PROF. CONKLIN DISCUSSES MAN'S FUTURE EVOLUTION

Says Social Development Is Only Progress Possible

"We have come to a position, physically and mentally, pretty well where a standing still, or possibly retrogressing, but socially it is progressing rapidly," declared Professor Edwin Grant Conklin of Princeton University, in his lecture on "The Possibilities of Human Evolution" on Friday, April 14, at 8:00 P. M., in Houghton Memorial Chapel. That evolution of man in his physical and intellectual capacity has gone as far as it can go, and that it is only through society that human progress will be made in the future centuries was the conclusion based on two facts; that there has been practically no change in man physically for the last 10,000 years, and that evolution even in certain animals, such as the giraffe with his long neck and the elephant with his trunk, has gone as far as it possibly can without destroying the balance of parents and defecting its own purpose of adapting animals to their needs and environment.

Physically, man is no more perfect that he was 20,000 years ago, since modern physical education gives man only acquired characteristics of improvement which are not inherited by his progeny. Mentally, man may have more knowledge than he did in ancient times, but no greater mental capacity and actual brain size.
Socially, only, man has made marvelous strides in the last few centuries and socially man is destined to make his future progress, since "we inherit what modern society has created." Knowldge has advanced because individuals have worked together toward the completion of what we call the "Temple of Knowledge."

HONORS ARE EVEN IN INTERCLASS GAMES

'23 Rivals ‘22 in Basketball and Baseball
The indoor basketball and baseball games between the junior and senior classes, held in the gymnasium last Saturday afternoon, won larbes for each team. In baseball the seniors were victors, 19-10, and in basketball the opposing team won with a score of 27-16. The latter game proved rather slow and uninteresting in comparison with the former. Both teams played excellently in baseball, and the general opinion held by all who saw the game is that there is very good material for next year’s senior team. Only one accident occurred, when Helen Forbush, '22 cut her head. Pauline Cohn, '22, was substituted in her place. The teams consisted of the following players:

WELLESLEY GIRLS CAN GO TO TREASURE ISLAND Opportunities Offered in Vacation Home

A Treasure Island that has proved far more interesting to many Wellesley girls than one within the covers of a book is to be found in Long Island Sound, a little way out from Stony Creek, Connecticut. It was purchased by Dr. Coffin’s church and has been used as a vacation home for members of his congregation who would be unable otherwise to get away from New York during the summer. The house with its large porch, the bowing alley, and observation tower, the rocky, pine-tree covered island, the bathing beach and the boats, the fresh air and fine views have been enjoyed to the full by mothers and children in June and September, and by young girls in July and August, for the two weeks’ outing allowed to each group of about fifty. Wellesley girls teach swimming and rowing, coach baseball and run off field day events, accompany motor boat parties and picnics, get up entertainment for each evening, vaudeville, fancy dress balls, amateur theatricals in the tiny theatre, marshmallow roasts about the bonfire on the rocks, and anything ingenunity can devise.

Many lasting friendships between college girls and factory or shop girls have been made in the camaraderie of Treasure Island. The dates for the parties this year are June 15 to July 1, July 3 to 15, July 17 to 25, July 31 to August 12, August 14 to 26, and August 28 to September 9. All girls who wish to go to Treasure Island will find application blanks on the J. C. S. A. board, which should be filled out and given to Elizabeth Probst, 205 Tower Court, as soon as possible.

WELLESLEY FLEET TO BE INCREASED

Mr. Monahan Builds New Canoes

Nineteen new canoes which are at present still in the process of construction will appear on Lake Waban about May 1. This spring, according to Mr. Monahan, Wellesley College is the proud possessor of eighty sponsos and canoes, including the new additions, which seems at a rough estimation sufficient enough to supply all the needs of the college.

The new canoes are now in the attic of the boat-house where they are receiving their final coats of paint. This is the end of a job which Mr. Monahan has been working on during the entire winter. He has made them all by hand, and from the fund of his past experience with both canoes and Wellesley girls, he has originated a new model. This boat is unusually broad and strong, and has a seating capacity of six.

