COUNCIL DECIDES TO CHANGE RULING

Blue Ships Will Be Issued Only To Those Students Who Miss Written or Lab Work

PRO RULE UNCHANGED

As at recent meeting of the Academic Council, the Council determined and adopted a recommendation of the Administrative Committee which provided that no blue ship shall be issued to any student who misses either a written or a laboratory test during the term.

The recommendation was made by the Academic Council, the result of a poll taken among the students, and is being strongly supported by the faculty of the College.

The rule, as adopted by the Academic Council, is as follows:

"Blue ships shall be issued only to students who have missed either a written or a laboratory test during the term."

Out from Dreams and Theories

WHAT HAS BECOME OF DREAMS

The gods are always busy…A serious article on the subject of dreams in psychology. It was written by Dr. Jones, a well-known psychiatrist. The article discusses the various interpretations of dreams and their significance in mental health. It also explores the relationship between dreams and reality, and suggests ways to better understand and interpret one's dreams. The article is divided into several sections, each focusing on a specific aspect of dreams. The final section provides practical advice for readers who wish to improve their dream recall and analysis.

literature department was under ancient influence to extirpate a piece of grass when one student raised his hand and completed in an exaggerated tone of voice that she never knew ancient history. The professor looked flabbergasted for a minute and then exploded bitterly—'Well, if you've heard of Julius Caesar, haven't you?'

The same summer that the faculty had granted oneself to learning the colors of the chalizes in her classes. When that student walked into the class late, the professor looked up and said 'And now I am going to show you 'Sievet!" The late-comer looked frightened for a second and said hurriedly, "Oh, no, I don't mean to—a (laughing) the instructor class.)"

Then there's the story told with great relish by the students of the alumna who came back to Wellesley and asked the policeman, "Can I park my car near Shakespeare?" To which this learned member of the police force replied with grand regard, "Yes, you may." The kind of tale that makes you look at least as though it might. daily companion of the impoverished area. They did not know from where their next meal was going to come, but they would search endlessly in the crevice. The only comfort they found was with the stars, which shone brightly in the pitch-black nights. They sang to the rhythm of the moonlight, cherishing the hope that life would improve someday. But as they sang, they couldn't help thinking about the future, the uncertain path ahead. One moment, they felt hopeful, but the next, they were filled with despair. It was a cycle that repeated itself, day after day, month after month, year after year.

The photographer, who has been following this group for years, captured their essence in these powerful images. He wanted to document their struggle and bring attention to their plight. He believed that by sharing their story, others would understand the reality of poverty and work towards creating a better world. The photographs are not only a testament to the resilience of these people but also a call to action. They remind us of our shared humanity and the importance of empathy and compassion.

created in Cal.

A college degree of M.C. (Master Clinic) was designed for young college alums who made good in public life, it was suggested by President Alfred H. Upham of Miami University in his opening address to Miami students, an address in which he deplored the lack of intellectual living on the part of college graduates.

"Through all this skulking criticism directed toward higher education," Dr. Upham said, "there runs an urgent thought which must come to all of us. Are we allowing our life like young men and women who use their brains in matters of public concern?"

"To my mind the greatest reflection on our American education is the steadily small number of our graduates who continue to lead anything like an intellectual life. I am not asking for our next Newheims, but merely for people who read good books and enjoy them, who have opinions of their own and who are asked to express them, who are asked to be responsible for the welfare of their community and state and which goes further than talking about the baseball teams and taxes."

President Upham directed that the current of American college needed a thorough overhauling.

Miami this year opens its 125th year as an institution of higher learning.

FINALE—IP—Michael used by a number of European dictatorial governments of spreading the governments' doctrines through the schools and universities will not be used by the United States government. American students are to be allowed perfect freedom in discovering for themselves the good and evil of the various theories behind IRA.

This was made clear by Hugh B. Johnstone, recovery administrator, when he refused to lead official mention to a private publication designed to be sold to schools for the interpretation of the aims of the recovery program, including the IRA, the agricultural administration and other of the emergency organizations created by the Roosevelt administration.

The publication will not be banned, however, and those students wishing to use it will have the privilege of doing so.

Hollywood, Cal.—IP—Because he said he believed the film would reflect on the national college game, Kent Rivers, assistant football coach at Stanford University and former All-American fullback, last week quit his job as technical director of a football movie being filmed here.

Rivers had been employed to direct a movie designed to show a college needy in need of money hiring a great football coach and a squad of stars to pull the institution out of the red.

"I don't want to be identified with such a picture," Rivers said after six days on the job. "Such a stunt in the education rather than the truth. It would reflect on the college game."

Berkeley, Cal.—IP—Because they have been better led than many other people, Americans in the last few decades actually have developed a better physique as a nation, in the opinion of Prof. Alonzo Foy Morgan of the University of California.

It now remains, he says, to see if achievement may not have some bearing on the solution of other problems such as the prevention and cure of malignant growths, such as cancer, the control of syphilis in infectious diseases, and the prevention of the sterility and sterility in which are now the chief causes of death of middle-aged and elderly people.

New York—IP—At least eighteen of the many liberal-minded Germans who recently moved to the United States.

