WELLESLEY ANSWERS 100% IN UNDERGRADUATE DRIVE

$43,000 Pledged for Semi-Centennial Fund

"No definite quota,—and $43,458.31 pledged the first week of the campaign! That is a splendid record which we can all be proud of," said Alice Joy, chairman of the undergraduate committee for the Semi-Centennial Fund. "It means that every student in college is back of the alumnae in their efforts to make the Semi-Centennial Fund a reality."

The pledges which make up this total are as follows:

1924 $14,000.00
1925 8,265.32
1926 15,034.75
1927 6,640.21

1928 received the prize of $250 offered by Mr. Galen Stone for the first class whose subscribers were 100% of the class membership. This amount is in student pledges, and does not include funds raised by other methods. The benefit performance of "The Tragedy of Nan" given in the Copley theater added $650 to the fund, and over $100 was made by Agora through selling food on the Wellesley Special. The proceeds from Tree Day, and from a concert to be given by some well-known musician, will further increase the undergraduate contributions.

Meanwhile, various original means for making money are under way on campus. In Pomeroy, Marion Weil offers to do catering "for the Fund," with picnics or luncheons planned to suit your most exacting guest. In the Administration Building a tea-room has been established which offers you "your favorite kind of sandwiches,—no crusts." Across the hall the village seniors have made money from the curious minded by allowing them to hear their own voices played from a dictaphone,—for the sum of twenty-five cents.

The undergraduate committee hopes that all students with clever and original ideas for making money will share their inspirations with some member of the committee.

SECURITY LEAGUE OPENS ATTACK ON NEW LIBERAL CLUB

Branches To Be Established In Opposition to Intercollegiate Liberal Organizations

The National Security League has recently announced a nation-wide effort to offset the influence of liberal or radical organization in the various American colleges and universities. Their campus is aimed specifically against the Intercollegiate Socialist Society and the only recently formed Intercollegiate Liberal League. Their attack will come from new societies which will be established at once to combat openly the liberal and radical tendencies within colleges and universities.

The basic ideas of these new societies, as stated, is "to stimulate patriotic spirit and knowledge and respect for American institutions among undergraduates and to give non-radical students an opportunity for active expression."

The National Security League feels that they have sensed a real danger to their country in college societies such as the Liberal League which it accuses of being a socialistic organization in disguise. Circulars and newspaper articles issuing counter propaganda have been distributed throughout the country.

The Liberal League has refused to reply to the accusations of the opposition.

DR. JOEL GOLDSHTHWAIT SPEAKS ON DRESS

Physical Director of Smith College Urges Health Through Proper Clothing

Dr. Joel Goldthwait of Boston spoke on posture and its relation to modern dress, at C. A., Murray evening, April 13. His chief argument was against the kind of costume which tries to mold humanity into a new pattern, and which thereby undermines health and prevents an erect carriage.

Dr. Goldthwait, during the war, was often called Chief Salvager of Derelicts. The derelicts were human; he salvaged them by teaching them correct posture and the right way to walk. By putting his knowledge to practice, those men doubled their vitality and usefulness in such a way that they could stand the stress of war.

The same principle applies to college girls. The once-popular "debutante slouch" and its accompanying awkward walk are neither hygienic nor beautiful. The clothes in vogue at the time caused this slouch and such clothing which cramps and deforms the body should never be worn. Dr. Goldthwait by no means advised severe and puritanical garments, but urged, rather, grace and beauty. As he repeatedly said, the "splendidly erect carriage, which lends health, beauty, and dignity, is eminently to

PROF. MACDOUGALL CAMPAIGNS FOR WELLESLEY

Tours South and West Speaking for Fund

"The present business depression, the call of local and state charities, and what Wellesley stands for, were the greatest obstacles I met in my trip through the South and West," said Professor Hamilton C. MacDougall, in speaking of his recent trip as a member of the General Campaign Committee.

Professor MacDougall was sent by Fund Headquarters to speak to school children, to interview business men, and to bring news of the college to communities in Indianapolis, Louisville, St. Louis, Kansas City, Wichita, Omaha, Cedar Rapids, Chicago, and Detroit. He was gone seventeen days, travelled 3500 miles, spoke to 1300 preparatory school students, gave five organ recitals, and attended numerous dinners and luncheons.