Mr. Monahan is making this small fleet has tried to please the girls in the size, shape, and even in the color of the boats, for he has consented to paint them by request. In consequence, such combinations as orange and black, blue and white, and crimson and white will enhance the picturesque effect of the lake this spring.

FRENCH UNIVERSITIES OFFER COURSES FOR AMERICAN STUDENTS

Eight French universities have extended an invitation to American students and teachers to attend the summer session of 1922 for which special courses and tutorial classes have been organized.

Each university group will be limited in number. Assignments to the various universities will be made according to the choice of the applicants until the groups have been filled, when the applicant's second choice will be honored. Each university group will be under the direct supervision of a French professor of Romance languages, who will be known as the American Educational Director of that university. The universities of Besançon, Dijon, Grenoble, Nancy, Paris, Poitiers, Strasbourg, and Toulouse will offer special courses.

Courses in all the universities will begin on July 12. Most of the sailings are scheduled from the 29th of June to the 1st of July inclusive. During the summer session many opportunities will be offered to visit and study museums, art galleries, schools and industrial centers in and about the university city. All expenses will be covered by a price which will approximate $700. Mlle. Clevenot of the French Department will furnish further information about the courses to any who are interested.

“GETTING BACK TO NORMALITY”

When the NEWS was publicly acclaimed at last week’s mass meeting as the natural agent for creating public opinion in college, and the logical instrument for a campaign of propaganda against existing conditions, the Board, it must be confessed, was momentarily filled with a complacent glow. But, aside from all considerations of the representative function of the paper as a news organ, which precludes the use of unlimited space even for such an end, it is undeniable that the time is past when the unaided effort of the NEWS in this direction can be adequate.

It propaganda were enough, it is clear, no change could be wrought through the column of the NEWS. But the problem was one of a more fundamental and expression of an attitude. When the case calls for a critical operation, there is little virtue in panaceas.

Two kinds of offenses are agitating the college community: against the unwritten and the written laws. Both are generally conceded, even with due allowance for the tendency to disparage one’s own times, to be more prevalent than ever before.

The first sort may be conveniently lumped along with all the other manifestations of a reckless spirit in that amorphous group called the younger generation. Here, indeed, public opinion may be a valid weapon; but since Wellesley merely reflects a widespread state of things whose causes go back to post-war reactions, to deplore seems less successful in the end than to ignore.

On the second count, which brings into question of specific lawlessness, the college has its cause and effect under its control. If a miniature crime wave exists here, greater out of all proportion than in other years, there must be reasons why this year is an exception, and if in itself evident that much of the difficulty may be traced to the outstanding feature of the past six months, namely, the College Government upheaval. The time that has elapsed since that event has been a virtual interregnum, in that, while presumably supporting the present system, the students have taken steps to inaugurate a new one.

In the meantime the usual spirit of unrest has prevailed. Not content with expressing once and for all dissatisfaction and a desire for change, many have seen fit to embody their protest in a consistent disregard for the whole body of rules. At the same time others, unconnected with the merits or defects in any system, merely take advantage of the unsettled situation to conduct themselves as they please.

Yet it is natural that the college, before it can settle back into the “normality” which is as desirable for a college as for a nation, should want some indication that something has been accomplished in the agitation in January. It would be unfortunate if the ill effects that inevitably accompany reaction should not be compensated by corresponding gains. The solution appears to action on some line—almost any line; but action that leads to some tangible result, and brings to an end the present period of suspense and indecision. For this reason the NEWS, while standing ready to use every resource in its power, feels that words are now but the means and the incentive to that action for which we place the responsibility at the doors of College Government.

DIFFERENTIATION BETWEEN CLASSES

To the Wellesley College News:

In the discussion of a new Faculty-Student Agreement, the question has arisen about differentiating between the classes with regard to College Government rules. In the past Wellesley has stood for uniform legislation for all undergraduate classes. A new system could be found which would meet the needs of the individual classes, precedent should not stand in the way.

