very effectively between those students who were so fortunate as to be eligible, and those who were not. The Junior who wears her corsage is marked at once—and almost equally so is the Junior who goes unadorned. It is very pleasant to wear flowers. Is that pleasure great enough to balance the harm done in over-emphasizing society membership?

A GUILTY CONSCIENCE.

It is to be regretted that the opinion expressed in the Free Press entitled “Saturday Night Dancing” has been so widely accepted throughout the college. The unsettled conditions of the college houses is the true cause of the delay in starting dormitory dancing. The evidence given to the report, however, is in itself evidence of the need for reform.

SATURDAY NIGHT DANCES.

I think that, by this time, all the girls in college have heard the answer to their question, “Why is there no dancing Saturday evenings in the dormitories for men?”

The answer has been that some members of the faculty wish a reformulation in the dancing of a few girls before the former privilege will be returned to us. I am confident that the girls and all girls recognizing the justice in the wish are trying to respect it, especially when it affects the pleasure of so many people besides themselves.

Especially is dancing during Saturday evenings desirable. Such girls as those who find it necessary to spend some of their time in dormitories and in training or else to have leaves at the height of enjoyment of the evening in order to be in bed by ten o’clock. When time is limited, there will be fewer than a few, and well be the pity. Will the House of Representatives understand the justice in this request?

II.

JAMES ON HABIT.

I admit that I’ve just read James chapter on Habit and so have very lately gleaned the advice to express in deed the effect that indulgence in the listening to music has on me (test my character become relaxed)!

I am sure that such an appalling possibility is not entirely responsible for the few who have fixed it which I write now. Mr. MacDougall and his assistants, the choir, are deriving constant thanks for the real pleasure and rest and inspiration which they give as artists in the Vesper services. Theirs is happily a good habit!

III.

REGISTRATION.

Why need registration be made such a bugbear, such a general nuisance? Most of us will agree that registration is desirable. I do not say that the college girls, for they have a strange system. They have no system of registration, and the students get on very well without it. Also they are allowed to take a eight-hour train out of Philadelphia without unchaperoning. If the millinery Wellesley may have that system too, but at present we must do what we can with our old system. Granted then that registration is desirable, can it not be simplified so that three-fourths of the Error Slip need not be filled with anything but penalties incurred through registration? Surely a slip will be none the less clear if it states that Miss Margaret Mason goes to Boston at 2:08 p.m. and returns at 1:30 p.m. on the 4th for no even in her wild moments could the Head of House think that Margaret Mason was going to Boston, Saturday, at the time stated above in the year 1923! Accuracy and a careful regard for details are very worth while things to cultivate but it is deplorable when they merge into pettiness and an over-conscientious regard for very minor details. I suppose the live-makers will say, “If we let students disregard the Honor System, then the system will become careless in regard to the whole affair.”

So to mend a small hole in the wall a man would build another wall twice as high and thick, close upon the first, before a few students might become too careless, but why need the many suffer for the few, when those few could be made to mend their extreme carelessness by a timely penalty? It would take too much time and space to enumerate all the petty rules that might be done away with to the delight and convenience of every student. Here are a few, the insistence upon Mass., 1919, A. M. and P. M. (except in cases where there may be opposition and insistence upon the fact that a student put her own slip in the box. Rule 4, page 10 of the Grey Book reads as follows: “In case a student discovers that she has neglected to register, she shall telephone at once the required information to the Head of House; if she telephones within an hour after her departure, no fine will be incurred.” I have in mind a recent case for doing exactly as this rule says. On questioning the house President, I found that the rule was to be interpreted to mean that a student must telephone from Wellesley within an hour after her departure; not Boston. If we must have a special house of the Medec and the Persians for registration, surely the Grey Book should be made so clear that there can be no possible chance for error through a misinterpretation of its meaning.

CONSUMER’S LEAGUE.

On October 8, 1920, Miss Mary Wiggis, Secretary of the Consumer’s League in Boston, spoke at the Christian Association Meeting. She first, very briefly sketched the development of the Consumer’s League from a small group of women in New York, who were interested in awakening kindness and consideration for the shop girls to a well organized League represented in sixteen states, which has as its main purpose the protection of the woman worker. The value of the Consumer’s League has been recognized in Europe and is gaining great headway there, especially at the present time, where there is such a crying need for help of all kinds.

The work of the Consumer’s League varies in different states, according to the most pressing needs of the vicinity. In Massachusetts, the League is, at present, laboring under great difficulties as the new Consolidated Labor Board has done away with the law requiring a Specialized Health Commissioner. This is a matter, which Miss Wiggis considers so serious as it takes a well informed Specialist to appreciate and remedy the poor conditions in some of the factories of Massachusetts. Aside from the interest in the woman workers and the strenuous efforts to pass the betterment laws, the League in Boston inspects bakeries and restaurants and publishes an Honor Roll of those which meet all sanitary conditions.

