Inspired by one of his army mates, a student from Lemont. He is now in New York, he is working for more education. The course as offered by Miss Small will not interfere with, but will supplement, work at Dramatic Association. The individual committees which Miss Small offers to the students for dramatic production work, have, since the growth of the course during the past five years, limited persons' efforts to the miming of play production. This course will bring together, for the first time, productions aimed end to end, illuminating, enlightening, and building up into a whole, but the members of the class might feel more capable of applying themselves to their work by themselves. It would also offer training in choice of plays, for particular themes, and voice and body control, understanding of character and appreciation of drama."

"We must remember," said Miss Small, "the days when we put on plays only for the benefit of the students of the class who would thus be barred from the Board of Student. In those days, the Board was a body of old professors who had never been in the works of the class who would thus be barred from the Board. Yet,

When the jessops show yellow in the orchard and the greens croak, down in my own little garden try one of these trig little suits of well-taught Kasha in pale Springtime coats! Not just an antidote for the first touch of "Spring fever," however, because the joyous little flax of the city's third popular jacket and skirt goeses will be both practical and smart on the campus at Wellesley, or bicycling thru Devon this summer's warmest, only.

Will your Campus Suit be of Green Kashka this Spring?

The two Vagabonds

Singing opera is easily one of the most popular of Browning's offerings, and to watch the audience hang on every word is a delightful experience. The performances at the Fordham University theatre were outstanding, and all who could see Browning's production should be proud of their achievement.

SMERUD—The New Man. Mort, 1925, with a sequel, Satter, Copely —A Night Of.

The plays of Shakespeare, Harlequin perhaps more than others, have always been subjected to much experimentation. The director's interest is in the presentation of modern dress, every possible effort being made to improve the interpretation and production for the general public. The results are usually satisfactory, and the performance of the play has been considered one of the finest of its kind.

CAMPUS CRITIC

KINDLER LOW CONCERT

The seventh concert of the Wellesley series was given last Thursday evening by Hans Kindler, '09, and Robert Low, '92. Mr. Kindler performed a sonata by Beethoven, and his next group was a Bach Adagio and a Toccata by Frescobaldi. In his classical group, Mr. Kindler revealed a nice balance between warmth and feeling and reserve.

In his last group, which included four Spanish folk songs written by Josiél and arranged for voice by Nén, Mr. Kindler showed profound technique as well as extreme artistic interpretation and emotional expression, especially lovely. He played Beve's Flutes, also a Roumanian folk song written originally for the violin by Emeny, and the Roumanian folk song, national music, and transcribed for voice. The ensemble was also rich in variety. Miss Low's selections were somewhat more varied. The group included an air from Mozart's Don Giovanni, a Secreairy, and two pieces which had never been performed before. Miss Low sang the Sardan Fandango which is a beautiful piece of music.

The program was one of considerable interest because of the folk music so often neglected by concert artists.

COLLEGE ART ASSOCIATION

The College Art Association Traveling Exhibition is now at the Art Building. It is a group of paintings which is sponsored by the C.G. A. and then sent on a tour which includes the museum at the college which belongs to the Association. It is an admirable idea and should be particularly appreciated by those who are interested in the problems of modern art. It is unfortunate that the exhibition is a veritable poppin of a show and is definitely not to be missed.

COMMUNITY PLAYHOUSE

Wellesley Hills

Mr. G. W. Parker, producer of A Man's Duty, is a member of the Connecticut troupe, which is now in residence at the Community Playhouse. The play is a stirring and well-acted production, and should be seen by all who have an interest in the theatre.

TRAINING FOR PUBLISHING

A training course on Publishing is described in the publication What the Colleges Are Doing, a Chair of Publishings and the Book Trade "which has been established at the University of Leipzig, has already proved a success, and for the second year it has been arranged by the German publishers. A description of the course is of interest.

Students begin the course with such subjects as paper-making, paper trade, bindings, book design, and the art of reproduction. Then some related subjects, specialized markets, the various descriptions of books, classification, indexing, librarians' duties, periodicals, type, and authorship. There are also lectures on such textbooks, children's books, ancient manuscripts, specialty books such as scientific, religious, art, musical, sports, and all sorts of art productions from other cultures.

After two years of study a thesis may be presented for the degree of Doctor of Publishing.

