COMBINED CONCERT

Brown Orchestra and Wellesley Glee Club at Barn

The Brown University Orchestra and the Wellesley Glee Club combined forces in a concert given in the Barn Wednesday evening, November 24. The Brown orchestra, conducted by Robert Reed Baldwin, played with spirit and ability, but perhaps the biggest hit of the concert was scored by Nick Brown's Jazzers, a quintet of syncopaters, whose harmony set the whole audience humming and "toddling" mentally.

The selection of songs which the Wellesley Glee Club offered was not the happiest possible. However, the Glee Club sang well and in accord, under the direction of Charlotte Homer. The topical song, which is always awaited with expectancy, proved a disappointment. It failed in originality and scope to measure up to topical songs of former years.

An act, bearing the tongue-twisting title of Legerdemain, proved to be a clever exhibition of slight-of-hand by C. H. Pinkham, a magician who showed both dexterity and clever repartee.

The second appearance of Nick Brown's Jazzers was worth the price of admission. The six men wore the most ridiculous fancy costumes; the Spirit of '76 cavorted upon the saxophone, while a Venetian gondolier coaxed syncopated strains from the piano.

After the concert there was dancing until eleven-thirty at Tower and Clifton.

THANKSGIVING DAY

The first snow storm of the year arrived just in time to usher in Thanksgiving Day at Wellesley. In spite of the fact that last Thursday was the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims not much interest was evinced in Wellesley. Most of the proud descendants of the Mayflower and others, from points West, flocked to Boston, there to celebrate the event. Even the meager number that remained in Wellesley were not inspired to recall the renowned deeds of the Pilgrims. Rather did they turn their attention to the turkey, squash, mince pies, etc., which were justly made famous by those Pilgrims. At 1:30 the students in each dormitory clustered about the tables decorated with corn, nuts and apples, all appropriate for Thanksgiving. The hapless inmates of Tower Court were distributed to campus houses for dinner. Afterward, there was occasional dancing and ventures into the snowstorm which supplied the background for a real Thanksgiving.

Intercollegiate Debate Tryouts

Tryouts for the Intercollegiate Debate Teams will be held on Thursday evening, December 7 and 9. Watch class boards and the debate board for instructions as to the subject of the tryouts and the place where they will be held.

The debates must be won! Come out and help!

THE PHI BETA KAPPA DISEASE

What do we come to college for?

If the thousands of college applicants saw a picture of a student bending over a desk day and night, with the Phi Beta Kappa key hanging about his neck as a sanction, would they still think of it as a reward, threatening the dream of future distinction if she lets up for a moment, would college still entice them? Obviously we all come to college for education. And education does not necessarily have to be a weight of science, it does not need to regard the present as obsolete and vanities vulgar. Can it not be breezy, charming, easy, with wit enough to fill up imperfections? Can it not..."

CHOOSE YOUR SUBJECT!

The subject committee of the Inter-Collegiate Debating Society proposes the following subjects for the debate this year:

1. That the United States should have a merchant marine.
2. That the Powers of the Senate should be curtailed.
3. That the President be a department of education with a secretary in the cabinet to supervise educational institutions and establish a state standard of examinations and degrees.
4. That the candidates for president be nominated by a direct vote of the people rather than by national party conventions.
5. That immigration be further restricted.
6. That there be universal limitation of armaments.
7. That the coal mines in the United States should be owned and operated by the Federal Government.
8. That the United States should, by legislation based on the Canadian model, restrict its European immigration to meet labor conditions.
9. That the Dominion form of government is the best suited to the needs of Ireland.
10. That the agricultural states of the middle west should adopt the program of the Non-Partisan League, as carried out in North Dakota.
11. That the Cabinet should be made directly responsible to the House of Representatives.
12. That the Hays system be adopted in the Congressional elections.
13. That the United States should recognize the present de facto government of Mexico.
What Is Air?

BEFORE 1894 every chemist thought he knew what air is. "A mechanical mixture of moisture, nitrogen and oxygen, with traces of hydrogen and carbon dioxide," he would explain. There was so much oxygen and nitrogen in a given sample that he simply determined the amount of oxygen present and assumed the rest to be nitrogen.

One great English chemist, Lord Rayleigh, found that the nitrogen obtained from the air was never so pure as that obtained from some compound like ammonia. What was the "impurity"? In co-operation with another prominent chemist, Sir William Ramsay, it was discovered in an entirely new gas—"argon." Later came the discovery of other rare gases in the atmosphere. The air we breathe contains about a dozen gases and gaseous compounds.