One of the most logical methods of dividing the classes according to their separate needs seems to be into three groups: the freshmen, the sophomores and juniors, and the seniors. At first glance this will perhaps appear entirely too complicated, but in practice it would easily adjust itself. The freshmen in the village would not be confused because the rules on campus, a different world, were not entirely like theirs. Sophomores and juniors would have common regulations and should not be disturbed by the existence of a few senator privileges. Such a class would know its own restrictions and observe them.

As for the usefulness of differentiating at all, that becomes apparent immediately, on the face of the matter. Here are three groups with varied experience, both in college life and in their general community in which the college is situated. The freshmen have just come from their homes or from boarding schools to a new regime, and, in the majority of cases, to an unfamiliar part of the country. Rules necessary for them would have been outgrown by sophomores and juniors, whereas such a group would have become adjusted to college life and more familiar with Boston and its vicinity. Then after three years of such training, one should certainly be sufficiently experienced to enjoy a few privileges senior year. In such manner the classes could be dealt with more adequately, restrictions being provided when they seem best, and abolished when they become useless. 24.

ARE KNICKERS A FAD?

To the Wellesley College News:

Knickers have apparently come to stay, and like every other departure from convention, have gained their hold at the expense of many long cherished traditions and prejudices. Some of these prejudices do not remain, but they are kept well hidden, and we hear of girls roaming the campuses of western universities in mannish attire, without so much as an oh! or an ah! from the teller of the tale.

Well, they are a blessing, and we can look back with superior smiles at ourselves a few years ago, skating, hiking, golfing, in skirts. We can only admire the existence. How often had we innocently watched the wretched in Constantinople Tokio from the utter protection of Petticoat Paris.

Home caravans, his own parasol, and whenever a cheery occasion gave him the opportunity, the more annoyed existed. Home. The editors had innocently watched the wretched in Constantinople Tokio from the utter protection of Petticoat Paris.

Barnswallows Present Two One-Act Plays

The second play, "The Maker of Dreams," was a Pierrot and Pierrette fantasy. Pierrot and Pierrette were a charming couple—only Pierrot was not in love with Pierrette but always looking for an ideal woman. To him the Manufacturer of Dreams brought the bill of lading for his masterpiece who was, as Pierrot discovered to his great surprise, Pierrette herself. The somewhat saucy nature of the play was relieved by the delicious drollery of Pierrot.

honor system before entrance, and sign a pledge to uphold it.

For the prevention of non-academic offenses several methods were suggested, such as the spreading of propaganda through the NEWS, to arouse feeling on the subject; requiring reporting; and the inclusion of specific flagrant offenses in the pledge to be signed by incoming students. The motion on this question was that the speaker of the House of Representatives appoint a committee to investigate honor systems and suggest methods for the revision of ours, to be presented to the college at a mass meeting.

Those present at the meeting seemed to feel that the matter of moral conduct can be dealt with effectively only through public opinion. The motion was passed that in each dormitory a house committee be appointed, where anyone in the house could refer questions of conduct.

Wellesley Observes Easter with Appropriate Services

Various Activities Mark Season

The Easter which fell this year outside of vacation was observed in Wellesley with a number of interesting and memorable services. At the last Christian Association meeting Miss Florence Converse, a Wellesley graduate and author of "The Story of Wellesley," read her one-act play, "Thy Kingdom Come." Very simple in structure, the play contained merely seven characters, the three Roman soldiers who guarded the Tomb and four little Galilean children. The aim of the play was to show the faith of children in the Resurrection.

Friday afternoon, at 5.30, a service was held in the Houghton Memorial Chapel. The Rev. Melvair H. Lichtenflechter conducted the service in preparation for Easter.

The Sunday morning service was given by the Rev. Henry Halteman,Twed of the Yale Divinity School. His sermon centered around the theme of Immortality and the Resurrection. Dr. Twed gave no proof for immortality, but asserted there is no disputing everything to gain by a belief in it.