VACATION VISIT TO MACY'S

E. H. Macy & Company invites any Wellesley girls who have applied for the Training Squad—or others who wish to know about opportunities for college students with E. H. Macy's—to visit the store during vacation. It will be more convenient for the store if all who can will come at the same time, Saturday, April 3, at 10 A.M. The group is asked to meet in Miss Shannon's office in the Training Department on the 16th floor. Since Miss Shannon would like to meet approximately how many to expect, girls planning to go are asked to sign in the list posted on the door of Room 1, Administration Building.

The Personnel Bureau has received an appeal from the District of Kaihun, China, for ten Chinese girls and ten American girls to assist in educational work among their own countrymen there. Those wishing further information may acquire it by writing to Dr. John W. Wood, at the Church Missions House, 220 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

MISS HART DESCRIBES VISIT TO ANGKOR WAT IN CAMBODIA

On Monday, March 19, Miss Miller's Fall History class that had the privilege of hearing Miss Hart describe her visit via slide to the temples of Angkor Wat in Cambodia was of special interest to the students in India where the famous temple of Angkor Wat is located.

Angkor Wat is the greatest temple in the world, its outer walls being two miles in length. It consists of a series of unaced courts. A broad causeway crosses the seven hundred foot moat, this being decorated with gigantic seven-headed serpents carved out of stone. The courts are composed of colonnaded galleries, with high columns, their corners, and each court is a higher level than the one before.

In the four courts from court to court the grand processionals of elephants which has passed through are pictured on the walls. In some of the courtyards one can see the light but allows a view of the carvings which give a beautiful and fascinating picture of the life of the past. The courts narrow toward the holy of holies, whose entrance is guarded by a terrifyingly steep flight of stairs.

The temple was originally dedicated to the Brahmanic gods, but is now a Buddhist shrine.

The rules of architecture are used for buildings of all different types. First, there are conventionalized flowers and trees of the region, making elaborate decorative patterns. Second, there are miles of dancing girls, the toranas, connected with the trade routes, by a wide variety of symbolic expression. Third, there is the representation of national epics, the Ramayana and the Mahabharata. Then comes the pictures of common life and last representations of heaven and hell, the tortures of hell being particularly graphically repre-

THE PURPLE PUP PAYS A CALL TO SCENES OF TOWN MEETING

What does the college girl know about life—nothing. What does the know of the passion and tears that flow on beyond Fiske and Homestead and the Gables of the world? This being the sentiment in Adonais might suit the moment, he went to the Wellesley Town Meeting held in Alumni Hall, Monday night, March 10. There was a taste of the real Collegiate life in the speech of the people based on the real concern for the community. He went to the Wellesley he could observe, not only that, but a cross section of—off, well, of anything.

After a few reports had been read and duly noted upon, the subject of street improvements came up. It would be well if a list of these twenty-five unimproved streets in the Ad Building were made. Those seniors with a passion for education might compile it, as it can be shown that they are the ones in their Ponds or Rolls Royces, as the case may be. Have you heard of Garden Place, for instance? If not, you do not know anything about the important lives of life. Garden Place, it seems, is not highly populated, yet, it is only 30 feet wide, and is prone to be muddy. The vital point is that it be thirty feet wide or drift it will be widened to forty feet. An ill-advised plan for 40 feet is to the show, not in the official capacity (cheers) but as a humble individual. This purpose was transacted his official position and speech, as an individual, his opinions of Garden Place, held in the Ad Building, Monday night. Here was a taste of the real Collegiate life in the present here.

Adonais—whole opinion lies in the fire and air. All opinions seem to acquire or acquire out in the great world—shut first for himself, then for his patriotic colleagues. He was pleased when the subject was changed to the School Question—and he round that the education problem turned with an even hotter flame than the common pal, than without it.

The petty grievances of the college suddenly leaned before him. The trivialities of this underestimate existence became suddenly alluring. He was glad that he knew nothing about life. As he went down the hall and had his cigarette, still unmoved by the great world—he inclined to the cheers in the hall above.

Educat or Discourses Theory of Newest Teaching Methods

“The Privilege of Teaching” was explained to the potential instructors of the younger generation by Mr. Eugene Randolph Smith of the Beaver Country Day School, on Friday, March 14, at 4:15 in Founders.

Mr. Smith was not encouraging the opportunity of securing positions soon after leaving college. Experience is necessary, and the neglected ways of getting it, such as teaching in public schools in small cities, or in private boarding schools, or by getting a fellowship position.

After the lecture, there was an exhibition of children’s work.