This study of the air is an example of research in pure science. Rayleigh and Ramsay had no practical end in view—merely the discovery of new facts.

A few years ago the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company began to study the destruction of filaments in exhausted lamps in order to ascertain how this happened. It was a purely scientific undertaking. It was found that the filament evaporated—boiled away, like so much water.

Pressure will check boiling or evaporation. If the pressure within a boiler is very high, it will take more heat than ordinarily to boil the water. Would a gas under pressure prevent filaments from boiling away? If so, what gas? It must be a gas that will not combine chemically with the filament. The filament would burn in oxygen; hydrogen would conduct the heat away too rapidly. Nitrogen is a useful gas in this case. It does form a few compounds, however. Better still is argon. It forms no compounds at all.

Thus the modern, efficient, gas-filled lamp appeared, and so argon, which seemed the most useless gas in the world, found a practical application.

Discover new facts, and their practical application will take care of itself.

And the discovery of new facts is the primary purpose of the Research Laboratories of the General Electric Company.

Sometimes years must elapse before the practical application of a discovery becomes apparent, as in the case of argon; sometimes a practical application follows from the mere answering of a "theoretical" question, as in the case of a gas-filled lamp. But no substantial progress can be made unless research is conducted for the purpose of discovering new facts.
AND SHE SPENT FOUR YEARS IN WELLESLEY

"I beg your pardon," drawled a polite Southern voice to the Librarian at the Main Desk,—but could you help me? I’ve looked in the card catalogue for the book, and on all the shelves, and on the reserve shelf and I can’t find it. But it must be an important book, because it’s mentioned several times on all my stencils."—

“What is it?” said the Librarian, “I could help you if you give me the title.”

“Ibid" said the senior obligingly. The Saturday night line was held up while the Librarian looked for Ibid.

THE DRAGON

Lady Gregory

“A wonder play in three acts” is the author’s description of the sparkling fairy-tale to be given its first production in America by the Dramatic Club. Lady Gregory has woven her inimitable humor into the very fabric of this legend of kings and princes, a fascinating princess, and a “Scaly, Green Dragon from the North.” The story, o’d as nurserytale and bright with the glamour of young imagination, holds some truth of character so much simplicity, so much real sympathy and human understanding, that it’s people live even more vividly for “Grown-ups” than for children.

The Dramatic Club feels sure that this production will meet with the approval and enjoyment of all the friends who have supported it so liberally in the past.

The public sale of tickets will begin on November 27th at the Copley Theatre and Herrick’s Ticket Agency in Boston, and at the Harvard Co-operative and Lewisit and Peirce’s in Cambridge.

Tickets for the Boston performance—the afternoon of December 8th—will be $220 and $1.65.

Tickets for the Cambridge performances at the Follen Pudding Theatre—the evenings of December 7th and 10th—will be $220.

COLLEGE NOTES

The engagement of Harriet Holcomb, ’22, to Ralph Shepherd Damon, Harvard ’18, was announced at a tea given by Elizabeth Flynor, ’22, at Zeta Alpha, Friday, Nov. 26.

Helen Snow, ’18, who is now teaching at the Rippowam School, Bedford, N. Y., was back over Thanksgiving. She gave a tea on Sunday for all the members of ’21 who were her freshmen three years ago.

Frances Kinnear and Jeanne Halsted, ’20, spent last week-end in Wellesley.

The English Debating Union, with Elizabeth Cox, Ethel Schaeffer, and Louise Jencks, ’20, were back for the holiday.

The juniors of Shakespeare held the annual Junior Dinner, Frasny, N. 20.

Maude Llodving and Laura Johnson, ’21, gave a tea Monday, Nov. 26th at Zeta Alpha to meet Mrs. C. H. Llodving.

The Beechh sophomores entertained the rest of the house with a most original cabaret. The orchestra consisted of a young lady equally proficient with her drum, her powder puff, and the piano, a gentleman at the xylophone, and certain performers on more humble, but equally musical instruments. Dancing, pantomime, and fortune-telling delighted the audience.

For the holiday season, we recommend our hosieries, blouses and veilings, these making handsome as well as useful gifts, and therefore most acceptable ones.

less, ’21, Euenia Norris, ’21, Eliz-abeth Abbott, ’23, and Charlotte Berger, ’21, danced a minuet. The cabaret features were well done and interesting, although rather reminiscent of Tree Day. Those who had come expecting entertainment of a humorous sort were disappointed.

