went camping; so he had the most wonderful dish of three fried chicken. Mother cooked three or four very delicious concoctions, and my little sister, my little brother, cooked some other dishes which are turned out very well.

I must tell you of the market place. It is a very large tent-like structure covering some five acres of land. The floor is cement, and the roof...
to stand. We even prevailed.

Father and Mother to go

with us, and we all wore
the oldest clothes we had.
You can well imagine
Mother thought
what my aristocratic thought
of the whole business,
but she was plucky, for she humored us. After we came home, — of

Of course all the servants had gone — we all went to the kitchen and cooked
what we each liked best.
I made fudge — that being
my only accomplishment.
Dad had cooked when he

that the usual red鲱seology prevailed. There was, however,
a great many automobiles
with the members of the
"Kue Hong Fang" in them waving the Republican flag yesterday. But of course different families took
different ways of celebrating our brother from St.

John's came home for the
day. What do you suppose we did? We made mother
give all the servants that day as a holiday. Then
we took the carriage and the car to the largest Market Place in Shanghai.
And we actually bought
our vegetables etc. from
to stands, we even prevailed
father and mother to go
with us, and we all wore
the oldest clothes we had.
you can well imagine
what my aristocratic
mother thought
of the whole business,
but she was plucky, for
she humored us. After
we came home, — of
course all the servants
had gone — we all went
to the kitchen and cooked
what we each liked best.
I made fudge, — that being
my only accomplishment.
Dad had cooked when he
that the usual 'real' pentology prevailed. There was, however,
a great many automobiles
with the members of the
"Kue Nung Tang" in them
waving the Republican flag
yesterday. But of course
different families took
different ways of celebrating.
My brother from St.
John's came home for the
day. What do you suppose
we did? We made mother
give all the servants that
day as a holiday. Then
we took the carriage and
to the largest
Market Place in Shanghai.
And we actually bought
our vegetables etc. from
went camping, so he had the most wonderful dish of three fried chickens. Mother cooked three or four more delicious concoctions, and my big sister, my three brothers cooked some other dishes which all turned out very well.

I must tell you of the market place. It is a very large tent-like structure covering some five acres of land. The floor is cement, and the roof

Dearest Sada,

It has been two weeks since I last heard from you. Therefore your letter was a most welcome sight, I feel!

You must think that all the days we have here are fête days of one sort or another, for fan and drum to welcome of yesterday, you know, the 10 of October is a national holiday in China, for it was then that the revolution first began. This year there was no public parade, as last year the parade was so enthusiastically celebrated.
doors to be locked. The poor knaves therefore had to spread the cold light out in the stable. I guess they won’t steal out again.

Well, good by, and write me soon. I see the news. How do you like your position.

Love,

Daughter.
the church, we decided not to go. We had a lovely ride to the river, and on our way home, we bought some hot, freshly roasted chestnuts.

When we returned, the servants had prepared dinner which we ate with zest.

After dinner, we found out that some of the maids, put warts on some of the servants had again gone out to the theatres without permission. Dad was furious, so he ordered all the ever, because there is so much space in the air, has a certain kind of harmony which is not displeasing. Well, to get back to our holiday. After we had luncheon—which was far better than that prepared by our two cooks,—we all went out either in the motor or carriage. Any of us wanted to go to the Horse Race, but as Dad and mother are looked upon as "The Pillars"... the church, we decided not to go. We had a lovely ride to the river, and on our way home, we bought some hot, freshly roasted chestnuts.

When we returned the servants had prepared dinner which we ate with zest.

After dinner, we found out that some of the servants had again gone out to the theatres without permission. Dad was furious, so he ordered all the ever, because there is so much space in the air, has a certain rude harmony which is not displeasing. We set back to our holiday. After we had luncheon—which was far better than that prepared by our two cooks,—we all went out either in the motor or carriage. Some of us wanted to go to the Horse Race, but as Dad & Mother are looked upon as "The Pillars" of doors to be locked. The poor knaves therefore had to spend the cold night out in the stable! I guess they won't steal out again.

Well, good by, and write me soon. I wish the news how do you like your position.

Love,
Daughter.

is of some kind of black Chinese bricks. Scattered throughout under the roof are posts to support the structure. The farmers and farmers wives each pray a certain amunity for the privilege of selling their products. One can buy anything there, meat, fish, vegetables, roasted chestnuts, potatoes, & what not. Each one shouts out what he has to sell, you may well imagine the deafening human roar, which, bow-