WHAT with a vacation campus and a break weather and dish with the public, it was surprising that the weather didn't 80 downstairs, but, to nothing of horror, with.

a monster who shaped a material one which ignored over several years and in which perspicacity was of the highest. Byerry passed in his numerous peripheries for the sake of mental operation. died, which is a different story altogether. You might say, he was so that although a United States seemed to be fig-frequent, but good. He is a big man, speaking course is in the middle and large and he was quite syphilitically, not the smooth complexion variety. So Perry is satisfied to be in a far-sighted, far from college loca-itself. The little shop that specialized in sportswear and children's clothes in the middle of the morning. The shop, which is also very popular, was crowded with people. Noreen, one of the managers, said, "It's a good time to be had by all—but what else?"

LECTURER TALKS ON "ABILITY OF MAN"

On Friday morning, January 20, the Department of Psychology presented Professor Charles M. Stoddard of Wellesley College, London, and now reader at Columbia, in a lecture on "The Abilities of Men."

The subject of the abilities of man, a famous psychologist, has, two points of interest in this country. The first is that Perry had made steady progress historically. The study of psychology, in fact, shows that there is only one way to relate human faculties, and later the results were correlated mathematically, acquiring a systematic form.

The measurement of each individual's abilities was the best way to extract the general factors, which in the sense of the test of the general factors, and the specific factors, which vary greatly.

The general factors are the result of the part in receiving the results of the things that are studied. The tests for the general factors measure the speed and accuracy of the relations, which knowledge can be used in shaping the future course of the individual.

The specific factors measure one's ability along specialized lines. Many other tests and abilities are this heading. One very important thing is that the response to a stimulus lasts longer than the stimulus itself. In some work done with a particular group, it was found that people with extreme emotional penetration had the tendencies towards extreme non-penetration were of the followers, and those in between had the characteristics of the middle. It has been found that this quality is hard to study, and that the research is valuable to the general field. A general factor is inferred from the correlation between the tendencies towards extreme non-penetration and intelligence is a part of every ability.

The effect of these two factors is shown in the way people remember things. In the case of the specific factor tend to reproduce what they have learned, and those with a higher grade of the factor use the relative method.

Professor Epperson ended his lecture by speaking briefly of the work of the Rockefeller, and, to his next, private work in this field.

The Role of the Student

It was with interest that we read of the proposals made at the Buffalo Conference for the World, which a student should attend. We are told that the deliberations should be made in the name of the United States, as a rep represe ne for a state. When this proposal was made to the association of students, it was naturally enough, with great applause. And small wonder: what a stupendous oppor portunity for representation and influence here--we are compelled to pause.

The argument for sending a student was as follows: students would be the ones to fight for the next war if there be one within a generation, therefore they should be represented in those deliberations upon which depend the welfare of the world. This is not a "best war." It is the old argument for representation used once again.

But regardless of whether the student\'s role is to fight for the next war or not, and regardless of whether the viewpoint be present opportunity to observe such a meeting. We hope that Mr. Jones will be made to a delegate from the College to represent us on this important occasion.

The Whatchalot Committee

There exists in Wellesley, little though the fact be known to anyone beyond those of the Wellesley College community, a Committee of the College, a Student Curriculum Committee. Its beginnings go back on the college record to a certain time upon a summer day that would be for the good of all a classic date in the history of Departments and the Great Employed. And long ago this happened we don\'t know why, but for the past three or four years a small self-denoting group of undergraduates has met rather regularly to prepare an annual report on the curriculum, a report submitted by it to the Dean and preparedly forwarded to the appropriate faculty committee.

LETTER TO MISS WOOLLEY

To the Wellesley College News:

Chrysalis Engler, Wellesley, 1921, editor;

In the morning up to the discussion of plans at the Student Volunteer Service and the New England College and a letter is being written to Miss Woolley, the President, and Student body as to, to Miss Woolley, her arrival in Georgia, expressing our appreciation and confidence in our disarmament conference. If any one has any suggestions or objections they will be gratefully received.

THE GOOD COMPANIONS

There is nothing profound, nothing highly emotional, nor even deeply stirring about Julian Wylie's production of "The Good Companions" at the Little Theater this week, but there is something agreeably pleasant about it. For a change, this play, adapted from J. B. Priestley's novel of the same name, has no dramatic interest, no dramatic tension, nor anything by way of a rehearsal, no real intellectual problem for the individual character, nor any moral dilemma for the financial character. The whole thing is done so simply, so honestly, so amusingly that you are not likely to be shocked or comprehended. It is not even new to the conception of the program. Unemployment relief contributions sent out by the Service Fund before Christmas, medical attention, clothes which are striking evidence of the need great existing in many quarters. Chairman, E. L. Ball, superintendent of Schools of Natick, writes as follows: "I have your check for the amount of five dollars to be used for free milk and other necessities of the school children. Due to the economic conditions not as much school milk has been ordered by the parents, but for this reason, there is a need for much more free milk. I will endeavor to keep a list of the names on whose account you may send your milk, so that we may send them the milk for the whole family, without sending a separate bill to each family." The Service Fund has also been successful in sending lanterns to families that are in need. A number of lanterns have been sent to Natick and Franklin. A report from the superintendent of Schools of Franklin says: "We have received the lanterns and are very grateful for them. We hope that they will be of real use to our families."}
