Riders Disrupt Paris Arms Forum

The world's attitude toward disarmament is expressed in many ways today, but the most striking exhibition of feeling was shown at 8 A.M. Monday, December 1, on the street in session in Paris. Crowds had gathered for the meeting by M. Frédéric Vidal, one of the leaders of French liberals and a member of the Senate, who had been invited to address the group. The meeting was called to order, and the discussion began with a display of strength designed to bring more attention to the danger of continued disengagement.

At 8:00 P.M. Friday and Saturday, December 3 and 5 at Philharmonic Hall, a concert by the French National Symphony Orchestra, with conductor by Georges Martin, will be served in the afternoon, with the final concert on December 6.

The Evening Post gives the next day's work at 9:00 A.M. and dinner on Saturday, December 4, at 8:00 P.M. All who desire to allow themselves the privilege of attending both concerts, may do so by applying to the secretariat of the Paris International Chamber of Commerce, 1, Quai d'Orsay, Paris, on the afternoon of December 6.

World Disarmament Argued in Debate By I. R. C. Members

At a meeting of the International Relations Club on Friday, November 27, 1964, at 7:30 P.M., an address was given in the Chamber of Commerce, by Mr. Edward G. Keating, who introduced Mr. Edward Keating, former speaker of the House of Commons, of Great Britain. Mr. Keating opened the debate with an analysis of the situation, and the general consensus of opinion in the United Nations was referred to. Mr. Keating went on to say that the situation was that the world was in a state of siege, and that the only way to save the world was to disarm.

"The United Nations is not a club of gentlemen," Mr. Keating said, "but a club of nations, and the club is in a state of siege. The members of the club have an obligation to protect the world, and the only way to protect the world is to disarm."

Students To Be Heard Soon In Recital For Two Pianos

A recital of unusual nature will take place in Bellagio Hall on December 14th of eighteen o'clock. Helen Mathison, 38, and Sarah B. Spath, 38, will give a joint piano recital. The comprehensive program includes music from all the major composers for two pianos. The program includes works by Beethoven, Schubert, Brahms, and Schumann.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Hackett and Miss B. S. Spath, members of the Music Department of the Bank of America, are the sponsors of the program.

The program begins with a recital by the students, followed by a recital of music by the students, and concludes with a recital by the students, and a final recital by the students.

Students May Tour Russia By "The Open Road" Method

The Russian Student Association has appointed an invitation to the students of America to visit Russia next summer. A hundred students will take part in the trip, with the leadership of members of the National Student Association for Educational Work. The trip will be a two-week tour of the Russian countryside, with the possibility of visiting other countries in Europe.

For information concerning the trip, please contact the Russian Student Association at The Open Road, 20 West 41st Street, New York City.

Harvard Lecturer Explains Present Manchurian Uprising

On Tuesday, December 4, 1964, at 7:30 P.M., Mr. Louis Porter, a member of the University Club, and a visiting lecturer at Harvard University, will give a lecture on the subject of the Manchurian Uprising. Mr. Porter will discuss the history and implications of the uprising, and will address questions from the audience.

The lecture is open to all members of the Harvard community, and will be held in the University Club, 125 John Harvard Road, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Hathaway Exhibits

Hathaway is on the present time showing two exhibitions of artistic interest. The first is comprised of a one-man painting by John Aiken, young artist living in Wellesley. Mr. Aiken's subjects are varied, from a series of different views of Boston and New York, to a number of European subjects. The second exhibition is a group of real numbers in pen and ink.

The second exhibition is made up of a number of very beautiful antique reprints reproduced and restored by Mr. W. H. Block, Jr., of Wellesley. Many of these have recently been exhibited at the Boston Society of Arts and Crafts. The types of prints present a wide range from one style and a very fine example, but all are from the 18th and 19th centuries. A new edition of the fine old print is being made, and the edition will be a limited edition of ten years is expected the skill.

Both exhibitions close on December 31st.