Special Easter Vespers were held in the Chapel Sunday evening. With the exception of the Scripture reading and a short talk on its significance by President Peabody, the program was entirely musical one. Two hymns, written by Miss Caroline Hazard, and a soprano solo by Hildegard Churchill contributed to the vocal numbers.

Fellowship Offered

The Ruth Ingersoll Goldmark Fellowship of $250.00 yearly is available for the year 1922-23 for graduate work in English Literature, or in Classics, or in both. Applications should be sent before May 1 to Miss Margaret P. Sherrwood, 7 Midland road, Wellesley, Mass.

College Notes

The following officers of the freshman class were elected before spring vacation:

Dorothy Harris, Tree Day Mistress; Harriet Edgell, Treasurer; Elizabeth Thompson, Hearleth Thompson, Pictutum.

Marion Wilson, Executive Board member.

Miss Alice Rupp, 3'2, laboratory assistant in the Zoology Department, has been elected Sherieth Fellow in the University of Minnesota Medical School.

The NEWS Board went to Pigeon Cove for the week-end of April 16.

The Treasure Room of the library was opened for three afternoons of last week to exhibit several old editions of various works.

At a meed at the associates of the Appointment Bureau, April 12, speakers described the different kinds of religious educational work open to college graduates.

Professor and Mrs. Mussey dedicated the site of their new home on Loewell Hill Easter afternoon. The college students were invited to be present. Easter cards were sung, and there was an organ-rolling.

American colleges and universities are being given an opportunity this week to aid in the restoration of the library of the University of Louvain, Belgium, which was destroyed by the Germans in 1914. There are approximately one million students in America, and the committee is asking for a gift from each of a dollar or less to go to the new library, as a "gift from the students of America to the scholars of Europe."

The College Magazine Question

To the Wellesley College News:

Interest is reviving in the old question of whether or not Wellesley should have a College Magazine.
Groups of students are discussing it constantly, especially the freshmen, who attack the upper classmen’s atti"ude of “It’s so much bother to have a magazine—and besides, the old one called.”

But the failure of the old one is no excuse for us to go on having no all-college magazine. We need one, and Wellesley should be as capable of supporting and editing one as Vassar and Smith.

One freshman has called attention to the fact that those interested in juries can try out their talents in the Barn, those in music in the Operaetta, those in dancing in Tree Day, but for those interested in writing there is nothing except the NEWS and the Twig. The former affords an opportunity to those interested in one branch of writing only, and the latter contains only the products of the freshmen composition classes. The obvious conclusion is that we need a magazine.

In attempting to found a magazine we would have to consider two things: contributors and subscribers must be secured.

There was never a lack of contributors to the old magazine. There would not be to a new one, for too many girls are interested in writing. Consider the large number who go on with Composition after freshman year. The difficulty would lie in the financial end, in securing subscribers, not in getting contributors.

To meet this difficulty one student has developed an extremely practicable plan. She has suggested that since the college has shown itself either unable or unwilling to support a large magazine, we content ourselves with a literary supplement of the NEWS.
This supplement could be under the same business management as the NEWS, but with a separate literary board. It could be printed once or twice a month, as the number of contributors warranted. It would not be expensive. The small cost of printing it, and the fact that it was under the business management of the NEWS, would secure its financial success and its subscribers.

Why not give it a trial? The risk in any case would be small, and the re-esult might be inestimably valuable to the whole college.

Noted Boston Poet Reads Own Verse

Miss Abbie P. Brown Gives Selections

Another of the Poets’ Readings, spontaneously by the English Department, took place Tuesday afternoon, April 11, in Founders’ Hall. Miss Abbie Par-well Brown, the well known Boston poet, reading selections from her own poems—Enhanced by the charm of the poet’s personality and her dramatic force of interpretation, the reading was a source of genuine delight to the audience. It was divided into two groups, of which the first consists selections from Miss Brown’s more serious verse. Of a distinctly local flavor, as she herself remarked, these poems are permeated with the New England spirit. Lost Winds, whose swinging rhythm adds greatly to the subject presentation, is typical of this sectional appreciation.