In each city, Professor MacDougall was met by a group of Wellesley alumnae who had made plans for his entertainment, and for various speeches and recitals.

"The wide-awake earnestness of our graduates, and the representative places they hold in their communities were an inspiration," said Professor MacDougall. The 'typical Wellesley girl', if I may judge from the hundreds of graduates I met, is all one could wish."

Professor MacDougall said that the alumnae expressed concern regarding the new comprehensive examinations, for they feared that the average girl would be discouraged, and that the Wellesley type might become too academical, and not discount academic ability in any way," continued Professor MacDougall, "but after all, as Lincoln said, 'God must have loved the common people, he made so many of them.' Just so, there are many fine girls of only average academic ability, who could give and gain a great deal at Wellesley. I sympathize with the alumnae in their fears that we may exclude much valuable material by the adoption of too rigid entrance requirements."

TICKETS FOR OPERETTA

Tickets will be on sale for Operetta on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, April 25, 26, and 27. Operetta season will be sold the 27th and 28th. Those who have not tickets for Miss Edith Wynn Mathison's program on Friday evening, April 25, are requested to go to the Operetta that night. This will insure room for those who wish to hear Miss Mathison on Friday, and to attend Operetta on Saturday.
VILLAGE SENIORS AND 1922

Another group of Wellesley Juniors has been chosen to go to the village to help next year's freshmen adjust themselves to their new college world with a minimum of painful uncertainty. It is an opportunity for real helpfulness, no less real because "the house by the side of the road" chances to be beside the familiar Weston Road, or because, when one aspires to be "a friend to man," the benevolent boasts the prefix "Fresh." The News congratulates the college upon its choice, and Adonais promises faithfully that he will accompany the village seniors on their long walk to campus, giving his utmost of canine cooperation.

HALOS AND VILLAGE SENIORS

Village Needs Spirit of Comraderie
Rather Than Hero-Worship

During the past three years the college has been awakened to the fact that the village presents a serious problem, and it has attempted, by public debate and private discussion, to deal with the situation adequately. The result has been that the majority of undergraduates have expressed themselves as being in favor of continuing to have seniors in village houses; and the members of 1922 who are to carry on the difficult task of supplying the missing link between campus and the village have been appointed. The warring factions are no longer debating as to whether seniors are or are not necessary in the village; the decision has been made, and Wellesley undergraduates have a sufficient respect for law to abide by the vote of the majority. But past discussion has left its stamp on the college consciousness, and the village seniors must realize that they will be under constant criticism, not unkindly, but very searching.

The village senior, in addition to being the tangible outpost of college government, represents also the less-tangible spirit of college. She stands to the freshmen for the ideal Wellesley girl. At first they do homage to the symbol, without stopping to consider whether or not the individual is herself worthy of their admiration; she is an awesome figure, for whose entrance one jumps up and at whose exit one sits down. Later, however, when some of the awe has worn off, their introduction to a strange environment has abated, they desire a village senior who may be approached with camaraderie, rather than with awe, and who may help to eliminate much painful readjustment on both sides if the seniors attempted from the first to do away with the aureole cast by cap and gown, and appeared before the freshmen as mere undergraduates, with no extraordinary endowments of sagacity or omniscience. After all, they have no particular claim to freshmen veneration except a three years' residence in college, which has naturally supplied them with a more extensive knowledge of college routine and customs than that enjoyed by the incoming class.

Let the criticism be made that the News indulges only in sweeping generalities, we suggest a few concrete means whereby the seniors may discourage adoration and foster a sane attitude of comradeship toward themselves.

1. Insistence from the start, upon being called by one's first name, with no gratifying "Miss" attached.
2. Discouragement of the usual freshman habit of standing up at the entrance to class.
3. Care with regard to the information given to freshmen, in order that it may not be tinged with one's personal prejudices, acquired during three years of college life.
4. Determination to keep out of freshmen's personal problems as far as possible.
5. Recognition that freshmen are free moral agents, endowed with an awareness, born of the consciousness of desiring of seeing college through their own eyes.

