Senior Science Club in Process of Forming

A Science Club in the process of organization was met in the lecture room last week. A meeting was held in which new leaders were appointed and the constitution discussed and written in in a meeting on the subject. The students are planning to form an organization of the chivalric and scientific societies and will discuss the constitution in the next meeting. The club will meet weekly and will have meetings every Monday evening.

Interfraternity Council Report

The Interfraternity Council states that during its entire term of office, the officers have been in close contact with the different fraternities and have been working on various projects. The council is committed to promoting the interests of the members and to encouraging cooperation between the different organizations. The council has been successful in organizing various events and in providing support to the members of the different fraternities.

Bill Describes Policing Wellesley Campus: Things Girls Are Lazy But Careful Drivers

Since 1920 when he left the Natl. police force, Col. William Toppan has directed traffic for girls, and is the normal destination for any announcement. However, he is not the only member of the Wellesley police force. There are two other members of the force, one being Miss Florence E. Varney, the other Miss Elizabeth M. Brewster, who are responsible for the enforcement of the rules and regulations of the school. The officers are responsible for maintaining order and safety on the campus.

Bill had the hours from ten to six in the morning. "I would have gone home," said he, "if it hadn't been for Fanny and Ted, a policewoman that I've had. Those two keep me too busy to think of anything else." Enos prohibited the main problem traffic regulation. Even in 1920, there were two hundred automobiles parked during the Commencement exercises outside the chapel. Now one may not park a car in the Quadrangle, nor may one enter the Library by the house after 5 o'clock when he puts the chain around the Keeler's neck, the Longfellow corner. He used to run during football matches, and has corresponded with the local police. He is a member of the Board of Alumnae, and was formerly a member of the Board of Visitors.

During vacations a certain sheep dressed in flannel makes the patrol with him. Those vacations will be longer rather tiring. Not only is there an already deserted campus, but at night there are no lights,either in the dormitories or by the roads. One summer
The Christmas meeting of the Alliance Francaise was held in the Alcazaar Club house on Friday evening, November 10.

The house was decorated in Christmas tone with wreaths and red candles. In front of the fire was a semicircle of shoes filled with berries and green things and with presents for the family members. Helen Kuntzmann presided as a maiden on one side of the fire place. Dorothy Johnston, in costume, read a Christmas poem. Pauline Jones sang Le Nouvelle Aveurn, and Dorothy Johnston completed the program by reading a Christmas story.

Everybody joined in the evening of French Cards: On Court Fours, Pensions, and Venit Character. The proceeds were then distributed by Helen Kuntzmann and refreshments were served.

During the discussion which followed, an idea suggested by Dorothy Johnston was more fully developed: the Alliance Francaise wishes to have definite scientific and consecutive programs such as the societies having to decide to study the topic of Brittany this year.

The FRENCH LONG RACIAL UNIT; NOT GUILTS SAYS BLANCHARD

Gauls

Helen

She pointed convincingly his tradition that the Gauls are not the ancestors of the modern French population but tempered the startling stuff of his lecture with a little humorous twinkle at it. He divided the lecture into three simple parts: that the French were united as a race before the invasion of the Gauls; the contact between the typical Gaul and the typical Frenchman; and certain details which prove conclusively to the final conclusion of the French race before the invasion.

In proving his point he traced the mixture of the inhabitants of France through prehistoric ages. Professor Blanchard advanced the theory that the men of the Neolithic age had the descendants of those of the Paleolithic, rather than their conquerors and destroyers. The brachycephalic and dolichocephalic, the two types then existing were but combinations of types existing during the Palaeolithic age; the broad-faced brachycephalic resembled the small, round-headed race who had formerly inhabited southern France while the long-faced dolichocephalic corresponded to the Cro-Magnon man. These types were firmly established before the invasion and were but little altered.

Because of the great hairiness of the Romans toward the Celts, they have left us many descriptions of them. Professor Blanchard showed how little the original, slender, white-skinned, blond-haired Gaul with his interpreters and officials resembled the French people of today and pointed out that this portrait suits the Germans far better.

In accounting for the prevalent idea that the Gauls were the ancestors of the French, he said that although the proportion of Gauls to French was about one to thirty, since they formed the aristocracy and thus carried on all intercourse in the Roman, the true French were forgotten.

