THE PEROEGRINATING PRESS

ALASKAN, adorning Petersburg as a new home and shedding a sentimental tear over the stone which marked the home of his ancestors, have descended upon Wellesley and the family tree is growing with new branches. The salmon, which the Indians had depended upon for their sustenance, had deserted the region. Alaskan, who have a reputation for being strictly aloof, the people of Petersburg have been known to say, "Bring it back to California, to the Farallon Islands to the east." The transformation of Petersburg and Alaskan has been so rapid that they have already organized social events and are known to the world as "Alaskan." They are a hardy, practical people, and their new home has already made them familiar with the difficulties of living in a new place.

A matter of fact, Perry concedes a secret sympathy for sending in his comrades to come into Petersburg, not because they are entering upon the highway of life and are paying the respects and duties of their fathers. It is, however, a time for new thoughts, and the only difficulty in finding which dog was designated for whom is PERRY.

PERRY, after his trip to the mainland, was a student at Harvard in the spring of last year, and his only knowledge of the city at that time was as a visitor. He was, therefore, a stranger, and the only difficulty in finding which dog was designated for whom is PERRY.

DEBATING

For the Wellesley College News: A recent article reveals the writer's view of both Smith and Vassar as members of the Eastern Intercollegiate Debating League. It suggested the idea that debating is an extremely profitable undergraduate activity which Wellesley has neglected. It is not surprising that those who are interested in trying their argumentative and rhetorical abilities let them show themselves.

NEW YORK GLEE CLUB

Those who enjoy stepping, whether or not they have been members of a Glee Club in college, will be glad to know that there is a group of singers in New York which they may join. The Women's University Club Choir is composed of the musical instructor who gives at least one year in an accredited college. The group meets weekly for rehearsal at the Manhattan Club house, and gives two concerts a year at the Town Hall.

This Glee Club is unique in two ways:

First, it gives voice to modern composers and arrangers for their new works.

Second, it gives college women an opportunity for cultural experience in the city where one is always on the lookout and eager to try new things. For information regarding membership in the Club, write to Miss Louise Brinley, 550 West 12th St.

subscribe to about six different college newspapers. They have learned that "everybody's doing it," that the chief reason for adopting such a system is to secure the safe support of these activities with considerably less trouble than to hand the business side of the organizations, and that therefore we should do likewise. We are asked to "give it a try" and we are told that unless enough students petition against it during the summer it will be given a try next year. The summer is an excellent time in which to do this, for both those elderly summer classes or plans of the administration, as we have seen.

Before the summer with all its new interludes requires our student body and that possible schemes for fostering either some of the student paper, the question is this: How do we bring in the next year.

It is only when we are able to foster a current committee;" the act being not compulsory, all the solicitudes and all the possibilities. It is to us in new form we can only wonder, only, "Why can't the activities, if they are worth the time and thought expended on them, stand on their own feet?"

EUROPE TO SUFFER FROM DENGUE SLUMP

At a time when the United States tourist traffic should be reaching its peak, large lines are arriving with administer passengers and the present steamship companies, as a result, have been forced to make extensive reductions in rates.

Most of the big ships coming to English ports recently have had few more aboard than are usually carried during the winter season. A prominent Liverpool shipping official de- clared recently that the number of passengers arriving in Europe in most instances was 30-50% of the total for the corresponding period in previous years.

The slump is largely confined to class ships, however, while cabin and tourist third are not faring as badly.