A COMMUNICATION FROM DR. HOWE

It is not infrequently believed, on a priori grounds, that, in a large lecture course, correct determination of grades is impossible. It is easy to understand how reasonable, and to be taken-for-granted this opinion seems to those who have no opportunity for viewing and knowing the entire situation in detail.

In course of time, the students interested and for their information, the following statements are made. The data are not selected, but are simply all that happen to be on hand.

A. Relation of Grades to Probation

1. In February, 1921, of all students who received E or less in required Hygiene, 54% were on probation.
2. Of all students in the course who were on probation, 86% received or less.
3. Of those receiving C or less, 26% of those who received D and 62% of those who received E or less in required Hygiene were on probation.
4. There is evident that no difference between the lecture course and the probation courses. By the examination of grading, as far as is shown by the absence of high grade students and the presence of low grade students on the probation list.

B. Correlations

For the year 1918-1919, the correlations have been calculated between the freshmen students' general academic average and their grades in the three required freshman subjects, respectively.

General average and Mathematics—0.64
General average and Hygiene—0.65
General average and English Comp—0.69

For the non-mathematical it may be said in explanation that the correlation coefficient measures the tendency, among a large group, for those having high grades in mathematics to have high grades in others, and vice versa. If all students with A in Hygiene had a general academic average of 90%, or better; all those with B, a general average between 80 and 90; and all those with C, a general average between 70 and 79; etc.—then correlation between Hygiene grades and general averages would be perfect, and the correlation coefficient, unity (1.00). If there were no regular relation between the grades in one subject and the average grades in all subjects, correlation would be nil, and the correlation coefficient, zero (0.00).

C. The number of failures in required Hygiene in Feb., 1921, would correspond to a little less than four out of a class of thirty.

D. There can be no question, on general educational grounds, about the superiority of the small recitation class over the lecture.

E. In the several years since the writer was drafted to conduct the course in Hygiene, he has given 780 lectures and read between six and seven thousand final examination papers. He is in a position, therefore, to be able to appreciate vividly, the "disadvantages of the large lecture course." One of the unnecessary obstacles in the conduct of such a course is the opinion, entertained by the few who have not yet reached the stage of examining evidence before pronouncing judgment, that the grades are necessarily fortuitously assigned. It is to be hoped that the above figures will prove to one and all, this tradition to rest and that the person to whom the course is gratefully surrendered will not be hampered by it. On matters of real importance, such as cooperation for higher academic and health standards, the department has, and will always, welcome suggestions which are conceived in good spirit, and carefully and intelligently formulated.

Eugene G. Howe.

JEWELS UNNECESSARY

In an editorial in last week's News an effort was made to reconcile the discrepancy between the academic standard required for society membership and that required for major college offices. The writer suggested that the standard of the latter may be raised to coincide with that of society eligibility.

There is, however, such a great difference between the bases of the two positions—society members and major office holder—that an attempt to make them both equal in the eyes of the community is unreasonable. Society membership is a privilege, and offers enjoyment to the individual. Office-holding is less a privilege in one sense of the word, but its ultimate aim is service, not personal pleasure.

Restricting society membership on academic grounds does not hinder the development of college institutions. Restricting the choice of officers on academic grounds any more strictly than it is at present might do so. The problem of selecting capable girls for the different positions in college is one that often puzzles the student body now. Why, then, further confuse elections by placing an arbitrary standard on the nominees merely because the same restriction is imposed on society members?

"Consistency, thou art a jewel"—but don't jewels seem a bit unnecessary when we face the question of setting the right girl in the place. How long may any more difficult to get than she already is!

CIRCULO CASTELLANO GIVES SPANISH PLAY

Benavente's fairy story "El Principce Que Todo Lo Apreniido En Libros" was given by students of Spanish at Wellesley, in the Barn, Saturday evening, April 16. Elizabeth Couch, president of Circulo Castellano, and manager of the play, explained that while most of us are familiar with Benavente's more passionate and morbid drama, he has also written many fairy-tale plays, designed for the Children's Theater in Madrid, of which this is one of the most charming. She also gave a resume of the plot in English for the benefit of those in the audience who could not understand the Spanish. Before the play, Spanish music, both piano and singing, was given by D. Ramon Ricalde and Sr. D. Jesus Sanroma, of the New England Conservatory of Music.