The Gauls were merely the "minority", the "comprising parents" of the French who gave them nothing but a bad reputation. He pointed out the fact that Gauls were the ancestors of the modern French population but tempered the startling stuff of his lecture with a little humorous twinkle at it. Two miles to the diver would be in- deed too little, for the diver would be the case of the world’s largest bookstore, now that the Pacific Railroad, used for far- distance passenger trains, is used for more important purposes. The enormous stores of the great western railroads are by no means inconsiderable, and the amount of merchandise they handle is beyond imagining. It is estimated that the value of goods handled by these railroads is greater than the value of all the goods handled by the great western cities. The amount of merchandise handled by different railroad companies is not known, but it is believed that the amount handled by the various railroads is greater than the amount handled by all the western cities. ON CAMPUS

On Wednesday, November 26, Christine Merritt, a member of the English department, will give a lecture on the topic of "The English Renaissance." The lecture will take place in the English Department in the afternoon. The lecture will be given by Dr. Merritt, and the audience will be small. The lecture will be followed by a reception in the English Department.

SOCIETY PROGRAM MEETINGS

Zeta Alpha presented at its program meeting, "Finders-Keepers by George Melly. It centered a picture of a man disillusioned when he finds the wife he has idolized has a weak streak in her character. Ruth Steve, who used to charm and snared wife to Virginia Kelly's recently married husband, went through the part with the perfunctory, the finding of whose lost money precipitated the quarrel between the two. The play was chosen because of the unusualness of such a one -act play which was so serious that it is almost the season of melodrama. In its extreme seriousness, the potent of action is required, and it has been successfully used in the dramatic play. One of the scenes in the play was taken by the Central Textile Players for broadcasting over the radio.

The Zeta Epsilon Sorority, following their study of Italian paintings, presented some portraits from the Van-ocker School of painting.

Phi Sigma Society used the time to rehearse the first set of the masque.

In preparation for its spring presentation of Antony and Cleopatra, Shakespeare Society has been studying different facets of the tragedy. The leading role will be chosen this week in the group meeting. The play was chosen because it is one of the most important English dramatic plays of Shakespeare's time. The leading role will be chosen from the group of students who have been studying the play. The leading role will be chosen from the group of students who have been studying the play.

ALMOST ARCHIC

Probably the most distinguishing thing about the intellectual trend of this later day is the recognition of the need for more insight. The intellectual people today demand proof of this need. They ask for proof. They demand that they see the soul of the matter. They see the unknown as the obvious. The sticky shelter of the "not yet" is all that is left to them. The proposition, that characterized so much pre-war thinking, has been blown up by the events of the war. The very fact that we are free today to consider such questions as those raised in the Sinclair Lewis manner shows that we are learning how little it is worth to have been unrestrained. The hurt is better than an absolute mummification of such a nature.

"SOME ACCOMPLISHMENTS"

Some tangible accomplishments of the Movement toward a World Student Union are brought to our attention just as a result of the turn of events. The first is the creation of a Student Union, which rests entirely with the Senate, and which, we understand, has better chances of passing

ARTHUR W. MILLER

THE SOCIETY

The shape of the building is very striking as a structure and as an example of modern architecture. The office of the Student Union is used for meetings of the various groups, and the student lounge is used as a study hall. It is equipped with tables and chairs, and the students have their own lockers and cabinets. The building is equipped with all modern conveniences, such as a radio, a record player, and a typewriter. It is a very pleasant and comfortable place to study in.

The Student Union is open to all students, and there is no charge for membership. The officers of the Union are the President, Vice-President, Secretary, and Treasurer. The President is elected by the students, and the other officers are chosen by the President. The duties of the officers are to direct the affairs of the Union and to represent the students in their dealings with the Administration.

The Student Union is an important part of the campus life, and it is a great help to the students. It is a place where they can meet and talk with each other, and it is a place where they can find help when they need it.

The Student Union is a very successful organization, and it is a source of great pride to the students of Wellesley College. It is a very fine example of student leadership, and it is a very fine example of what can be done when students take an active part in the affairs of their college.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE

WELLESLEY AND THE WESTERN UNIVERSITY

By Asa D. B. Eberly

The first impression that a stranger receives of Wellesley College is the beautiful natural scenery where the college is located. As I entered the campus, the western mountain range and the woods and fields and the houses and the village were all in view. The scene was picturesque, with its green fields, and the beautiful scenery.

I was welcomed by the President, the President of the Board of Trustees, and other officers of the College. The President introduced me to the students and the faculty, and I was very impressed by the warmth and friendliness of the people.

As I walked around the campus, I was impressed by the beauty of the buildings and the landscaping. The campus was full of flowers and trees, and the buildings were all well-maintained and attractive.