The work of the League work just now is to study to be intelligent women. They can do very little practical work at present but their great opportunities lie in the future. What they can do, if they will stop to realize it, is to give their support by joining the League with the small membership fee of twenty-five cents. The most important thing of all is for the college girl to apply herself and awaken her mind to labor conditions.

RESULTS OF THE SERVICE FUND CAMPAIGN.

Incomplete returns from the pledges show results as follows:

1920—299 pledges, with total of $8,288.85
1921—306 pledges, with total of $3,430.50
1922—318 pledges, with total of $3,457.20
Faculty ........................................ $1,556.45

Average for classes and houses will be published next week.

There is always opportunity to increase pledges. The difference between $370,000, the amount needed for carrying out the plans of the three committees effectively, and the total shown above speaks for itself.

In the coming drive Miss Newall expresses the hope that Wellesley will repeat its record of 100% membership and will plan to have the drive start in Wellesley a week earlier so that it may be held up as an example to other colleges.

"We are going to make the drive a success," concluded Miss Newall, "and we are not going to do it to say 'Well done', but that we may thank God that we have had an opportunity to help our sisters over there."

ECHOES FROM THE SERENADES.

1922 Songs.

There's a place that we know
Where the sweet freshman grow
In their green houses in the vil.
So in sweet freshman time
Down from campus we'll climb
Singing, Wellesley welcome joyfully.
And will sing at each step
That you've got a lot of pep—
Don't you hear all our voices chime?
Yes, we'll sing a song
While we're passing along.
With their lanterns awaking
Come the Sophomores a singing—
Every year just at Freshman time.

1923 Answers.

In a village of our own
With village Seniors on the throne,
And the Faculty to oversee
We Freshies are happy as we can be.
Then we elish the campus hill
To sing a song of our green vil.
We are the 1—2—3—4—5 men
You are the Sophs we sing to then
Who gave the vil—our home.
So h—o—o—o—y—w—e be
In a village of our own!

Tune: O Helen.

O well, O well, O Wellesley twenty-two
We will, we will, we will, as green things do.
Be, be, bo, bo, before your story stare
But we, we, we, to you, two-two.

"Where did you come from, Freshman dear?"
"Out of the nowhere into here."
"Where did you get that greenish hue
That differentiates us from you?"
"Oh, that's a shade I'm passing thru It's turning fast into Wellesley blue!"

They wander thru the kitchen door,
The fire-escapes they climb,
They ramble thru the corridors At almost any time.

Yet upstairs some fair lady waits
For Harry, Dick, or Tom
While he, poor dear, is searching still
For the front door of Pom.

Reward Othert: To first girl who applies some adjective other than "brazen" or "clever" to the Class of 1922.

THE BATHEN.

(Annual lament of the doomed)

Author's apology She is aware that statistics show this to be the 200,896,331 parody on our long suffering Haven.
Once upon a morning chilly; as I shivered, wretchedly-
Even as I had been doing since ten the night before;
While I still was gently snoring, suddenly there
As of thunderous Cyclops pouring; pouring past
My chamber door.
"Tis the judgment day" I muttered, "Tis the end foretold of yore"
Only this, and nothing more.

Yet, upon reflection sober, strikes me, tis the bleak October,
And a pulsating quiver shakes my soul unto its core.
From the distance comes a splashing, sounds of wailing and of crashing
Noise of foot-steps frantic dashing—up the frosty corridor—
Up I rose, and my resisting feet I shapped onto the floor—
Mercely this, and nothing more.

Presently my soul grew stronger; hesitating then
no longer,
Forth I issued from my chamber, Turkish towel
on arm I bound
Boldly plunged in frigid fluid, wildly set
and quaking eold;
Shivering, shaking, while my teeth, their chattering made my poor jaws sore.

Quoth I then, my very heart straining 'gainst compouserous "Is this training?"
Trashing this! perhaps it might be for the north pole to explore,
But for me, Ah—nevermore.

THE SOPHOMORE SERENADE.

Oh, the yellow lanterns swingin'!
And the Soph'more class is singin'.
In its gay old purple 'n' white;
And the Freshmen hearts are Thrillin'
As their wobbly notes they're Triillin'
In the days and dazily night;
And the twenty bunch are teasers
It's song "One", that is most pleasin'
To the grand old Senior Class;
And the Junior folks are cheerin' With a yell that's hard on hearin' Twenty's Embryonic Mass;
And the cold cruel sky is raining But old Wellesley ain't complainin' For it's got a Soph's more bunch That put the pep in pepper—
Twenty-two is sure some stepper When it comes to Serenadin' We've a bunch!