The story is an allegory, showing how the realities of life are quite contrary to fairy-tales, but are nevertheless beautiful in themselves. In the first scene, the Prince, who knows everything about fairy-lore, but nothing at all about real life, is bidding farewell to his royal parents and, provided with plenty of clean pocket-handkerchiefs, is starting forth to seek his fortune in the real world, accompanied by his tutor and the clown Tomin. In the course of his wanderings, most of his illusions gained from fairy-tales are dispelled. Instead of triumphantly killing the wicked Ogre, he is overcome by him, and has to be rescued by the good fairy whom he meets. Instead of the youngest princess being the most beautiful and virtuous, she turns out to be selfish and cruel, and it is the middle one with whom he lives happily ever after.

THE WELLESLEY COLLEGE NEWS

Professor Macdougall interviewed many prominent business men in behalf of the Semi-Centennial Fund. In almost every case he met with unfailing courtesy, but the men had already contributed to local charities and did not wish to contribute to an Eastern college about which they knew little. "We are prone to think that Wellesley is well-known nationally, because seventy per cent of Wellesley students live outside New England," Professor Macdougall said, "but a few encounters with alert business men to whom Wellesley is only a name would teach us that Wellesley has a great deal of work to do before it becomes the national institution it deserves to be." One graduate has suggested that a representative Southern and a Westerner, placed on the Board of Trustees, would clear many misapprehensions that Wellesley is run by New Englanders in an exclusively Eastern manner.

The trip did not result in many large contributions, but a foundation for further work was laid, and Wellesley was introduced to many people. In speaking to schools, Professor Macdougall laid stress on Wellesley's distinctive qualities, the beauty of its surroundings, and its nearness to a large city which is also a cultural and educational center. In several speeches he conducted a typical freshman through the first week of college.

Gratifying interest was expressed by many persons and inquiries for more accounts of Wellesley were in order after each address. Prof. Macdougall has started a wave of interest in Wellesley in each of the cities he visited. During the next summer the undergraduates' body of the college will have a chance to carry the work still further, and Prof. Macdougall feels confident that they will make the most of the opportunity to help.

OUR SISTER COLLEGE IN PERKING HELPS FAMINE SUFFERERS

The Yenching college girls made $1500 by a public performance of "The Bluebird" in Chinese for the benefit of famine sufferers, and feeling that they wanted to contribute more than money, they asked permission at Christmas time for a deputation of two, with a member of the faculty, to go down into the famine district to investigate for themselves. At Wangdoo, just on the edge and accessible to the famine area, they found an official who begged them to come and use a large temple with all its courtyards and adjoining buildings, as a famine refuge. It could accommodate 200 girls. On reporting this to the students at college, they voted to ask the faculty's permission to run this refuge for girls who would otherwise die of starvation. They planned that one of the older and more mature students should give up her second semester's work, and act as the head resident worker at Wangdoo, other girls going down for two weeks or more at a time to help.

All of the work has been well organized, and the famine girls are given a classroom instruction for half the day, and taught industrial work the other half. The making of harness is the first trade taught. They hope to keep the girls there until the wheat harvest in June. Think what it must mean to these starved children to have the chance to learn and work with college girls, who have gone down to Wangdoo to give themselves as well as their money to help the suffering.

The refuge conducted by Wellesley's younger sisters is the first enterprise which any Chinese women have undertaken, financed, and administered themselves in a time of emergency without foreign supervision. We foreign teachers haven't a thing to do with the work, and have given a little advice, but nothing else. The girls go to the Refuge in teams, and are away from the College for two or three weeks at a time, and when they come back, they make up their academic arrears.

FINAL BASEBALL GAME GIVES 8-7 VICTORY FOR '21

Two Old English W's Awarded

The senior-junior indoor baseball game, played Saturday afternoon, April 16th, in the gymnasium, was above the average for speed and excitement. Heavy batting and an aptness for "sliding home" on the seniors' part, versus a superior sprinting ability on the part of the juniors, kept the play fairly balanced.