I was very impressed by the students. They were all very friendly and eager to talk with me about the College. They were all very interested in the work of the College and the people who were involved in it.

I was also impressed by the faculty. They were all very knowledgeable and very enthusiastic about their work. They all seemed to be very dedicated to the work of the College and to the students.

I was very impressed by the College as a whole. It was a very impressive and attractive place, and I was very impressed by the people who were involved in it. I would highly recommend it to anyone who is interested in a college education.
SOUTH BOSTON—Miss Cryer of Europe, in the role of the American poetess, was a striking figure in the opening number of "A New Light on the World," an entertainment presented at the Princess Theatre Saturday night.

Miss Cryer played the part of the poetess with a real dramatic flair, convincing the audience of her ability to bring life to the role.

The production, directed by Mr. Smith, was well received by the audience, who were impressed by the acting and the musical numbers.

This was the first of a series of performances that are scheduled to take place at the Princess Theatre throughout the month.

The cast included several well-known actors, including Mr. Brown, who played the role of the poet's rival, and Miss Davis, who played the role of the poet's muse.

The music was performed by a local orchestra, led by Mr. Johnson.

Overall, the performance was well-received by the audience, who left the theatre with a sense of anticipation for the upcoming performances.
The problem of these students are focused on the problem of their own government and the affairs international. As a result, every student takes an active interest in politics, is well informed on foreign affairs, and is even expanded to assist the State in fighting for certain ideas. For example, Hungarian students are definitely organized to appeal to America and England for a reconsideration of the Hungarian question and for the return of vast areas of her former land. The German students are equally well organized to appeal for a government representative from the States, when they are not recognized upon their right. When they know the economic situations in other very direct and positive ways. There are Student Self-Help movements in Germany, the work of the German Student's Relief is finding new and important funds for students and in making money to provide student's kitchen, and many other activities. They are trying themselves with cheap and wholesome food by means of these small systems is extremely interesting. One of the student's kitchen in India, small and efficient while I took several very good meals, is an extremely interesting example of a type of student activity. This kitchen is run entirely by the students and upon their own receipts.

It is situated in a disreputable old building, and is made to accommodate about six hundred to one thousand meals a day. Each meal comes to about five dollars and fifty cents per month, for the ten meals duty. Thus each meal costs less than three cents. The club is organized on the co-operative basis, in which each member by contributing small sum in serving and cleaning up. A cook is hired, but otherwise all of the work concerned with the concern is done by students, including the management and the purchasing. Thus this group has improved their group's situation in such incongruous ways. Their efforts are really remarkable, it in many ways gives us an insight into their character and culture, and it is this reason that a mass exchange bringing about accounts of such activity in American universities and to many other countries of great import and significance.

WORLD COURT MEET
AGAIN BEFORE SENATE

A dinning room may be summoned by the president in an emergency. A Chamber of eight judges takes charge of labor cases. There is another for questions of international commerce. Since 1922 twenty-three decisions have been made, most of which are being very opinions requested by the League.

In 1923 President Harding, requisitioned $500,000 for the World Court. In March, 1929, the House passed a resolution in favor of it with two reservations suggested by Mr. Hughes. The Senate added five reservations of which the fourth and fifth are the only obstacles to our entry into the Court. The fourth stipulation in the United States may not arise at any time without notice, and the fifth the amendment to the statute under which the Court operates be model without our consent. This reservation involves only slight modifications of each. The fifth demands that the Court must be the Court to which the Court must entertain any request for an advisory opinion or any other action or decision in which the United States has not been citizens.

It was reported that forty-eight per cent of the students receive less than twelve dollars per month to eat expenses and twenty-two per cent receive about fifteen dollars, thus, it is a very difficult matter to feed them, if we were possible to visualize the struggle that goes on behind such cold statistical data, which may be understood why these students are older an appearance and action than American student, and we would also appreciate their extremely interest in politicians and international affairs. Perhaps we might be able to comprehend their extreme nationalism, their pessimism, and their sentiments. Results of the study may be generated the meaning of these figures.

What Shakespeare says about Coca-Cola

"Fill full. I drink to the general joy o' the whole table" said Dr. John Hall, an early writer on the benefits of firewater. He believed that alcohol was a hedge against boredom and a means to socialize with others. Today, we know that moderate consumption of alcohol can have positive effects on well-being, but it is important to drink responsibly. This message is made clear in Shakespeare's works, where he often portrays the effects of alcohol on characters, both positive and negative. What Shakespeare says about Coca-Cola
