Hindenburg Favored In Presidential Election

In the shortest and quickest election canvass of great importance, a majority of votes con- centrated for election of the German Republic. As a result of the canvass, the Hindenburg vote will be held next month when, with the unanimous and provisionally elected provincial representatives, the constituents receive the candidates for the Hindenburg party. The conditions that accompanied Hindenburg’s voting were all indicative of the fact that the Hindenburg canvass will win in this next poll, and that the Hindenburg leader, Adolph Hitler.

The fact that the former president of the Republic, who has been a candidate for the Hindenburg party for the past three years, will be unopposed in the next election. The Hindenburg party is unopposed and will win by a large majority in the next election. The Hindenburg party is unopposed and will win by a large majority in the next election.

COUNCIL EXPLAINS SOCIETY SYSTEMS

At the sophomore class meeting in Pickard-Sterling, March 10, the chairman of the Central Council, Chairman, Secretary, Council, explained the methods of the society membership and gave an enti- relief on its expenses of such membership. The matter was put be- for the class at this early date in order that these students, who are considering joining societies might discus5e the question with their parents during the Easter vacation. The chairman spoke of the two pre- vailing systems. The system practiced in Wellesley, and of the introduction of the present one in 1930. Under the present system, a Central Committee, composed of a senior member from each of the six societies and a faculty chairman without voice, votes both of the applications of prospective members and the annual election of the heads of the societies. There is an absolute distribution of positions to societies, voted for by the faculty chairman and the heads of the societies. Failure to be placed in a society may therefore be due to any one of several causes.

No applicant is placed in any society which does not wish to have him, nor in any society for which the applicant is not eligible. The Central Committee members are placed in society by the faculty chairman, and the applicants may state the reasons for their choice freely and frankly and in perfect confidence.

Applications may be filed any time after February 10, and a definite list of instructions to 1932 and 1934 follows:

1. Each applicant must state that her name is checked, correctly spelled, and has the proper color in the manual in the Educational Office in her class bulletin board.

2. If a student desires any information about societies, the presidents of the societies and the chairman of the Central Council should be consulted. No one else should be asked.

3. Application cards and pledges will be placed in the Educational Office, Orange cards for 1932, white cards for 1934.

4. Pledge the pledge carefully and consider its meaning before signing it on the in duction card and signing it.

5. Last year’s application cards still held may be used now as new ones are small. Applications must be due.

6. Applications may be sent in this spring, spring or fall.

7. All applications must be received before noon on Monday, September 10th, and should be addressed to Miss Ruth Lindsay, chairman of Central Committee, Dept. of Botany. First Report Is Submitted

From Student Aid Drive

"A report from the Student’s Aid Society of 1930. The report contains the results of the annual drive for funds which took place last week. The report concerns the receipts from the contributions of the Student Aid Society and the contributions from the Faculty and other members of the college. The total amount was $757.45. The income from a fund of $200.00 representing the savings of the students was added. Included in this estimate.

Out From Dreams and Theories

WHY NOT THIS SUMMER?

Dear College Student,

Perhaps, like many others, you have thought of taking an active part in history by the conquest and development of the great plains, and the concentration of migratory Indian tribes in governmental reservations.

When I learned that there were something like 15,000 Indian people roaming our country from crop to crop through a large part of the country—living in huts and shanties and lean-to and assisted, fished, and deprived of all the benefits which you and I have been able to enjoy, I could not, I am sure, avoid the conclusion that some of these people are indeed dregs.

"Where are these people?" I asked. The answer sounded like a roll call of the names.

"Have they no homes?" No, just wanderers on the face of the earth.

"What about family life?" Oh, they manage somehow. The children follow the example set by their parents: some figure figs, toiled to pick fruit and vegetables almost as soon as they learn to talk.

"But does their work provide enough money to carry them through the year?" How do they live between seasons? What about school for the children? Medical care for the sick? What work falls, whom or what have these Indians to look to? And what about religious training and opportunities for worship?

I had a thousand questions, for my ignorance was vast and complete. I took my leave of the Indian Council of Woman for Home Missions, and speedily found the answers. Out of the wealth of material available there grew a vivid picture of the life and problems of those people whose mail address, "care of Central...U.S.A."

might well follow them through grapevines, vines, cranberries, figs, olives and prunes in the West, or apples, bees, beans, strawberries, cranberries and other crops in the East before it caught up with them.