'21 began the scoring in the first inning when Helen Sherman and then Virginia Travell crossed the plate. Two innings followed with successive outs. Maude Ludington showed unusual skill as first baseman, and a vivid demonstration of how to slide to second was given by Helen Sherman. Martha Hanna slipped the ball through the seniors' field, which was their weakest spot, and '22 continued the scoring and was in the lead, 4 to 2, at the end of the sixth inning. The first half of the seventh inning brought in two more runs for '22. But three runs piled up for '21. Then a steal and a slide home tied the score.

The seventh inning closed with the score 6 to 6.

A fast eighth inning proved '21's pitching superior to '22's and a carefully placed ball (in the stall-bats) brought in the winning run for '21.

The crowd caught its breath, cheered the players, and relaxed to hear the names of the winners as Maude Ludington, President of A. A. The following girls received W's.

Varsity team was then announced: Helen Sherman—Pitcher
Virginia Travell—Catcher
Susan Graffam—1st Base
Maude Ludington—2nd Base
Martha Hanna—3rd Base
Elizabeth Crawford—Left Short Stop

Pauline Coburn—Right Short Stop
Janet Travell—Left Field
Helen Forbush—Right Field

After the requirements needed for possession had been explained, Virginia Travell and Maude Ludington received sweaters with the old English W, the highest athletic award at Wellesley. Eighty points are needed for this award and both recipients had earned eighty five and one half points.

The line-up for the game was as follows:

- H. Sherman—P.
- V. Travell—C.
- M. Ludington—1st B.
- M. Hesse—2nd B.
- T. Bowman—3rd B.
- M. Longaker—L. S. S.

JAPANESE STUDENTS WILL GIVE PLAYS FOR FUND

"Rip Van Winkle" and "The Melon Thief" To Be Staged at Barn

The Japanese girls of Wellesley have prepared a most engaging program for Saturday afternoon and evening, April 23. They will give two Japanese plays in the inimitable way of the East—the one an interlude "The Melon Thief," and the other a dramatization of the Japanese fable "Rip Van Winkle." The four Japanese girls have been assisted by friends in Boston in making costumes and designing scenery. A Japanese composer in Boston has written music which will be played by members of the College Orchestra during the performance.

The entire proceeds of both performances are to go to the Semi-Centennial Fund. Tickets will be sold at the Barn door.

CHAPEL WINDOWS TO BE LIGHTED

"So Shines a Good" Suggestion

A suggestion for lighting the chapel windows which originated in the Free Press column of the News has been put into practice by Mr. Woods, Superintendent of Grounds who is experimenting on the matter. The idea was that the stained glass windows should be illuminated from the outside in such a way as to make them beautiful at night.

Mr. Woods has had some powerful tungsten burners placed outside the stained window over the freshmen transept, but he has not found this successful as the lights outside and in seem to neutralize each other. He hopes in time, however, to discover a remedy for this difficulty, and his work will be watched with interest by the News as the foret parent of the idea.
HENRY MILLER AND BLANCHE BATES

Henry Miller and Blanche Bates, aided by the original company from Henry Miller's Theatre, New York City, are giving an expression of dramatic artistry that is a rarity nowadays, and the local press has been especially lavish in bestowing a well-merited appreciation of the same.

MASS MEETING FOR "DRAKE"
Miss Orvis Gives Account of Historical Background

The preparations for the June Play were launched last Friday evening, April 15th, when the cast, committee, and all those interested in the play met in Edith Wynn Matthison House. Miss Orvis gave a most helpful lecture on the historical setting of the play. She gave a brief outline of the history of England, previous to Queen Elizabeth's reign; the religious controversy between England and Spain; the cleverness of the Queen in keeping her foreign suitors dancing; the gradual growth of the sea power of England under the encouraging hand of the Queen; and the manliness and strength of the man, Drake, who leads the English way to victory over Spain. It is hoped that Miss Orvis will repeat this lecture in order that the whole college may hear it. Miss Snauel, director of the play, gave pictures of the characters and the plot of the play which will be invaluable in starting the work. "Drake" is to be given June 16th and 17th.