The General Aid Committee is to be congratulated for honoring procured a real good orchestra for the dancing. The musicians were Harvard men, who produced irresistible dance music. Proceeds from the Cabaret are to be divided among the costs and did the work, on the basis of hours spent. Altho-rough an exact estimate cannot be made, approximately forty cents an hour will be paid. Sixty girls took part in the work, although twice that number applied for the positions.

The General Aid Committee consists of the following members:

Miss Mary Caswall
Wilhelmine Bayless ’21
Louise Fritchman ’22
Mildred Niles ’22
Dane Vermilion ’23
Martha Tyler ’24

The Debating Society feels that this choice of subject is one that concerns the college at large, and would welcome any comment, suggestion, or discussion from those interested. We are required to hand in first, second and third choices to the Intercolligate Committee. All suggestions should be communicated to the Executive Board of the Debating Society.

WHAT DOES AN AMERICAN A. B. KNOW?

Eastern College Education Criticized

In the "Unpartisan Review" for October appeared a most interesting criticism by Mr. Frank Jewett Mather of American College education, particularly that obtained in the Eastern colleges. Mr. Mather says in his address to the Phi Beta Kappa of Cincinnati that any questions as to the value of such an education can be answered by a sufficiently benighted person who points with pride at the "well-groomed, forthright, effective, companionable people" who graduate from our Eastern colleges. "So they are" says Mr. Mather, "but I feel that we shall get nowhere until we admit that a liberal education is a luxury." All this applies as well to college women as to college men, and is a serious arraignment of our education system.

"What does an American A. B. know?" Mr. Mather goes on to say. "He would be ashamed and offended at such questions as: Do you know mathematics? Any ancient languages and literature? Any modern language and literature? Any considerable period of history? His mind doesn't work in greater branches of human knowledge but in smaller units called courses, which half year by half year he has duly passed, and in the poet's expressive words 'shoved behind him.'"

This is the verdict of a man who, himself a graduate of an Eastern college, has been prominent for ten years in writing on politics, letters and art, and was for a time an editor of the "National" and is now holding a professorship in art at Princeton University. Thevex of the matter is, he thinks, in the lack of central aim. While in his position as college professor he says, "We do not know what to teach our students, nor yet what may be reasonably expected of them after they have been taught. Meanwhile, to counteract our essential aimlessness, we pursue confusedly a variety of minor, competitive and largely incompatible aims."

Mr. Mather evidently expects us to flinch at first presentation of his indictment for he next leads us a little further away and shows us the whole educational situation in perspective. The modern reactions to the various results of liberal education he considers to be vocationalism, the various short cuts to learning. "From the wizard who develops your will power in three lessons to the correspondence school which will make you a mining engineer at twenty. . . . and the competing ideal of social service work. Concerning the latter he says, "It is that which drives two-thirds of our graduates into very recent history, contemporary policies, recent economies, inter-city finance. The business of a college should be to show the man who wishes to serve, first, what service he is competent to render, next, what sort of service the world needs."

All these things which Mr. Mather considers to be so very wrong with our present conception of education, he proposes to remedy by re-establishing the old system of required subjects which existed before the "great romantic." President Eliot, persuaded us that the student was captain of his own academic fate." In regard to the attitude of the student himself, he believes that "they will welcome required courses which are complete and informing in themselves, and not merely pre-requisites to special study. We shall tell them to instruction which, whether in the literary or scientific side, is humanistic and exemplary of great historic and personal endeavors."

Anticipating the protesting cries of those who are sipping the very latest beverages from the fountain of knowledge, he goes on to say that "the generations which groaned under imposed Homer and Horace were better read in English literature, diaries and publishers' lists mean anything, than the present generation which is being personally conducted by our academic Thomas Cooks to the contemporary novel and the recent stage."

OF AUNT DINAH PACE

Why?—To care for and educate abandoned and delinquent boys; to bring them up to be good, clean-minded, active American citizens.

Where?—The Reed Home and Industrial School in Covington, Georgia.

How?—By the help and aid of all who are interested in saving and educating human lives for usefulness in the world.

Aunt Dinah needs all sorts of old clothes and especially old shoes. She can use anything. Please wrap your closets to make her Christian a little bit happier and happier. Give your contribution to the bell girl in your house.

RESOLUTION

The following resolution was passed by the members of the Wellesley College Semi-Centennial Fund at the meeting held here on Friday, November 19.