Chosen Interesting Variety

Others of this type are Nones, a well conceived contrast of old English and New England towns, and Savages, which borders on the satirical in de-cribing the Puritan ancestors as ex-terminating the Indians to earn their Sabbath rest. Two poems perfect in detail and finished in meter and diction are The Wall and Rose Perenwial.

The first was written in answer to a poem of Robert Frost’s, with whose opening line “Something there is that doesn’t like a wall” Miss Brown dis-greed. The Wall is a splendid tribute to her stern old Puritan grandfather.

Rose Perenwial has somewhat the same theme, and appeals through its simplicity and tender, understanding of the need for beauty in the humblest lives.

Delightful Fancy Portrayed

The poems in the latter part of the reading, especially the children’s poems, were characterized by a truly delightful fancy and whimsical imagination. The Frightened Road and Uphill Street are examples of this fanciful sketching. Low Tide is also imaginative and unusual in its characterizations. Of the children’s poems, a field which claims much of Miss Brown’s interest and ability, Grandmother’s House, Psychology and The English Dandfion are typical illustrations.

Miss Abbie P. Brown is one of the younger Boston poets and a contributor to numerous magazines. She is also the author of many tales in prose.
Among her publications are Songs of Sixpence, Surprise House and The Tacky Stone.

Wellesley Woman to Be Missionary

Miss Helen Bailey of Reading, Mass., a graduate of Wellesley College, will be one of the ten young women who will sail as missionaries to foreign lands during the summer and autumn under the auspices of the Woman’s American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. She will be stationed in South India, where she will serve as an educational missionary. Miss Bailey, who for the past two years has served as author’s assistant in the Newton Centre Baptist Church, expects to receive her M. A. degree from Boston University in June.
FRASER BUILD NEW GREENHOUSE TO SUPPLY DEMAND FOR ROSES

A new and remarkable building is rising on the other side of the railroad tracks—Wellesley's first iron construction greenhouse. The students' demands for roses have kept Mr. Fraser so busy that he has decided to build this fifth green-house and reserve it exclusively for roses. He is planning on one thousand seven hundred bushes.

"My business was started," Mr. Fraser said, "just seven years ago, by one Wellesley girl, who bought one fern for one dollar." That dollar now hangs from a molding, framed in state.

Mr. Fraser is able to state that the students' favorite flowers are sweet peas and roses; that eighty-five of them were thoughtful enough to send flowers home for Easter; that they are all times mindful of their sick in Simpson, and that their fathers and mothers send them more flowers than do their "men." He knows their individual whims, their fancies, their elections, and their prom merr.

APPOINTMENT BUREAU

Details regarding positions mentioned in this column will be furnished by the Director of the Appointment Bureau in response to inquiry by letter or in office hours, 5 Administration Building. The prefixed number should always be mentioned.

This seems an opportunity for a group of Wellesley girls to obtain positions in the same school. Salaries range from $1,200 to $1,600, according to experience.

119 AS—A college in Mississippi desires a teacher of Latin and Mathematics, and also a teacher of Art. Presbyterians are preferred, but are not essential. Salary, $750, with board and laundry.

"DANCERS IN THE DARK" SHOWS THE OTHER SIDE OF PARADISE

The modern girl as an "excitement eater" is the theme of Dancers in the Dark, the first novel of Miss Dorothy Speare, Smith '19, recently published by George H. Doran Company. It is that spectacular representative of the younger generation, the prom girl. Whom Miss Speare has chosen to embody her theories about present-day young women. She matches most of the mercurial fashions which have aided the sales of This Side of Paradise with incidents related from the girl's point of view; and concludes that the average modern girl is a more interesting and efficient person than her predecessor. Miss Speare has been described by an enthusiastic reviewer as "young enough to know what she is talking about." Whether or not that is true, her book is an interesting contribution to the growing mass of literature of this sort.