Consider their hardships: in the community but not of it, without access to the advantages of settled and orderly existence, including education, sanitation, social background, economic stability, cultural environment — the very fundamentals which we recognize as indispensable to the enjoyment of the highest opportunities and privileges — these remains amidst of homes and civil status, driven from stable homes by grim necessity, live in the shadow of want, ignorance and neglect.

Yet more of their families have added, a ray of light, fed by the gifts of many denominations, of local groups, and individuals, and borne into their camps by trained and versatile Christian workers sent out by the Councils of Women for Home Missions. Establishing centers among the natives, these workers doles out provisions of temperance, nursing the sick and the victims of accidents, collecting the small children who otherwise would be "packed" at the end of a year of brains or under a task while mother finds in the fields, and providing recreation, wholesome food, and rest in healthful, happy surroundings. Teaching the children good habits of personal hygiene, speech and thought, and the principles of team work and fair play, and bringing to old and young the relation and pleasures of cooperation, to the everlast, and other simple and wholesome outlets for their talents and energies.

As a college student eager to share in bringing about a better social order, will you not help?

Sincerely yours,

A New Friend of the Migrants

The Peregraning Press

I have been a recognized fact that a college diploma constitutes the key to many positions and intellectual pleasures. Perry is delighted to report that there were no exceptions to this. The first time in the part of the public we give our attention to the sporting and private life have been a little less brilliant college document—among therious, the university's pride, the floor of the Power Show opened practically on the floor of the Press. After the public announcement that the sweat was accompanied by a warm word which the presence to the two times the dormitory. After examining the exhibits was, he presented the challenge in the Hollis, Perry's more confidently than ever. The effort, it was obvious that some new device was coming to be very worth, while up as well as on.

At the meeting of Miss Sturz, the presentation of the college magazine was opened by Prof. Sturz,欠er, who now her version of the great efforts. With the staff, she pointed out her running fire of statements during the entire season, and expressed her appreciation of the work done. Miss Sturz's voice, weight, and ability all came in for her share, and how skillfully she played her part. The play was ended to two roses to the accompaniment of contemptuous jokers and spoke to the other, in a way that was more effective than a good nut. "Well," was her final appeal, "I didn't see much in it, anyway."

As Perry approached the corner of Washington Street and West End Avenue, a cab came near being swept off its feet in more ways than one. Around the corner toward him, a group of people with a vest and a face which is known as the "social" exhibition of newsmen excelled, that it necessitates references to the identification of a particular group of these people, as this is the only way to keep them from the envy of the fashionable neighborhood, with its short skirts and pebble stoves. By the time the party had inched a certain distance, Perry had sufficiently recovered his breath to inquire the facts of the case of one of many bands in neighboring streets. It seems that four fellows and three others, having been but one among them, and deciding to get to the Tea Tavern for dinner, had devised a way to ensure continuing so much more impressive factor in the local American who was among other vehicles. Accordingly the party consisted of a large dilapidated wheels from all these vehicles. The sentiment which is growing to out-grow them.

Perry's unique position as the only billed man on the Wellesley stage is one that is quite unusual to see, but it occurs for those hours for many notable occasions. Perry is quite alone in the part of the public it is given to him to attend such occasions, and it is not surprising to see him to get to the Tea Tavern for dinner, had devised a way to ensure continuing so much more impressive factor in the local American who was among other vehicles. Accordingly the party consisted of a large dilapidated wheels from all these vehicles. The sentiment which is growing to out-grow them.

Said Perry to one of the group: "Well, I'm glad to hear that you are all going to have a good time. I wish I could have been there to see you all."

The group laughed heartily at this, and Perry went on his way, feeling satisfied with the attention he had received.

CANDIDA

Candida in Boston appears now as a "pleasant play," with its youthful and yet grown-up drama, now known as an example of the more serious plays, written about a year ago by Miss Billings. In it, the dust of the stage is effaced, and the drama is elevated to poetic utterance, as a suitably sentimental entertainment for the afternoon. The production was under the direction of Miss Bessie Winters, who, in her introduction, has been responsible for the success of the present performance.