Whereas we as delegates to the Semi-Centennial Fund Conference of Wellesley College have been honorably entertained in the Halls of Residence by the Administration of the College, and

Whereas the pleasure of our visit has been increased by the many courtesies extended to us by the Faculty and Students of the College, be it

Resolved that we record our appreciation of our entertainment and our thanks to the Administration and to the Students.

brations this summer. He has been selected to write the Pilgrim pageant which will be given throughout the month of next July.

Professor Baker is best known, perhaps, for his "47 Workshop" in connection with his course for graduate students only in play writing. The best of the plays written are presented in the little theatre of the "47 Workshop" every year, so that students in the course have training in the technique of mounting and producing a play as well as in writing the plays. His lecture is sure to be of vivid interest.

APPOINTMENT BUREAU WORK BEGINS

The work of the Bureau has now opened for another year. About 180 applications from members of 1921 have been received. All former students of the college who would like to register for the remainder of the year or for the year 1921-22 or who would like to renew registration already made are advised to act as speedily as possible. No charge is made for renewal of registration.

The call for assistants in Occupational Therapy, Clinical Psychiatry and Psychotherapy is evidently not yet fully met and all candidates for work of this character are asked to communicate with the Appointment Bureau. A position in Clinical Psychiatry and Psychotherapy, open to both men and women, offers a salary of $2500 and maintenance. Mothercraft is another vocation for which the Appointment Bureau has not at present a good range of candidates. Such a position in a state college at a salary of $2000 has just been made known to the Bureau. Correspondence with anyone who wishes to take up such work is much desired.

A New England hospital offers a four months course in practical dietetics and institutional management to graduates of recognized schools of Home Economics. Will anyone interested in training for the position of hospital dietitian or culinary supervisor please address the Secretary of the Appointment Bureau for further information.

Watch this column for further notice of interesting positions!

DEATH OF MISS PIRSCHER

Word has recently come to Wellesley College that Miss Johanna Marie Pirscher, Instructor in German at Wellesley College, 1903-1907, died May 26, 1919.

Miss Pirscher was a graduate of Chicago University, holding both the degrees of Ph. B. and Ph. M. She was a woman of charming personality, intellectual ability, exact scholarship and a high degree of skill as a teacher.

She was the author of "Growth without End: A Popular Exposition of Some Current Ethical and Religious Views," and "Variations on an Old Theme," a collection of sketches. Miss Pirscher's kindly nature and high character commanded the respect of her colleagues and students who will learn of her death with profound regret.

WHO HAS MEMORIES OF MR. AND MRS. DURANT?

An early Wellesley student, Mrs. C. A. Kingsley, whose address is 166 Kingsley Avenue, Westerleigh, Staten Island, New York, has undertaken, with the approval of the college authorities, to write a life of Mr. and Mrs. Durant. It is urged that anyone having letters written by either Mr. or Mrs. Durant, newspaper clippings regarding them, anecdotes, reminiscences, biographical data of any sort, lend this material to Mrs. Kingsley, forwarding it to the address given above. The literary skill and charm of Florence Morse Kingsley are well attested by the many popular stories over her name.

WHERE WERE THE FLAMES?

All the thrills and agony of a real fire were experienced by the few inmates of Tower Court that were at home on Wednesday evening. Through some accident to one of the fire alarms, the gong started ringing and forced everyone to gather hastily her most precious articles. But any amount of searching on the part of Mrs. Ward and the lieutenants failed to find any flames. Disappointingly the students filed upstairs to restore their books and fanned pictures to their rightful places.

ALL WELLESLEY SUPPORTS I. C. S. A. CAMPAIGN

The appeal to Wellesley to help give some of Boston's poor children a Merry Christmas resulted in the promise of four hundred ninety-two dressed dolls and $378.80 to help in defraying the expenses of the purchase of these dolls. Under the leadership of Nancy Toll, '22, President of I. C. S. A., every college house has been canvassed with great success, owing to the enthusiastic and generous response of the student body. Members of the faculty as well as undergraduates are eagerly dressing these dolls, and the finished products promise to be varied and interesting. Those who did not feel sufficiently skilful with their needles have done their share by contributing or promising to contribute money for the purchase of these dolls.

The village certainly deserves a great deal of credit for its splendid generosity and eagerness to help. Although the girls off campus comprise only about one-fourth of the student body, they have pledged $175.75, which is nearly one-half of the entire sum. Besides this, they have promised to dress one hundred twenty-two dolls.

Through Miss King, Organizing Secretary of the New England Chapter of the I. C. S. A., these dolls will be distributed, probably in the Boston Dispensary and other hospitals. They must all be finished by Thursday, December ninth. On that afternoon, there will be a doll exhibition which promises to be most interesting.