For Lack Of A Scandal

Following, in a mild way, the recentcampaign against abstinent athletes, and re-casting by way of analogy the famous phrase "Stop a thief!"—a year or two ago, we have been stitching for years for the "Wellesley "Girl." What we can sum up to void their claims, that wonderful flight of magniloquent swallows—ever since we first heard that name and the ambiguous lot of the Wellesley "Girl." It is not strange that we should be presented with something a little anew to revolutionize the emptiness of large universities. It is, however, a somewhat unusual improvisation on the subject of that other un-

Herald-Traveler Field Trip

On Tuesday, December 5th, the Program Bureau has arranged a Field Trip to the Boston Herald-Traveler. Students will have the opportunity of seeing the new quarters of the newspaper and of visiting the office and the printing departments. These activities will be included in the work of the newspaper and will enable the students to gain a better appreciation of the valuable service of the newspaper to the public. The Field Trip will be held from 12:30 to 2:30 on Tuesday, December 5th. The group will meet at the Adelphi Hotel, Long St., at 12:15. As the number of students cannot be unlimited, early application is urged and preference will be given to seniors if necessary.

Library Training Course

In visiting the Boston Public Library on November twenty-fourth, Wellesley students were interested in the training course which is offered there. Such training is important for the proper selection and use of the libraries of many large cities.

In Boston, the course continues for eight months and the class number is limited to fifteen. High school graduation is a prerequisite, but in the past three years have been represented one quarter of the number of who have graduated from college. All applications for admission to the class must pass an examination, general in character, which is given to persons who wish to enter the municipal library service.

In addition, a personal interview with the Director of Training is practically necessary.

The training combines half-days of class work with alternate days devoted to practical work. Such opportunities for experience are the distinctive advantages of the library courses, as opposed to those of library schools.

There are no tuition fees charged for the years' training, but students must remain on the library staff for at least two years after successful completion of the course. The minimum salary paid to college graduates when they complete the training period is $30.00 a week, sometimes more may be offered. Promotion and salary increases depend upon the ability of the individual and the vacancies arising on the staff.

In comparing the value of training in library school with that offered by the library, Mrs. Hariat, Director of Training said that the very best thing for a college graduate, who desires to work, was training at one of the accredited library schools, leading to a degree in library science. She pointed out that in the library schools, a corps of specialists instruct students in their particular phases of the library business, whereas in the library class, the instruction is carried on by one individual sometimes assisted by occasional lecturers. Initial salaries paid to library school graduates are usually somewhat higher than those paid to the library-training college graduates. There is, however, the certainty of immediate employment to the graduate of the library class, which cannot be assured the library school graduate.

Of the 2,700 married women employed in the United States, only about 1,000,000 hold jobs that men naturally avoid. The rest are engaged to domestic and personal service.

The Old Town Federal.

Mrs. Isabel Porter, of the Old Town Federal, this year, only one in response to a questionnaire, announced an intention to marry. The reply, however, was the final one, which apart from the usual excitement, brought the institution to its natural end. The Old Town Federal, the oldest bank in the United States, was founded in the year 1757.

COURSE WILL AID NERVOUS SPEAKERS

Public speaking at a vacation is a comparatively new field for women which has developed as they have realized the advantages that are to be gained by the presentation of personal oratory, speech, public office, the art, and consequence. For even though they may not enter politics, law or business, no college-trained woman can be sure that she will not be called upon to speak at a public or semi-public occasion. A graduate of Wellesley, for instance, who went to Cuba to teach reported that one of the first duties that confronted him was to speak to a group of several hundred people. She declared that she did not take even a one-hour course in speech, for it gave her more confidence than she would have had otherwise. It is taken for granted that the education of the modern college graduate is sufficiently bound to enable her to make an acceptable speech or a competent speech to a group of people. It is with these situations in mind that the course in "Speeches for Special Occasions" was designed by the Department of Speech.

The purpose is two-fold: first, to give opportunity, through the development of power in oral expression, for the general culture which is one of the aims of a liberal arts college; and second, to provide specific instruction in the making of actual speeches. The details of the course include the study of speech, in general, the study of the "cultural" speech (the voice modulations, movements of body, and vocal quality) that they are necessary for successful public addresses; analyzing of inflections of different accents; the consideration of the abilities that influence auditions and the kinds of reactions a speaker may get from the group of people; the analysis and criticism of addresses by successful speakers; and the composition and delivery of original speeches for specific occasions.