Miss Snowden Serves With Distinction in Allied Armies.

(Continued from page 1, column 3) o'clock at night when the officers coming in from the opera or the theatre paused in the living room to chat. No cats were procurable to aid in exterminating these rodents. Every cat had been devoured long since.

That statement led to a discussion of how Belgians had suffered for food and all sorts of supplies during the German occupation. "It was almost impossible to procure linen and household things. Any thought that the Belgians did not suffer is wrong!"

A picture full of pathos and yet rather funny was sketched here by Miss Snowden. She had been called down to Paris for a few days and returned to Brussels just in time for the ceremony of exhuming and granting absolution publicly to some war heroes shot by the Boche conquerors. With great excitement her servants informed her on Saturday night, after the shops had closed, that each flag in the line of march of the cortege was required to be hung with crepe. None could be procured and ingenuity led to the fastening of a pair of black silk stockings on the official flag staff of the American Officers' Club. An American major was far from satisfied not at the resulting effect, which was a quite correct one, but at the indignity of placing anything above the Stars and Stripes. The Belgians were content and Miss Snowden considered it their due.

Devastated St. Quentin, Rheims and Chateau Thierry were "fearful, I felt as if I were weeping inside. I was so filled with absolute horror and grief." The thought of tourists thronging to these battlefields in the typical American way seemed dreadful to Miss Snowden, but it is an assured fact that she herself will go back once more to the France and Belgium in which she fought her battles against dirt, discouragement, discomfort, and difficulties for Democracy.

COLEY THEATRE.

"The Irresistible Marmaduke," which is next week's play to be given by the Henry Jewett Players at the Copley Theatre, is a three-act comedy written by Ernest Denny, who gave to the stage "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy" and other successful comedies. This is a play quite new to American playwrights, and its production by these players is in line with Henry Jewett's established policy of giving his public pieces of high literary quality which have not been seen before in Boston. In fact, this play will be the tenth that has been given at this theatre for the first time here.

"The Irresistible Marmaduke" tells the story of the adventures of a young Englishman of noble birth who bears a remarkable resemblance to another, Marmaduke has disappeared. His apparent portrait has appeared in a newspaper as a lost-memory case, at that time a patient in a London hospital. The lost-memory patient is sent for. It turns out not to be Marmaduke at all but an agreeable young peer, who is his double. It is not hard for the young peer to imagine himself as the real Marmaduke, and he proceeds to adopt himself with evident satisfaction his double's mother, step-father and even his lady-love. Not until the arrival of the young peer's fiancee does his memory come back, and then with a jolt.

Mr. Jewett has cast the play with great care. The dual role will be played by E. E. Clive; Martineau Gregory by H. Conway Wingfield; Lady Susan Keppel, Miss Jessamine Newcomb; Lady Althea Gregory, Miss Gertrude Morris; Patricia O'Brien, Miss Nanny Stewart; Beatrice Wyke, Miss Viola Reoch; Walter Nicholas Joy; Dawson, Miss Mary Hamilton; Dr. Keeling, Cameron Matthews. On its production at the Haymarket, London, "The Irresistible Marmaduke" received unqualified approval from the critics of that city.

REPORTS OF WORK IN FRANCE.
In Tower Court on Monday evening, October 6, two of the members of the faculty who were absent from college last year on overseas service gave details of their work which were of special interest to the faculty and students of the Department of Hygiene. Miss Jackson, in speaking of her nine months' service with the Wellesley Unit under the Red Cross, gave very definite pictures of days at the Base Hospital at Senlis, near Paris, where she was busy with the many personal problems of the wounded. One could see the line of men in uniform or hospital costume waiting at the office for advice and help in drawing up wills, sewing on service stripes, and obtaining news of their families at home by means of cables sent through the Red Cross. Their comfort, happiness and continued efficiency often depended on just this assistance.

Miss Snowden was under the Y. M. C. A. for eleven months and had the good fortune to be ordered to Cognac just at the time of the splendid athletic meet held by the Czecho-Slovak from America while they were in training for service. Later and until after the armistice was signed she was at Scrois, near Paris, and had many opportunities to realize the low physical condition of the women and children of that district, as well as the condition of the allied troops as they passed through the Foyer des Soldats.

Answers to questions about the photographs, helmets, exploded shrapnel, bread and sugar tickets which were exhibited gave many clear pictures of the devastated regions where problems of sanitation arise, crops are non-existent, and chemical action on buried shrapnel in the fields suggests poison gas for animals at pasture.