Three of them: Prof. Otto Stern, experimental physicist, Prof. J. Brummel, his assistant, and Prof. Ernst Stern, chemist—are to join the faculty of the Carnegie Institute of Technology at Pittsburgh, where they will divide their time between teaching and research.

Fifteen others, five of whom are still withheld to allow them to

Student Council

Most students, when they reach their senior year in college, look back upon their years of study with satisfaction. They have then completed the program that they have planned for themselves and have been awarded the degree of Bachelor of Arts by the Administration for their study. It is an occasion to celebrate, and it is natural to ask how they have succeeded in their studies, both in and out of the classroom. Here are some reflections on the nature of college achievement and on the qualities that students possess which determine their success in this endeavor.

A. A. Awards

The question which A. A. raised last month is the one which continues its entire system of awards will independently strike various colleges. A. A. was not set up with the purpose of giving college achievements, but primarily on social, moral, or on the academic accomplishments. The purpose of A. A. is to reward individuals who have made consistent and excellent contributions to the college. A. A. is not set up for any particular purpose, but for the students to enjoy their college experience and to make their own decisions about the future.

CAMPUS CRITIC
CHARLTON STRING QUARTET
The Charlton String Quartet, composed of Robert Leet, Violin; Clarence Robinson, Second violin, Jean Chouteau, Cello, and Yvonne Charlot, Piano, presented an interesting program of beautiful music at the Music Department, Wednesday afternoon.

The Quartet opened its program with the usual Haydn movements, No. 2 and No. 42. The performance was marked by a definite feeling of unity and completeness. The members of the quartet were well balanced and the ensemble of the ensemble was uniform throughout the evening.

The second movement of the Beethoven String Quartet in C major, op. 131, was beautifully played. The members of the quartet were able to maintain a high level of interpretation throughout the entire movement, and their playing was marked by a fine sense of phrasing and phrase construction.

The third movement of the quartet was the Schubert String Quintet in E flat major, D 667. The members of the quartet were able to bring out the full beauty of the music, and their playing was marked by a fine sense of phrasing and phrase construction.

The quartet concluded its program with the Beethoven String Quartet in A minor, op. 132. The members of the quartet were able to bring out the full beauty of the music, and their playing was marked by a fine sense of phrasing and phrase construction.

The quartet's performance was marked by a high level of technical skill and a fine sense of interpretation. The members of the quartet were able to bring out the full beauty of the music, and their playing was marked by a fine sense of phrasing and phrase construction.

DELEGATES PROPOSE WAR AGAINST WAR

Early in October the United States Congress adopted a War convention for three days session in New York City. A bill denouncing the League of Nations was passed in the Senate, and a resolution was adopted where a permanent organization was set up to encourage the prevention of war. The anti-League War movement was, however, not the only one that was discussed at the convention. The International Red Cross organization, for example, was discussed at some length. The Red Cross, which was founded in 1863 by the Swiss nurse Jeanne de Paris and is still headed by the Swiss nurse Jeanne de Paris, has been active in many countries, including the United States, where it has been involved in many humanitarian activities. The organization is renowned for its work in providing medical aid during times of conflict and for its efforts to promote international cooperation in the field of health care.

The delegates proposed that the United States join the League of Nations, which was established in 1919 after World War I, and that the United States should participate in the work of the League. The delegates also called for the formation of a new organization to be called the World Court, which would be established by the United States. The World Court would be an international body that would be responsible for settling disputes between nations.

The delegates also called for the establishment of a world league of nations, which would be similar to the League of Nations. The league would be an international organization that would be responsible for promoting international cooperation and for preventing conflicts between nations.

If a Girl is asked to a Princeton Prom or Down to a Yale Boat Race—See Travel Bureau

Will you travel by plane or by bus? Whether it is a week-end trip to West Point or a round-the-world cruise, you may be sure the Travel Bureau will find out all the information you need. The next such of the members of this Bureau is that you may be able to stick them with a question concerning travel and for this purpose they offer you every facility. Down at the E1 Table you have seen a desk. This is the office which knows all, sees all, and tells all about travel. For your convenience a card service has been arranged. Below the desk is a rack wherein you can see places to be filled out by prospective voyagers. They ask your name, your house, your destination, and the time you would like your information; then send it to you as soon as possibly by resident mail (this applies to the faculty, too). This year for the first time the Travel Bureau can procure but tickets and phone tickets for you, all you have to do is to order them and they will be sent to you.

Another feature of the travel service is making arrangements for special cars for any definite number going in to the Art Museum in Boston, or approximately the same face as an air train, they can obtain excursions for buses or special cars; and they can plan trips to Europe, Bermuda, or the West Indies, wherever you may want to go. Added to this service is the obtaining of information about foreign study, about week-end trips to the mountains for winter sports, or to the Cape or the North Shore for a breath of salt air.

There surely is no one who wants to drive in Chicago or to New York for some vacation. Put your request in at the Travel Bureau and these charming tickets will soon arrive and find someone who wants a message. Let the Bureau be your medium; look at its travel books on the Travel Shelf to the left of the E1 Table across from the desk. There will be posted interesting trips and travel news from all over the world. The Travel Bureau would like also to know if people would be interested in travel get-togethers where those who have travelled extensively might exchange experiences with each other and with people who are merely interested in strange places who want to see, as yet, visited them. Phone head in any suggestions you have to the members of the Travel Bureau, who are:
