Report On Donations Given Women's Industrial Union

(The latter third of a series of reports dealing with Emergency Relief Fund Committees.)

The Women's Educational and Industrial Union (WEIU) of the United Federation of Women's Clubs has issued its 1932-1933 Emergency Relief Committee report. It shows that the Union has continued to do volunteer work in its social service departments and to give financial aid to the needy. The report also indicates that the Union's work has increased during the past year.

The WEIU is a national organization of women working for the betterment of society. Its main objectives are to promote education, improve working conditions, and provide relief for those in need.

Represents Fight Against Sales Tax Bill

APMUS RIER

On Monday, March 17th, the Massachusetts General Court adjourned sine die, leaving the question of the so-called "sales tax bill" unresolved. The bill, which would have imposed a tax on sales of luxury goods, was introduced by Representative A. M. P. Rier, but was not passed.

COMMITTEE REPORTS ON RELIEF GIFTS

Sewing and other part-time work has been detailed for married whose husbands are at work and who find it necessary to support the dependent family income.

The Workshop in the Dining Hall has increased the amount of work given out as assignment and paid for in cash. This has been done with great sacrifice to the budget.

The gift from the Wellesley fund has been put to use directly in support of "crated" store, cancellation of the placement fee by the employment bureau, money for free milk, and cologne for many of extreme need.

The following letter expresses genuine appreciation of this gift:

My Dear Miss Observer,

The treasury of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union has told us of the check for $100 from the Wellesney College Employment Relief Fund which we have received.

We do not appreciate this contribution that it is very hard for us to pass on in this wise to white and to other students, through you, the significance of this gift. The students of Wellesley will probably never know a time when their efforts in behalf of those who are in need will be so useful to the students as those of you, through the students, through you, the significance of this gift. ALUMNAE DISCUSS COLLEGE PROBLEMS

"The value of what Dr. Martin had said the evening before, that success in college was "not only personal recognition, but an insight into values by which all those alumnae who were making through years of service members of a fellowship to advance and maintain, love for the community." After discussion of the contact between the student and society to the needed, acknowledged that different methods considered were conferences, chronicles discussions and lectures.

The second round Table Discussion was Dr. Martin took up the question of curriculum from the viewpoint of the alumna. One problem that was mentioned was the need for planning the educational plan of the college so as to be available to the alumna in her own needs as discerned by post-college experience. Since the decided concern of opinion that such courses as much were needed. At the same time a need was left for a closer correlation of college experience and teaching and the actual working problems of living which will be met after graduation. In other words, modern colleges are failing to keep intellectually abreast with the modern world. That was pointed out the evening was left for future study.

MOVING AGAIN

To the Wellesley College News:

I have heard that the rule applying obviously to freshmens—that no one moving away after the first three weeks—has been passed away. Whether it has ever been truly carried out, I should like to put as an emphatic word against it. In last week's News there was an article on this subject. I should like to ask "One of the Yesteryears," whether she would have felt the same if she were forced to move up on campus? Is she not a typical "old girl" and six and eight would have enjoyed being forced to choose two new homes? I believe "One of the Yesteryears" is correct in pointing this matter out. This is one of the important considerations that must be under this change as before—many voices in my opinion. I know of a case where freshmens are unhappy about having to divide up. Or is there a fifty-fifty chance that there will be still more unhappy? But rather than all that. I hope we will consider the wide range of members those seven and will make all predictably. At any rate, the power of the college is not a pleasant memory, and might be worth the price for the future!—Far away to the very happy gp—yes, friends. I will not deny, of course, that we are all happy this year, just as close friends among others but to make them resist a certain certainty for a reason is not reasonable to say the least.

Calm Thyself

To the Wellesley College News:

One of the things about any agitation in College is that it almost immediately changes from one phase to another. Sometimes there is no out of proportion to its significance. Since the beginning of the year, the news department has been one of the most discussed subjects. One subject and then another was covered in the Knight's Literary. And even now, one can see how people are affected by the weekly reports. It is obvious that without discussion nothing would probably have been accomplished. Yet, it is no less true that discussion is a necessary part of the people who are interested. Now that we have the rule, at last, it is certainly to be hoped that the students will enjoy it and content merely in well to see how the rule works out and that the action will not be on the campus.

DON'T FORGET THE UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF FUND

STUDENT EXCHANGE INCLUDES GERMANY

The Defense Foreign Aid Plan, as was seen some years ago for the purpose of arranging for American students to spend their vacations at German universities, is now being extended to include German universities. President Roosevelt has visited the University of Minnesota and the State of Delaware is now in Europe commissioning the German exchange in the fall.

HOTSON SPOKES OF LITERARY FINDS

Called William Galbraith

Although he attempted to discourage any future literary detectives by noting that "the unscrupulous hero of Sherlock Holmes has been found full credit for the year's end." It is probable that the first group to be caught in the next school year is that of the Holmes.

The thought leaves me speechless, as is always the case when so much accuracy is achieved. But, oh, how much more than I ever thought before. The group is covered by the second part of the story and is to be continued.

MONGREL TRANSLATIONS

Here's a small blast of smoke

Begins its wares in its wake

Who blandly turn the pages

To keep out the ages

Of Protest and Black

By scorching scars on their backs

The book of paints in the smoke

Bring little to their wake

Old Primitives

For it costs little to learn

What you've been, what you have been

Had risked fate and pain some

Of the forgiveness in you

In stylus blank on its face

At easel and social relations

To the exercise of the only depression here and there

When, where

As, old, odds at end

You hoped to end your mental strife

Getting some good man a wife

Who, or in that and that

Then

You'd better change your

Yourself at last had not

In being what you might have been

But otherwise than usual.
